To

more than to any other man is due the existence of the Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure. His was the idea; his was the plan; and his has been the business ability and energetic management, as organizer and president of The American Law Book Company, which have made possible the successful publication of these volumes, which are therefore respectfully dedicated to him.

I. DEFINITION.

Malicious prosecution, regarded as a remedy, is a distinctive action ex delicto for the recovery of damages to person, property, or reputation, shown to have proximately resulted from a previous civil or criminal proceeding,¹ which was commenced or continued without probable cause, but with malice, and which has terminated unsuccessfully.² Regarded as a specific tort, it is the wrong so committed.³ The term is also sometimes used as the name of the original judicial proceeding.⁴

1. Malicious prosecution is not limited to criminal suits.—Hayes v. Union Mercantile Co., 27 Mont. 264, 276, 70 Pac. 975. See also infra, IV, D, 1. But see Bear v. Marx, 63 Tex. 298, 300, where it is said that the term "malicious prosecution," as used in Tex. Rev. St. art. 302, limiting the right of a party to bring an action for malicious prosecution, refers only to criminal proceeding, and not to a prosecution as involved in a civil action. And compare Ahern v. Collins, 39 Mo. 145, 150, where it is said: "Malicious arrest ought not to be confounded with malicious prosecution. It is true that the mode of proceeding for both, previous to the change of practice in this State, would have been by an action on the case, and it is likewise true that malice and want of probable cause are necessary ingredients of both; but the word 'arrest' more properly applies to the taking of a party into custody under civil process, and the action for malicious arrest was instituted only where the plaintiff had been maliciously and without probable cause taken into custody for debt, or where there was a malicious holding of a party to bail. The essential ground of an action for malicious prosecution, on the other hand, consisted in the fact that there had been a legal prosecution against the plaintiff without reasonable or probable cause."

2. Black L. Dict.

The gist of the action is that plaintiff has been improperly made the subject of legal process to his damage. Herbener v. Crossan, 4 Pennew. (Del.) 38, 55 Atl. 223.

3. See infra, III.

It consists in maliciously setting the law in motion. Pigott Torts 287.

Elements of the tort see infra, III.

Other torts distinguished.—There is a distinction between a malicious prosecution and a malicious abuse of process. Kline v. Hibbard, 80 Hun (N. Y.) 50, 29 N. Y. Suppl. 807. The authorities upon the question of what constitutes a cause of action for abuse of process are in a state of some confusion. Frequently this action seems to have been confounded with actions for malicious prosecution, although they are essentially different. The test is whether the process has been used to accomplish some unlawful end, or to compel defendant to do some collateral thing which he could not legally be compelled to do. Docter v. Riedel, 96 Wis. 158, 71 N. W. 119, 65 Am. St. Rep. 40, 37 L. R. A. 580. As stated in Hale Torts 361, "'malicious abuse of process' is distinguished from 'malicious prosecution' in at least two respects, first, in that want of probable cause is not an essential element; and, second, that it is not essential that the original proceeding shall have terminated." Paul v. Fargo, 84 N. Y. App. Div. 9, 15, 82 N. Y. Suppl. 369. An action for malicious prosecution, and not an action for assault and false imprisonment, is the proper remedy when an arrest is made by a duly qualified officer, under process fair on its face and issued from a court of competent jurisdiction. Lisabelle v. Hubert, 23 R. I. 456, 50 Atl. 837. See Lord Mansfield's distinction in Johnstone v. Sutton, 1 T. R. 510, 544 [cited in Johnson v. Girdwood, 7 Misc. (N. Y.) 651, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 151]. See also Rich v. McInerny, 103 Ala. 345, 15 So. 663, 49 Am. St. Rep. 32; Gelzenleuchter v. Niemeyer, 64 Wis. 316, 25 N. W. 442, 54 Am. Rep. 616. "A prosecution begun in malice, without probable cause to believe that it can succeed and which finally ends in failure." Burt v. Smith, 181 N. Y. 1, 5, 73 N. E. 495.

"A prosecution instituted wilfully and purposely, to gain some advantage to the prosecutor, or through mere wantonness or carelessness, if it be at the same time wrong and unlawful within the knowledge of the actor, and without probable cause." Eggett v. Allen, 119 Wis. 625, 630, 96 N. W. 803.

"A prosecution on some charge of crime which is wilful, wanton, or reckless, or against the prosecutor's sense of duty and right, or for ends he knows or is bound to

II. NATURE OF RIGHT INFRINGED.

A. Public Policy. Public policy favors prosecutions for crimes and affords such protection to the citizen causing the prosecution of another in good faith and on reasonable grounds as is essential to public justice,⁵ without the sacrifice of the right of the individual.⁶ Free access to courts of civil justice is provided for the administration of the law of the land; and an action for malicious prosecution does not lie merely because they have been resorted to unsuccessfully.⁷

B. Secondary Character. The right infringed by malicious prosecution is not a primary, simple, or so called absolute right from the mere violation of which damage is presumed; but it is a right not to be harmed, the infringement of which is ordinarily actionable only when damages conforming to legal standard is shown to have followed.⁸ The right is not violated at peril; but it involves the duty of abstaining from wilful harm.⁹ Responsibility rests upon moral wrong or at least legal culpability.¹⁰

C. Objects of the Right. Through the development of the common-law forms of action,¹¹ the law substantive has come to a gradual recognition that the right is broader¹² than freedom of the person, for whose violation false imprisonment did not ordinarily lie,¹³ and broader than the sanctity of property, for the invasion of which in this way possessory actions are unavailing,¹⁴ and that it finally concerns the security of reputation from defamation through courts of

"A wanton prosecution or arrest, by regular process in a civil or criminal proceeding, without probable cause." Webster Int. Dict. [citing Bouvier L. Dict.].

The term "malicious prosecution" imports a causeless as well as an ill-intended prosecution. Newell Malic. Pros. § 5 [quoted in Hicks v. Brantley, 102 Ga. 264, 268, 29 S. E. 459].

In criminal cases.—Actions for malicious prosecution in criminal cases have never been favored, and a clear case must be made out of a perversion of the forms of justice to the satisfaction of private malice, and the wilful oppression of the innocent, in order to sustain them. Russell v. Chamberlain, (Ida. 1906) 85 Pac. 926; Laville v. Biguenaud, 15 La. Ann. 605. Contra, Reynolds v. Dunlop, (Kan. 1906) 84 Pac. 720. The prosecutor should stand on the footing of the most favored class of prosecutors. Taylor v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 18 Ind. App. 692, 48 N. E. 1044.

7. See infra, p. 39, note 82; p. 41, note 98. "In the present day, according to our present law, the bringing of an ordinary action, however maliciously, and however great the want of reasonable and probable cause, will not support a subsequent action for malicious prosecution." Quartz Hill Consol. Gold Min. Co. v. Eyre, 11 Q. B. D. 674, 690, 52 L. J. Q. B. 488, 49 L. T. Rep. N. S. 249, 31 Wkly. Rep. 668, per Bowen, L. J.

Stock*, 10 Watts (Pa.) 115, it was held that to sustain an action on the case for malicious prosecution, it was necessary that the party should have committed an illegal act, from which positive or implied damage ensue, but that to bring an action, although there was no ground for it, such as suing for a debt previously tendered, was not such illegal act. And see Parker v. Langley, Gilb. Cas. 163.

9. See as sustaining the above view infra, VII.

10. See infra, VI.

11. See infra, IV, D, 1.

12. Where anything is done maliciously, besides commencing a malicious or vexatious prosecution, an action for malicious prosecution will lie for the damages sustained by such act. As the holding to excessive bail (Closson v. Staples, 42 Vt. 209, 1 Am. Rep. 316), although plaintiff has a well founded cause of action, or holding to bail, when plaintiff has no cause of action, if done for the purpose of vexation (Ray v. Law, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,592, Pet. C. C. 207).

justice.¹⁵ While this progress has directly affected the whole subject, it has not entirely repealed the rule as to damages, reversed the public policy, or changed the nature of the right.¹⁶

III. ELEMENTS OF THE TORT IN GENERAL.

An action for maliciously putting the law in motion lies in all cases where there is a concurrence of the following elements:¹⁷ (1) The commencement or continuance of an original criminal or civil judicial proceeding;¹⁸ (2) its legal causation by the present defendant against plaintiff who was defendant in the original proceeding;¹⁹ (3) its bona fide termination in favor of the present plaintiff;²⁰ (4) the absence of probable cause for such proceeding;²¹ (5) the presence of malice therein;²² (6) damage conforming to legal standards resulting to plaintiff.²³

IV. THE ORIGINAL PROCEEDING.

A. Judicial Character. The essential foundation of an action for malicious prosecution is an original proceeding, judicial in character.²⁴ If extrajudicial, trespass and not case, that is to say false imprisonment and not malicious prosecution, is ordinarily regarded as the appropriate remedy.²⁵

15. Lawrence v. Hagerman, 56 Ill. 68, 8 Am. Rep. 674; Gorton v. Brown, 27 Ill. 489, 81 Am. Dec. 245; Luby v. Bennett, 111 Wis. 613, 87 N. W. 804, 87 Am. St. Rep. 997, 56 L. R. A. 261; Wade v. National Bank of Commerce, 114 Fed. 377; Hunter v. Boyd, 3 Ont. L. Rep. 183.

An action for libel is upon all fours with an action for malicious prosecution. The latter is but an aggravated form of an action for libel, as indeed the libel is sworn to before the magistrate. The cases make no distinction between them. Briggs v. Garrett, 111 Pa. St. 412, 2 Atl. 513, 56 Am. Rep. 274 [citing Chapman v. Calder, 14 Pa. St. 365; Winebiddle v. Porterfield, 9 Pa. St. 137; Travis v. Smith, 1 Pa. St. 234, 44 Am. Dec. 125; Gray v. Pentland, 2 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 23], per Paxson, J. And see Severns v. Brainard, 61 Minn. 265, 63 N. W. 477. That an action of malicious prosecution may be joined with one in slander see Bible v. Palmer, 95 Tenn. 393, 32 S. W. 249; Shepherd v. Staten, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 79, 80. Plaintiff must pursue some other remedy for the injury done him if for any reason the alleged prosecution had no existence. False imprisonment, malicious abuse of process, libel and slander, or other closely analogous actions to malicious prosecution may lie; but malicious prosecution will not lie. Cockfield v. Braveboy, 2 McMull. (S. C.) 270, 39 Am. Dec. 123.

B. Jurisdiction Whether Necessary. According to the prevailing²⁶ but not universal opinion,²⁷ it is not necessary in such an action that the court in which the proceeding was initiated should have had jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the original proceeding.

C. Criminal Prosecution — 1. NATURE OF. Any enforcement of the criminal law through courts of justice concerning a matter which will subject the accused to a prosecution,²⁸ without regard to the technical form in which the charge has been preferred,²⁹ and irrespective of the grade³⁰ of the criminal offense, is a sufficient proceeding upon which to base an action of malicious prosecution.

2. COMMENCEMENT OF. The decisions are not in accord as to what amounts to Johnson*, 6 Gray (Mass.) 246; Bixby v. Brundige, 2 Gray (Mass.) 129, 61 Am. Dec. 443].

The fact that the court had no jurisdiction does not relieve defendant from liability (Sutor v. Wood, 76 Tex. 403, 13 S. W. 321; Ward v. Sutor, 70 Tex. 343, 8 S. W. 51, 8 Am. St. Rep. 606), where the prosecution was productive of legal damage to the party proceeded against (Stone v. Stevens, 12 Conn. 219, 30 Am. Dec. 611). So also an action will lie for attacking property under a writ issued by a court without jurisdiction (Boon v. Maul, 3 N. J. L. 862), but not against a person who applies for an injunction against plaintiff in the full belief that the court had jurisdiction to grant it on the case made, if it appeared afterward that the court had not jurisdiction to grant an injunction. Mark v. Hyatt, 61 Hun (N. Y.) 325, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 885 [affirmed in 135 N. Y. 306, 31 N. E. 1099, 18 L. R. A. 275]. But there must have been a prosecution. Cooper v. Armour, 42 Fed. 215, 8 L. R. A. 47.

a commencement of a criminal prosecution which is sufficient as a foundation for such an action. It has been held that, if there was merely an arrest and discharge by a magistrate,³¹ without the filing of a complaint,³² or where a criminal complaint was made before a magistrate but not followed by the issuance of any process nor by an arrest,³³ no adequate basis has been made out.³⁴ It has also been held that an oral charge of a crime made before a magistrate,³⁵ the filing of an affidavit,³⁶ the issuance of a criminal warrant, although not placed in an officer's hands,³⁷ the arrest of an accused on a criminal complaint made before a magistrate,³⁸ or the holding and committing for the grand jury of the accused who has afterward been discharged because of failure of the grand jury to indict, or because of want of sufficient evidence,³⁹ make out the commencement of the judicial proceeding.

3. SUFFICIENCY OF PRELIMINARY STEPS. There is authority to the effect that, in order to serve as a basis for the action, the original criminal prosecution must have been upon a sufficient affidavit,⁴⁰ complaint,⁴¹ information,⁴² indictment,⁴³ or warrant;⁴⁴ and that the action cannot be maintained if the process under which plaintiff was arrested was absolutely void.⁴⁵ The weight of authority, however, is to the contrary,⁴⁶ and the general opinion is that if a person maliciously and dictment be good or bad, the plaintiff is equally subjected to the disgrace of it, and put to the same expense in defending himself against it."

47. Where the affidavit failed to charge an offense known to the law (Mask v. Rawls, 57 Miss. 270), or did not charge a crime (Streight v. Bell, 37 Ind. 550), or the affidavit on which the prosecution was based improperly charged the offense (Schattgen v. Holnback, 149 Ill. 646, 36 N. E. 969 [affirming 52 Ill. App. 54]), or was defective in not charging the pretenses to have been made concerning an existing fact (Stocking v. Howard, 73 Mo. 25); or where there was error of a magistrate in ordering an arrest on an affidavit which charged no act or offense punishable by law (Barton v. Kavanaugh, 12 La. Ann. 332), the person is liable to an action for malicious prosecution, if his affidavit is false, malice and want of probable cause being found (Navarino v. Dudrap, 66 N. J. L. 620, 50 Atl. 353). And see Harlan v. Jones, 16 Ind. App. 398, 45 N. E. 481; Bell v. Keepers, 37 Kan. 64, 14 Pac. 542; Potter v. Gjertsen, 37 Minn. 386, 34 N. W. 746; Lueck v. Heisler, 87 Wis. 644, 58 N. W. 1101; Johnson v. Daws, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,382, 5 Cranch C. C. 283. But see Krause v. Spiegel, 94 Cal. 370, 29 Pac. 707, 28 Am. St. Rep. 137, 15 L. R. A. 707; Oakley v. Tate, 118 N. C. 361, 24 S. E. 806. And compare Sweeny v. Bienville Water Supply Co., 121 Ala. 454, 25 So. 575, holding that, although the affidavit before the justice of the peace was defective, defendant is not precluded from setting up the defense of probable cause in an action against him for malicious prosecution.

48. The original prosecution may be sufficient basis for malicious prosecution even though the complaint failed to charge a criminal offense (Stancliff v. Palmeto, 18 Ind. 321; Bell v. Keepers, 37 Kan. 64, 14 Pac. 542; Stocking v. Howard, 73 Mo. 25; Matlick v. Crump, 62 Mo. App. 21; Thurber v. Eastern Bldg., etc., Assoc., 118 N. C. 129, 24 S. E. 730; Strehlow v. Pettit, 96 Wis. 22, 71 N. W. 102), a crime or misdemeanor (Crawford v. Ryan, 5 Pa. Cas. 205, 7 Atl. 745), or was defective (Parli v. Reed, 30 Kan. 534, 2 Pac. 635), or technically inaccurate (Curnow v. Kessler, 110 Mich. 10, 67 N. W. 982).

It is no defense that the alleged facts did not constitute the crime charged nor any other criminal offense. Dennis v. Ryan, 65 N. Y. 385, 22 Am. Rep. 635. Defendant cannot urge the insufficiency of the complaint on which he caused plaintiff's arrest. Minneapolis Threshing Mach. Co. v. Regier, 51 Nebr. 402, 70 N. W. 934; Anderson v. Wilson, 25 Ont. 91. Nor is it a defense if it failed to state an offense and the warrant was void (Lueck v. Heisler, 87 Wis. 644, 58 N. W. 1101); that it did not legally set out any criminal offense, plaintiff having been regularly arrested and tried upon the warrant issued against him, and discharged because of the insufficiency of such complaint (Finn v. Frink, 84 Me. 261, 24 Atl. 851, 30 Am. St. Rep. 348; Reel v. Martin, 12 Pa. Super. Ct. 340), or that the specific facts stated in such complaint do not show the offense to have been committed (Potter v. Gjertsen, 37 Minn. 386, 34 N. W. 746), or that it was not signed by the complainant (Chapman v. Dodd, 10 Minn. 350).

On collateral attack, an informal and defective complaint is sufficient. Vennum v. Huston, 38 Nebr. 293, 56 N. W. 970; Malone v. Huston, 17 Nebr. 107, 22 N. W. 231.

Misnomer of the offense is not sufficient to sustain an action if there was probable cause for the prosecution, in the form in which it was made. Bartlett v. Brown, 6 R. I. 37, 75 Am. Dec. 675.

Trespass only would lie, not case, it has been held, where the complaint showed a trespass, not a crime. Kramer v. Lott, 50 Pa. St. 495, 88 Am. Dec. 556.

49. Shaul v. Brown, 28 Iowa 37, 4 Am. Rep. 151.

The action can be maintained on an indictment, although no acquittal can be had on it (Stancliff v. Palmeto, 18 Ind. 321), or although the name of defendant did not appear on the indictment (Kline v. Shuler, 30 N. C. 484, 49 Am. Dec. 402). Nor is it a defense to the action that the prosecution was based on an information upon the affidavit of a private person, which was therefore void. Best v. Hoeffner, 39 Mo. App. 682 [following Stocking v. Howard, 73 Mo. 25].

50. An action for malicious prosecution may be maintained against the informer, where the prosecution is commenced upon information given with malicious intent, although the warrant be technically inaccurate (Randall v. Henry, 5 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 367), as where the warrant does not describe the offense with which he was charged (Ewing v. Sanford, 19 Ala. 605), or technically incorrect (Cabiness v. Martin, 15 N. C. 106), or where there is a misrecital of name in mandatory part of warrant (Blair v. Horton, 51 N. C. 543), or a want of seal on warrant (Kline v. Shuler, 30 N. C. 484, 49 Am. Dec. 402), or where the warrant was issued by one justice returnable before another in another town in the same county (Messman v. Iglensfeldt, 89 Wis. 585, 62 N. W. 522).

That defendant's oath did not, in law, authorize the magistrate to grant the warrant if defendant availed himself of it is no defense. Johnson v. Daws, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,382, 5 Cranch C. C. 283.

4. NECESSITY OF ARREST.⁵¹ There is a corresponding conflict of opinion as to whether actual interference with freedom of locomotion by arrest or imprisonment is essential to the maintenance of the action, based on a criminal prosecution. The doctrine of one group of cases is that there must be at least a technical arrest or imprisonment,⁵² and that it is not sufficient that an accusation of a criminal offense has been preferred before a magistrate,⁵³ if the accused has not been apprehended⁵⁴ or process served.⁵⁵ The better and general opinion is in accordance with the general tendency to enlarge the scope of the action,⁵⁶ that it may be maintained, although there had been no arrest or imprisonment or holding to bail.⁵⁷

D. Civil Proceeding — 1. A RECOGNIZED BASIS. Malicious prosecution is now in the United States under, if not in consequence of, the abolition of forms of action, a generic name applied conveniently alike whether the original proceeding complained of was criminal or civil,⁵⁸ and almost indifferently to the particular form of proceeding.⁵⁹ In England and Canada, however, it is based on criminal proceedings only,⁶⁰ although certain allied wrongs based on civil proceedings not actions are more or less clearly identified with it.⁶¹

2. NATURE AND FORM OF PROCEEDING — a. In General. Current actions like forcible entry and unlawful detainer proceedings,⁶² replevin,⁶³ and perhaps ejectment,⁶⁴ and extraordinary remedies,⁶⁵ like injunction,⁶⁶ and auxiliary proceed-

A corporation cannot claim immunity on the ground that its superintendent merely stated the facts to the magistrate who issued the warrant, and that it is not bound by the magistrates' deduction therefrom, where the affidavit for the warrant states that plaintiff "did feloniously steal," etc., the property described in the affidavit. *Humphreys v. ings,⁶⁷ like garnishment⁶⁸ and attachment⁶⁹ are sufficient basis for the action when the other essentials are present.

b. Attachment. That the action may be maintained for maliciously and without probable cause⁷⁰ suing out an attachment and wrongfully seizing the goods⁷¹ of the debtor is well established.⁷² Execution of an attachment bond, as required by statute, does not affect the right to sue at common law for a malicious attachment.⁷³ Neither the insufficiency of the affidavit⁷⁴ nor a previous action on the attachment bond⁷⁵ precludes the right of recovery.

c. Proceeding Other Than an Action. Civil proceedings other than actions which from their nature are likely to injure reputation or credit may be the basis of an action for malicious prosecution, subject to usual rules of practice, proceeding, and evidence,⁷⁶ although no particularized damage appears. This is true of the institution of bankruptcy proceedings,⁷⁷ or of proceedings for the winding up of a company,⁷⁸ or a partnership,⁷⁹ and inquisitions of lunacy.⁸⁰ Essentially the same principles apply to rules for contempt of court.⁸¹

3. INTERFERENCE WITH PERSON OR PROPERTY⁸² — a. Presence of. Where there has been an arrest of the person,⁸³ or seizure of property⁸⁴ in or in connection with a civil action,⁸⁵ where the damage is exceptional, peculiar, or particularized and actual,⁸⁶ malicious prosecution lies, according to the prevailing American rule, if the other essentials of the wrong be made out.

b. Absence of — (1) ENGLISH RULE. In harmony with the English view of tucky only actual damages can be recovered in a suit on the bond.

Defendant has a remedy on common-law principles aside from the remedy on the attachment bond. Preston v. Cooper, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,395, 1 Dill. 589.

Conversely the recovery in an action for malicious attachment of general damages as injury to credit and reputation does not bar an action on the attachment bond for special damages thereby provided for. Hall v. Forman, 5 Ky. L. Rep. 140.

the remedy,⁸⁷ some American authorities hold that no action will lie for merely commencing a civil action, however unfounded the suit may be,⁸⁸ in the absence of interference with person or property or of special grievance differentiated from and superadded to the ordinary expenses of the suit. not designed to and in fact do not amount to a remedy of compensation for the wrong so committed by the party who first put the law vexatiously in motion and who can be charged in malicious prosecution only after plaintiff in that action has faced the sufficient deterrent of the burden of proof as to the many elements of that tort. The prevailing rule is accordingly that the action may lie, although the original proceeding was begun by a civil summons only and the party seeking recovery was not arrested and his property was not seized,⁹¹ and he suffered no peculiar injury,⁹² but only when the want of probable cause is very palpable.⁹³

V. DEFENDANT'S CONNECTION WITH ORIGINAL PROCEEDING.⁹⁴

A. Commencement or Continuance by Defendant. It is not material to plaintiff's right of recovery whether defendant wrongfully commenced or tortiously continued⁹⁵ the original proceeding after want of probable cause had been shown therein,⁹⁶ upon the charge presented.⁹⁷

"The reason for the rule . . . seems to me to be satisfactory and in accordance with right and justice. The common law declares that for every injury there is a remedy. Especially is this so where the injury is malicious. If a man is injured in his credit and reputation, and his business lessened or broken up, it can make no difference, in his right to recover for such injury, that his person or property has not been manually seized or disturbed." *Brand v. VI. WANT OF PROBABLE CAUSE.³⁴

A. In General—1. AN ESSENTIAL ELEMENT. Want of probable cause for the original proceeding is an essential element³⁵ of the case of the party seeking recovery in an action of malicious prosecution at every stage of that proceeding.³⁶ The very foundation of the action indeed is that the previous legal proceeding was resorted to or was pursued causelessly.³⁷ When it appears that there was

An attorney is not liable to an action for malicious prosecution unless, in conducting the litigation complained of, he knew that there was no cause of action; and knew also that his client was acting solely from illegal or malicious motives; and in forming his opinion upon these matters, he has a right to act upon such information as his client imparts, and is not bound to inform himself elsewhere. *Peck v. faith of belief,⁵² fairness of statement to counsel,⁵³ or the like⁵⁴ is in question, the mens rea may be the only matter in issue. Between these self-explanatory extremes, however, there is a middle zone of cases in which the authorities are in conflict as to whether probable cause has reference to facts known or to facts in existence at the time of the commencement of the proceedings.⁵⁵ Probable cause is a state of mind, in this, that the facts are regarded from the point of view of the prosecutor. The question is not what the actual facts were but what he had reason to believe they were.⁵⁶

B. In Criminal Prosecutions — 1. IN GENERAL — a. What Law Governs. The question of probable cause identical with that of the legal right to arrest is to be determined by the law in force at the time of the arrest, and not as afterward changed or interpreted.⁵⁷

b. What Constitutes Probable Cause. In cases of criminal prosecutions, probable cause means reasonable grounds for suspicion supported by circumstances sufficiently strong in themselves to warrant a cautious⁵⁸ man in the belief⁵⁹ that the accused is guilty of the offense with which he is charged.⁶⁰ It has also

c. Guilt or Innocence of Accused. An action of malicious prosecution will not lie at the instance of a guilty party;⁶³ upon proof of actual guilt the existence of probable cause is conclusively presumed as a matter of law.⁶⁴ In many instances, however, the right of recovery does not depend upon the guilt or innocence of the party accused,⁶⁵ but upon such entire innocence of plaintiff that there was no just or reasonable ground to suspect his guilt,⁶⁶ or upon the prosecutor's justifiable belief in his guilt at the time of the prosecution.⁶⁷ Plaintiff may have been entirely innocent and yet have no cause of action,⁶⁸ if there was

66. Bell v. Percy, 27 N. C. 83. Probable cause does not depend on the guilt or innocence of plaintiff, but on appearances deduced from facts known to defendant, and information received by him and properly investigated of a character to produce in the mind of a reasonably prudent and cautious person the honest belief that the crime charged had been committed. Bruff v. Kendrick, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 468.

probable cause for the prosecution.⁶⁹ A fortiori it is not essential to the protection of the prosecutor that plaintiff should have been convicted. Actual proof of innocence by plaintiff, however, is not necessary to support the action.⁷⁰

d. Actual Commission of Crime. The existence of probable cause does not necessarily depend upon the actual commission of the original wrong charged.⁷¹ If the case shows sufficient ground for believing it to have been committed, the justification may be made out.⁷²

2. CONDUCT OR KNOWLEDGE OF PROSECUTOR — a. Knowledge — (i) BASIS OF KNOWLEDGE. The facts relied upon to constitute probable cause may be those which are within the personal knowledge of the prosecutor,⁷³ or those of which he learns from proper information derived from statements made by others,⁷⁴ or both.⁷⁵ Such information must relate to the question of guilt,⁷⁶ and must ordinarily⁷⁷ come from sources entitled to credit.⁷⁸ The test of the sufficiency of

The right to recover in an action for malicious prosecution is not based on innocence of plaintiff as to the charge for which he was prosecuted (Davie v. Wisner, 72 Ill. 262; Wilson v. King, 39 N. Y. Super. Ct. 384; Scanlan v. Cowley, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 489); nor is it decisive of the want of probable cause (Hall v. Suydam, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 83); if the circumstances be such as to induce the prosecutor to suppose the party prosecuted to be guilty (Whitehurst v. Ward, 12 Ala. 264; Chrisman v. Carney, 33 Ark. 316). He must show affirmatively that the prosecutor had no probable cause for commencing the prosecution. Angelo v. Faul, 85 Ill. 106; Lang v. De Luca, 108 La. 304, 32 So. 329; Threefoot v. Nuckols, 68 Miss. 116, 8 So. 335; Bulkeley v. Smith, 2 Duer (N. Y.) 261.

71. Ross v. Innis, 26 Ill. 259; Scanlan v. Cowley, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 489. But see Hawley v. Butler, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 490, where it was held that if no felony was committed by any one such arrest was illegal.

Taylor, 4 Taunt. 616, 13 Rev. Rep. 701. In an action for malicious prosecution of plaintiff for murder, where plaintiff's own testimony shows that he may have been guilty of manslaughter, there appears probable cause for the prosecution. Ruffner v. Hooks, 2 Pa. Super. Ct. 278, 38 Wkly. Notes Cas. 516. But where defendant in an action for malicious prosecution had no evidence that plaintiff had forged a note, the fact that defendant had received a letter from the maker, stating that the note was a forgery, and that he believed such statement, did not constitute a reasonable cause for instituting criminal proceedings against plaintiff. Hutchinson v. Wenzel, 155 Ind. 49, 56 N. E. 845.

Statements of child.—A prosecution instituted upon the apparently truthful statements of a child eleven years old, who claimed to have seen plaintiff commit the offense with which he was subsequently charged, is not without probable cause. Dwain v. Descalso, 66 Cal. 415, 5 Pac. 903.

the resulting knowledge is whether it would have justified a prudent, honest, and strong suspicion of the guilt of the accused.⁷⁹

(ii) CHARACTER OF INFORMATION. The prosecutor is not bound to verify the correctness of each item of information;⁸⁰ it is sufficient that he acted with such caution,⁸¹ impartiality,⁸² and diligence as a reasonably prudent man would have used under the circumstances to ascertain the truth of his suspicions.⁸³ When facts or circumstances put him upon inquiry⁸⁴ he will be charged with knowledge of such facts as he would have learned⁸⁵ if he or his agent authorized to investigate⁸⁶ had made a proper⁸⁷ investigation⁸⁸ into the circumstances of the case, including the character⁸⁹ and identity of the accused.⁹⁰

False test.—An instruction that the information which will justify the making of a criminal complaint against another must be of such character and obtained from such a source that business men generally of ordinary care, prudence, and discretion would feel authorized in acting thereon, is erroneous as not stating the proper test, for it confines the jury to a certain class of men of ordinary care and prudence. Clark v. Hill, 96 Ill. App. 383; Jensen v. Halstead, 61 Nebr. 249, 85 N. W. 78. But see Gallaway v. Burr, 32 Mich. 332.

Representations of others that plaintiff was guilty of the offense charged, together with plaintiff's conduct in secreting himself, justified the prosecution. Mosley v. Yearwood, 48 La. Ann. 334, 19 So. 274. But representations of a third person as to matters not tending to establish the guilt of the accused do not amount, without further investigation or inquiry, to probable cause. 89. The party causing the arrest should use reasonable diligence and efforts to learn the true character of the person accused. Hirsch v. Feeney, 83 Ill. 548, holding that if he does not such fact may be considered on trial for malicious prosecution growing out of the arrest. But see Christian v. Hanna, 58 Mo. App. 37, where it was held that the fact that the prosecutor in a former trial had, upon reliable authority that his goods had been stolen by plaintiff, instituted the prosecution without diligent inquiry as to the character of plaintiff, who was a stranger, and that it was not evidence of malice or lack of probable cause. But this does not apply as to a witness, upon whose information the prosecution was largely based, where such information was corroborated by independent circumstances, and as to part by other persons. or which consists of mere suspicion,⁹² or where the prosecutor knows of all the facts and of their inadequacy,⁹³ there is no justification for the prosecution.

(iv) TIME OF ACQUIRING KNOWLEDGE. On the one hand, it has been held that the defense of probable cause is determined only by the facts and circumstances which were known or ought to have been known⁹⁴ to the prosecutor at the time he instituted the original proceedings⁹⁵ and not by subsequently appearing facts.⁹⁶ On the other hand it has been held that subsequently acquired knowledge of facts affecting the question of plaintiff's guilt should not be excluded, and that the prosecutor may protect himself by proving any additional facts tending to show that the accused was guilty, although he may not have known of such facts when the prosecution was commenced,⁹⁷ and without reference to how or when they were discovered.⁹⁸ But when the issue concerns want of probable cause defendant is chargeable with actual or constructive knowledge with reference only to the time of causation of the original proceeding.⁹⁹

b. Belief in Guilt of Accused—(1) IN GENERAL. Except where the existence of probable cause appears as a matter of law¹ one of the necessary elements of probable cause² is the actual and honest belief by the prosecutor that the accused was guilty of the offense with which he was charged, induced and justified by such facts and circumstances as would have been sufficient to have aroused a reasonable suspicion of guilt in the mind of a cautious person.³ Mere honest belief in guilt is not sufficient.⁴ A real belief and reasonable grounds for it must concur.⁵

Pembroke*, 64 Mo. App. 263. Where it appeared that there were circumstances of a suspicious nature against defendant in the prosecution, which would amount to probable cause if unexplained, yet if these were denied and satisfactorily explained to the prosecutor before he commenced his prosecution he cannot avail himself of the defense of probable cause. Honeycut v. Freeman, 35 N. C. 320.

(II) GOOD FAITH. The prosecutor must have believed in plaintiff's guilt in good faith.⁶ If it appears that he had knowledge of facts which would have explained suspicious appearances and have exonerated the accused he cannot justify the prosecution by assertion of the circumstances indicative of guilt.⁷ If all the facts and circumstances under which he acted show that there was no probable cause for his conduct,⁸ or that his belief was groundless,⁹ or could not have been formed without gross ignorance or negligence,¹⁰ his belief in guilt is no defense.

Where one, through his own error, mistake, or negligence causes the arrest and imprisonment of an innocent man, who has given no occasion for suspicion by his own misconduct, the assurance of the complainant, however strong it may be, that the accused was guilty of the crime imputed to him, is not sufficient evidence of probable cause for such arrest. c. Acts and Admissions. While probable cause may be shown by proof of public motive¹¹ in defendant's conduct, its want may be caused to appear by the acts and admissions of the prosecutor¹² inconsistent with an honest belief in plaintiff's guilt,¹³ and showing that the law was set in motion to serve his own personal purposes.¹⁴

d. Taking Advice of Counsel—(1) HOW FAR A DEFENSE—(A) Full Defense. It is the general rule that in an action for malicious prosecution defendant may make out the complete defense of probable cause¹⁵ by showing that he submitted to proper counsel a statement conforming to legal requirements concerning the guilt of the accused; that in good faith he received advice justifying the prosecution and acted on that advice in instituting the proceedings complained of; and that if he showed these things he is entitled to immunity from damages,¹⁶ although

In case of a mistake or error, not amounting to gross negligence, he will not be liable upon the ground of want of probable cause, where acting under an honest belief of the probable guilt of the accused. McGuire v. Goodman, 31 Ill. App. 420. But, if the belief was induced alone by the gross error, mistake, or negligence, it will not amount to probable cause. Le Maistre v. Hunter, Brightly (Pa.) 494.

(B) Partial Defense. Advice of counsel is entitled to at least consideration in determining probable cause,¹⁹ but some decisions are to the effect that it is not of itself sufficient as a defense,²⁰ and is not conclusive of plaintiff's inability to prevail.²¹

(II) ELEMENTS—(A) By Whom Given—(1) PRIVATE COUNSEL. The advice to avail as a defense must have been given by a competent,²² disinterested,²³ regularly admitted and practising attorney and counselor at law²⁴ in good standing²⁵ who is not the defendant himself²⁶ but another attorney, selected in good faith.²⁷

Rhode Island.—Goldstein v. Foulkes, 19 R. I. 291, 36 Atl. 9; Bartlett v. Brown, 6 R. I. 37, 75 Am. Dec. 675.

South Dakota.—Wuest v. American Tobacco Co., 10 S. D. 394, 73 N. W. 903.

Texas.—Lenoir v. Marlin, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 376, 30 S. W. 566.

United States.—Staunton v. Goshorn, 94 Fed. 52, 36 C. C. A. 75; Coggsell v. Bohn, 43 Fed. 411; Blunk v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 38 Fed. 311.

Canada.—Fellowes v. Hutchison, 12 U. C. Q. B. 633.

17. Alabama.—Steed v. Knowles, 79 Ala. 446.

California.—Potter v. Seale, 8 Cal. 217.

Iowa.—Center v. Spring, 2 Iowa 393.

Pennsylvania.—Walter v. Sample, 25 Pa. St. 275.

The bona fide acts of a party on advice given by counsel after a full and fair statement of the facts are evidence of probable cause, however erroneous the opinion may be (Richardson v. Virtue, 2 Hun (N. Y.) 208; Hall v. Suydam, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 83), even though the facts did not warrant the advice and prosecution (Poupard v. Dumas, 105 Mich. 326, 63 N. W. 301). See infra, VI, B, 2, d, (II), (D).

18. Hicks v. Brantley, 102 Ga. 264, 29 S. E. 459; Morrow v. Carnes, 108 Ill. App. 621.

19. Hall v. Kehoe, 5 Silv. Sup. (N. Y.) 129, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 176. In some jurisdictions it is held to afford strong evidence that there was probable cause (Murphy v. Larson, 77 Ill. 172; Skidmore v. Bricker, 77 Ill. 164), and that the prosecution was not malicious (Atkinson v. Van Cleave, 25 Ind. App. 508, 57 N. E. 731; Sparling v. Conway, 75 Mo. 510 [affirming 6 Mo. App. 283]). In others defendant will not be allowed to show, as evidence of probable cause, that he consulted an attorney and obtained legal advice before taking any steps in relation to the prosecution (Collard v. Gay, 1 Tex. 494), where a statement of the facts shows want of probable cause (Shannon v. Jones, 76 Tex. 141, 13 S. W. 477); for where probable cause is shown, that of itself is sufficient as a defense irrespective of whether he consulted, or what advice he received from, an attorney (Holt v. Follett, 65 Tex. 550).

20. Hall v. Kehoe, 5 Silv. Sup. (N. Y.) 129, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 176.

It is not a complete defense.—Johnson v. Miller, 69 Iowa 562, 29 N. W. 743, 58 Am. Rep. 231; Butcher v. Hoffman, 99 Mo. App. 239, 73 S. W. 266; Brown v. McBride, 24 Misc. (N. Y.) 235, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 620; Morgan v. Duffy, 94 Tenn. 686, 30 S. W. 735.

Where defendant acts from motives of private interest and without probable cause to support the prosecution, his action under the advice of counsel will not exempt him from liability. Freeman v. Wright, 113 Ill. App. 159; Grundy v. Crescent News, etc., Co., 33 La. Ann. 974; Glascock v. Bridges, 15 La. Ann. 672.

21. Lytton v. Baird, 95 Ind. 349; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. James, 73 Tex. 12, 10 S. W. 744, 15 Am. St. Rep. 743.

In some jurisdictions it has been held that evidence that an attorney upon a full and fair representation of facts advised the prosecution does not establish the existence of probable cause. Smith v. Eastern Bldg., etc., Assoc., 116 N. C. 73, 20 S. E. 963; Ramsey v. Arrott, 64 Tex. 320. But see Lenoir v. Marlin, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 376, 30 S. W. 566; Sebastian v. Cheney, (Tex. Civ. App. 1893) 24 S. W. 970 [reversed in 86 Tex. 497, 25 S. W. 691].

23. Kansas, etc., Coal Co. v. Galloway, 71 Ark. 351, 74 S. W. 521, 100 Am. St. Rep. 79; White v. Carr, 71 Me. 555, 36 Am. Rep. 533. And see Watt v. Corey, 76 Me. 87; Adkin v. Pillen, 136 Mich. 682, 100 N. W. 176.

24. Murphy v. Larson, 77 Ill. 172; Burgett v. Burgett, 43 Ind. 78; Olmstead v. Partridge, 16 Gray (Mass.) 381; Stanton v. Hart, 27 Mich. 539.

That he was licensed is sufficient, without showing that he was learned in the law. Horne v. Sullivan, 83 Ill. 30.

25. Schattgen v. Holnback, 149 Ill. 646, 36 N. E. 969; Roy v. Goings, 112 Ill. 656; Murphy v. Larson, 77 Ill. 172; Young v. Lindstrom, 115 Ill. App. 239; Stubbs v. Mulholland, 168 Mo. 47, 67 S. W. 650.

26. Epstein v. Berkowsky, 64 Ill. App. 498.

Although defendant was himself an able lawyer it may be shown that defendant acted on the advice of counsel. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 148 Ind. 578, 46 N. E. 332.

27. See infra, VI, B, 2, d, (II), (D), (1).

(2) PUBLIC COUNSEL. Counsel for the state, as the attorney-general,²⁸ or for a subdivision of the state, as the county, district, or prosecuting attorney,²⁹ are by virtue of their standing as practising lawyers,³⁰ and of their official capacity proper, and in fact the usual persons to give such advice.

(3) UNAUTHORIZED PERSONS. The advice of unprofessional persons,³¹ not practising lawyers,³² although they may be connected with the administration of the law indirectly,³³ and although they may be magistrates³⁴ who are not authorized

United States.—Ambs v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 114 Fed. 317.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 45.

Acting county attorney.—But when the evidence shows that defendant acted on the advice of the acting county attorney, as well as the advice of the city marshal, the action cannot be sustained. Russell v. Deer, 7 Ill. App. 181.

Attorney sent by prosecuting attorney.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Pierce, 98 Ill. App. 368.

Prosecuting attorney and other counsel.—Evidence that defendant made a full and fair statement of all the facts known to him to the prosecuting attorney and his own attorney, and acted upon their advice in good faith, shows probable cause for commencing the prosecution. Workman v. Shelly, 79 Ind. 442; Thurston v. Wright, 77 Mich. 96, 43 N. W. 860; Genevey v. Edwards, 55 Minn. 88, 56 N. W. 578.

Omission to consult the district attorney previous to submitting the case to the grand jury does not affect the defense. Baldwin v. Weed, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 224.

30. One who is intemperate is not necessarily in good standing because he is state's attorney. Roy v. Goings, 112 Ill. 656.

However, defendant cannot claim protection even in California, where he has concealed facts from the magistrate which, if disclosed, would have prevented the issuance to give advice to or to act as attorney at law for an interested party³⁵ is insufficient to show probable cause or excuse the want of it.

(B) The Disclosure—(1) FULL, FAIR, AND COMPLETE. To justify by advice of counsel defendant must show that he or his prosecuting agent³⁶ truly and correctly,³⁷ fully and fairly,³⁸ and in good faith³⁹ stated to such counsel all the facts bearing upon the guilt or innocence of the accused. The making of an exaggerated,⁴⁰ misrepresented,⁴¹ incorrect statement,⁴² or the withholding of any material fact,⁴³ is inconsistent with probable cause.⁴⁴ It must appear what information was in fact imparted so that the jury may determine whether it was a full, truthful statement of all the facts.⁴⁵

(2) OF WHAT FACTS. All authorities agree that all facts of which defendant of the warrant. Cochran v. Bones, 1 Cal. App. 729, 82 Pac. 970.

Committing magistrate.—Defendant cannot excuse himself by showing that he acted under the advice of the committing magistrate. Potter v. Casterline, 41 N. J. L. 22. And it is error to allow proof of it. Rigden v. Jordan, 81 Ga. 668, 7 S. E. 857.

Justice of district court.—Evidence that defendant in making the complaint acted on the advice of a justice of a district court is admissible as tending to show that defendant acted in good faith and with probable cause. Monaghan v. Cox, 155 Mass. 487, 30 N. E. 467, 31 Am. St. Rep. 555.

35. Although the magistrate was a practicing attorney, the advice being given, not as an attorney, but as a magistrate (Marks v. Hastings, 101 Ala. 165, 13 So. 297); as legal advice in such cases, to be a justification, must be given by counsel learned in the law (Rigden v. Jordan, 81 Ga. 668, 7 S. E. 857; Sutton v. McConnell, 46 Wis. 269, 50 N. W. 414). But see Britton v. Granger, 13 Ohio Cir. Ct. 281, 7 Ohio Cir. Dec. 182, where it was held competent for defendant, a police officer, to show that after making the arrest he took the advice of an attorney at law, before making the affidavit upon which the prosecution was based.

had knowledge must be stated.⁴⁶ It has been held that these are the only ones he is required to disclose.⁴⁷ The general rule is, however, that he must also state to the counsel all facts he had reasonable grounds to believe existed at that time,⁴⁸ or all facts of which he could have ascertained by reasonable diligence,⁴⁹ or both classes of facts.⁵⁰

(c) The Advice Given. Defendant must show what advice was given him by counsel,⁵¹ if any was given,⁵² and that on the statements made by him counsel advised the prosecution⁵³ or informed him that the indictment would lie.⁵⁴

Extent of rule.—Advice of counsel, of a full and fair statement of the facts, does not cease to be a defense because the prosecutor could, by the exercise of reasonable diligence and prudence, have learned that those on whose information he acted were of bad character for truth and veracity, there being no known facts and circumstances calculated to arouse suspicion as to the truth of their statements. Jordan v. Alabama Great Southern R. Co., 81 Ala. 220, 8 So. 191.

All material facts.—It has been held that to constitute advice of counsel a defense, it is not necessary that the prosecutor should have made a full and fair disclosure of all the facts, but only of all facts known to him, or those which he could have ascertained by reasonable diligence. Motes v. Bates, 80 Ala. 382. Defendant is only required to state fully and fairly all the material facts which he knew or had reasonable ground to believe existed at the time. Johnson v. Miller, 69 Iowa 562, 29 N. W. 743, 58 Am. Rep. 231. See also McLeod v. McLeod, 73 Ala. 42; Roy v. Goings, 112 Ill. 656.

The distinction between cases which require disclosure only with reference to reasonable grounds from those which are based on due diligence is not clear. The two criteria are commonly used interchangeably as equivalents. In Iowa, however, it has been held erroneous to charge that defendant must have submitted to counsel all facts which he could have ascertained by reasonable diligence, because he was only required to state all the material facts which he knew or had reasonable ground to believe existed at the time. Johnson v. Miller, 69 Iowa 562, 29 N. W. 743, 58 Am. Rep. 231.

(D) Good Faith—(1) IN SEEKING ADVICE. The advice of counsel must have been honestly sought⁵⁵ and understandingly given;⁵⁶ but defendant has been held not to be bound in the first instance to prove good faith on his part.⁵⁷ Collusion between defendant and his counsel avoids the defense.⁵⁸ Advice resorted to in bad faith will not be allowed to operate as a cloak to hide malice.⁵⁹ But the bad faith of counsel himself and alone is not material⁶⁰ unless brought to defendant's knowledge.⁶¹

(2) IN ACTING UPON ADVICE. Defendant must show that he acted⁶² upon the opinion of such counsel in good faith,⁶³ believing it to be true.⁶⁴ If after having received such advice, he learns of other facts exculpating the accused he is not justified in proceeding upon that advice.⁶⁵

Plaintiff cannot recover on proof of malice and his own acquittal, when such evidence, acts, and conduct show probable cause. Foshay v. Ferguson, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 617. See also infra, VII, A; supra, VI, A, 2.

69. Thompson v. Richardson, 96 Ala. 488, 11 So. 728; McDonald v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 3 Ariz. 96, 21 Pac. 338.

But the mere possession of goods supposed to be stolen by another would not afford a sufficient probable cause for a prosecution against the possessor as the receiver of stolen goods, when no inquiry was made of such person nor any opportunity given of explaining how such possession was acquired. E. 1027, where a mortgage was paid before a warrant was issued for arrest of plaintiff for violating Gen. St. (1882) § 2515, providing that any person who disposes of personal property on which there is a mortgage, without the written consent of the mortgagee, and fails to pay the debt within ten days thereafter, or to deposit the amount thereof with the clerk of the court of common pleas of the county where the debtor resides, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, cannot affect the question as to want of probable the accused does not of itself show that the criminal proceedings were instituted without probable cause.⁷³

d. Admissions. An actual admission of guilt on the part of the accused,⁷⁴ but, it has been held, only when made before and not after the arrest,⁷⁵ constitutes probable cause for his arrest. Probable cause may also be shown by implied admissions of the accused;⁷⁶ waiver of a preliminary examination by the accused has generally been regarded as such an admission,⁷⁷ and as prima facie evidence of probable cause.⁷⁸

4. INFERENCE FROM RESULT—a. Action of Magistrate—(i) PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION. If the result of the preliminary examination is the discharge of the accused by the magistrate, this has been held to be prima facie,⁷⁹ but is not cause for the prosecution, although it might bear on that of malice.

73. Eagleton v. Kabrich, 66 Mo. App. 231; Fagnan v. Knox, 66 N. Y. 525.

But the arrest of a person on a criminal charge for the purpose of compelling payment of an indebtedness, and an agreement not to prosecute further upon payment of the debt, is prima facie evidence of a want of probable cause, and is conclusive, in the absence of satisfactory evidence to the contrary. See Prough v. Entriiken, 11 Pa. St. 81.

74. Cropley v. Given, 30 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 160.

75. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Hendricks, 13 Ind. App. 10, 40 N. E. 82, 41 N. E. 14.

76. But the fact that the accused moved to dismiss the complaint against him (Wheeler v. Hanson, 161 Mass. 370, 37 N. E. 382, 42 Am. St. Rep. 408), or, in an action of slander, admits the speaking of the words, but justifies on the ground that they were true (Sterling v. Adams, 3 Day (Conn.) 411), does not thereby impliedly admit probable cause.

But the presumption may be rebutted by plaintiff's own evidence showing probable cause. Plassan v. Louisiana Lottery Co., 34 La. Ann. 246; Bernar v. Dunlap, 94 Pa. St. 329.

Soundness of doctrine.—The doctrine that the discharge by a magistrate is prima facie evidence of want of probable cause seems to be founded upon Nicholson v. Coghill, 4 B. & C. 21, 10 E. C. L. 464, and the per curiam opinion in Secor v. Babcock, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 203, and upon Johnston v. Martin, 7 N. C. 248, and Bostick v. Rutherford, 11 N. C. 83. Its soundness is questioned in McRae v. Oneal, 13 N. C. 166, on the authority of Purcell v. McNamara, 1 Campb. 199, 9 East 361, 9 Rev. Rep. 578, and also by Israel v. Brooks, 23 Ill. 575.

Shifting of burden of proof.—Some authorities hold that if plaintiff proves that he was discharged by an examining magistrate, the burden of proof that there was probable cause is cast upon defendant. Whaling v. Wells, 50 La. Ann. 562 23 So. 447; Rosenkranz v. Hass, 1 Misc. (N. Y.) 220, 20 N. Y. Suppl. 880; Johnston v. Martin, 7 N. C. 248; Bernar v. Dunlap, 94 Pa. St. 329; Smith v. Ege, 52 Pa. St. 419; Williams v. Norwood, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 329. Burden of proof generally see infra, XIV, A, 3.

conclusive,⁸⁰ evidence of the want of probable cause; but the later and better opinion is that more than a mere dismissal by the magistrate must be proved,⁸¹ and that standing alone it is no evidence of want of probable cause.⁸² Per contra, if that result be unfavorable to the accused, and he be held or committed by the magistrate, this is *prima facie*⁸³ but not conclusive⁸⁴ evidence of probable cause.

(ii) FINAL JUDGMENT. When the magistrate has jurisdiction to render final judgment in the examination of a criminal charge, and is not simply a committing magistrate, when the hearing is fair, without fraud, and results in a conviction of Insufficiency of evidence as cause of discharge.—Other cases hold that in order to constitute prima facie evidence, such discharge must be for want of sufficient evidence to believe plaintiff guilty. Frost v. Holland, 75 Me. 108; Bostwick v. Rutherford, 11 N. C. 83.

Where witnesses for the defense, including defendant himself, may be examined on the hearing, the discharge of plaintiff by the examining magistrate is not per se prima facie evidence of want of probable cause. Cole v. Curtis, 16 Minn. 182.

Discharge because in the opinion of the recorder or prosecuting attorney the complaint did not set forth the offense with legal accuracy, then the discharge did not tend to prove that there was or was not probable cause. Cooney v. Chase, 81 Mich. 203, 45 N. W. 833.

Persuasive evidence of want of probable cause.—In Missouri it is held that if plaintiff is discharged by one exercising the powers of a committing magistrate, not on account of technicalities or informalities, but on an examination of the merits of the charge, such discharge would necessarily be considered persuasive evidence, of want of probable cause. Sharpe v. Johnston, 59 Mo. 557, 76 Mo. 660; Sappington v. Watson, 50 Mo. 83; Brant v. Higgins, 10 Mo. 728; Christian v. Hanna, 58 Mo. App. 37; Thomas v. Smith, 51 Mo. App. 605.

defendant, such conviction is generally,⁸⁵ but not universally,⁸⁶ regarded as conclusive upon the question of probable cause for the prosecution, although upon appeal plaintiff was acquitted.⁸⁷

b. Action of Grand Jury. The finding of an indictment by the grand jury against an accused person charged with crime is prima facie evidence of probable cause in an action for malicious prosecution,⁸⁸ but it is not conclusive,⁸⁹ and may be rebutted by proof that the indictment was obtained by false or fraudulent testimony,⁹⁰ or other improper means.⁹¹ Failure of the grand jury to indict has been variously regarded as being prima facie,⁹² not prima facie,⁹³ persuasive,⁹⁴ and not even any⁹⁵ sufficient evidence of want of probable cause.⁹⁶ It does not, however, preclude defendant from proving that plaintiff was in fact guilty of the crime charged.⁹⁷

c. Action of Court or Jury — (1) ACQUITTAL. An acquittal is merely one of the essentials of plaintiff's case, usually sheds no light on other facts and of itself,

The record of a conviction is prima facie evidence of probable cause and throws the burden of proof upon plaintiffs. Miller v. Davenport, (Iowa 1897) 73 N. W. 584. In Olson v. Neal, 63 Iowa 214, 18 N. W. 863, it was held that in a suit for malicious prosecution the record of a conviction before a justice of the peace does not conclusively establish probable cause, but is only prima facie evidence thereof. of the existence of probable cause for that proceeding. In Severance v. Judkins, 73 Me. 376, it was held that, although the conviction of a minor son of an offense may be unjust and procured by fraud and perjury, and through a conspiracy to accomplish such a purpose, an action by the father for damages occasioned thereby is not maintainable while such conviction remains unreversed.

But see Goodrich v. Warner, 21 Conn. 432. This was an action for malicious prosecution. Plaintiff was tried for the offense charged before a justice of the peace, and found guilty, whereupon he appealed to the county court, and was there tried and acquitted. It was held: (1) That, had there been no appeal from the first judgment, it would have been conclusive evidence of probable cause, and (2) that, as the result was, the conviction was not conclusive evidence of probable cause, but if the trial was fair and full, it was entitled to great consideration.

Abandonment of one charge and conviction on another.—In Labar v. Crane, 49 Mich. 561, 14 N. W. 495, in an action for maliciously prosecuting plaintiff for an assault with intent to kill, and, after the abandonment of such prosecution, instituting a second one, for assault and battery, in which plaintiff was found guilty, but subsequently acquitted on appeal, the conviction is not evidence of probable cause for the first prosecution.

New trial and subsequent nolle.—In Knight v. International, etc., R. Co., 61 Fed. 87, 9 C. C. A. 376, it was held that the conviction of plaintiff on the charge complained of was prima facie evidence of probable cause, although a new trial was granted, and a nolle subsequently entered by the state. But in Richter v. Koster, 45 Ind. 440, it was held that a finding of guilty against an accused, having been subsequently set aside, and the accused discharged upon the entry of a nolle prosequi after the granting of a new trial, is no evidence of probable cause in a subsequent action by him for malicious prosecution.

jurisdiction¹⁴ or want of prosecution,¹⁵ is of itself ordinarily no evidence of want of probable cause;¹⁶ although it might be prima facie evidence of his innocence.¹⁷ Nor is the fact that defendant abandoned,¹⁸ voluntarily discontinued,¹⁹ or suffered a dismissal to be entered²⁰ sufficient to show want of probable cause.

(iv) OTHER ACTION. Proof of the disagreement of the jury has been held to constitute evidence of probable cause.²¹ The decision of the jury that defendant shall pay costs of the prosecution is not conclusive.²²

C. In Civil Proceedings—1. IN GENERAL. Probable cause in civil proceedings is such reasons supported by such facts and circumstances as will warrant a cautious, reasonable, and prudent man in the honest belief that his action and the means taken in prosecution of it are just, legal, and proper.²³ Mutatis mutandis, Evil motive.—When plaintiff can prove circumstances attending the cessation of proceedings showing an evil motive on defendant's part in starting them, the want of probable prosecution may be prima facie evidence of want of probable cause. Nicholson v. Coghill, 4 B. & C. 21, 10 E. C. L. 464; Willans v. Taylor, 6 Bing. 183, 7 L. J. C. P. O. S. 250, 3 M. & P. 350, 31 Rev. Rep. 379, 19 E. C. L. 90 [affirmed in 2 B. & Ad. 845, 1 L. J. K. Facts and circumstances which lead to the inference that a party instituting a suit was actuated by an honest and reasonable conviction of its justice are sufficient evidence of probable cause. Besson v. Southard, 10 N. Y. 236.

Probable cause.—The following cases illustrate statements of facts which have been held to constitute probable cause in civil proceedings: Woods v. Finnell, 13 Bush (Ky.) 628 (selection of forum); Plummer v. Noble, 6 Me. 285 (sale of judgment; ignorance of death of judgment creditor); Pierce v. Thompson, 6 Pick. No. 1,824, 4 Cranch C. C. 731 (a capias ad satisfaciendum, although defendant has a good set-off).

Want of probable cause.—The following cases illustrate statements of facts which have been held not to constitute probable cause: Livingstone v. Hardie, 41 La. the same principles determine questions of probable cause in civil proceedings as in criminal.²⁴

2. ATTACHMENT PROCEEDING. Probable cause for suing out an attachment may exist, although the attachment was unauthorized.²⁵ It is sufficient that the conduct of the debtor was such as to render the suit a measure of reasonable precaution.²⁶ If it exists, there is no liability in an action for malicious prosecution.²⁷

L. 676], where Strong, J., says: "Notwithstanding what has been said in some decisions of a distinction between actions for criminal prosecution and civil suits, both classes at the present day require substantially the same essentials. Certainly an action for instituting a civil suit requires not less for its maintenance than an action for a malicious prosecution of a criminal proceeding."

26. McCullough v. Grishobber, 4 Watts & S. (Pa.) 201.

Probable cause is a belief by the attaching creditor in the existence of the facts essential to the prosecution of his attachment, founded upon such circumstances as, supposing him to be a man of ordinary caution, prudence, and judgment, were sufficient to induce this belief. Foster v. Pitts, 63 Ark. 387, 38 S. W. 1114; Kelley v. Osborn, 86 Mo. App. 239; Spengler v. Davy, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 381; Burkhart v. Jennings, 2 W. Va. 242. And to constitute it there must be an indebtedness and a ground for attachment; the absence of either is therefore absence of probable cause. Rice v. Day, 34 Nebr. 100, 51 N. W. 464.

Facts showing probable cause.—The admission by defendant in attachment to plaintiff of facts sufficient to authorize an attachment constitutes probable cause. Wise v. McNichols, 63 Mo. App. 141. So it has been held that if the agent of a non-resident creditor sent out with instructions to collect the debt is informed by a near relative of the debtor that she was about to leave the state, and by a commercial agency that she had failed in business and had sold out her stock of goods and mortgaged all her property except her residence, and was offering it for sale, these facts constitute probable cause. Baldwin v. Walker, 91 Ala. 428, 8 So. 364. Probable cause appears where the debtor gave a number of checks which were protested because he had no funds in bank to meet them, and soon after giving the checks he left the state with his family and household goods, leaving no property in the state subject to execution. Mark v. Christian, 59 S. W. 1092, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 1102. It is sufficient that the suspiciousness of attachment defendant's conduct made recourse to attachment a reasonable precaution. McCullough v. Grishobber, 4 Watts & S. (Pa.) 201.

When attachment has been sued out on two grounds, probable cause as to either will defeat the action for malicious attachment. Wise v. McNichols, 63 Mo. App. 141.

That the writ be executed by actual levy on the property is also essential. Maskell v. Barker, 99 Cal. 642, 34 Pac. 340. It is not necessary, however, that defendant should have participated in the execution of the attachment process; if he makes out the affidavit maliciously, vexatiously, and without probable cause, this will be sufficient to render him liable without proof of any further intervention on his part. Walser v. Thies, 56 Mo. 89.

That affidavit for attachment was insufficient to authorize the attachment cannot be a matter of justification or defense. Forrest v. Collier, 20 Ala. 175, 56 Am. Dec. 190.

27. Barrett v. Spaid, 70 Ill. 408 (facts held to be sufficient to constitute probable cause for attachment on ground of fraudulent conveyance of property); Grant v. Reinhart, 33 Mo. App. 74. In Leyser v. Field, 5 N. M. 356, 363, 23 Pac. 173, in an action against an attorney for maliciously issuing an attachment, it was held error to refuse to instruct the jury that defendant "had a right to act upon facts and circumstances brought to his knowledge through the usual and ordinary business channels, if he believed them to be true; and if such facts and circumstances were of such character, and came from such sources, that lawyers generally, of ordinary care, prudence, and discretion, would act upon them, under similar circumstances, believing them to be true, then such facts and circumstances, if believed by . . . [said defendant] to be true, would be probable cause."

In an action on an attachment bond the fact that the note sued on in the attachment was paid shows want of probable cause; such an inference is not necessarily drawn in an action for malicious prosecution. Dorr Cattle Co. v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 127 Iowa 153, 98 N. W. 918.

advice,²⁸ what statement of facts must be made to such counsel,²⁹ in what spirit the advice must be asked³⁰ and given³¹ and acted upon³² are substantially identical in civil cases with those which are applicable in criminal cases.³³ If the testimony shows conformity with them, probable cause is made out and defendant is relieved from responsibility for the prosecution instituted by him,³⁴ and

28. When advice of counsel is relied upon as furnishing probable cause for a proceeding so as to relieve defendant from liability for malicious prosecution, it must appear that he presented to disinterested (White v. Carr, 71 Me. 555, 36 Am. Rep. 533) and reputable legal counsel (Davis v. Baker, 88 Ill. App. 251; Newton v. Weaver, 13 R. I. 616) a proper legal statement of the facts.

29. He must make a full, correct, and honest statement of all the material facts of the case within his knowledge (Sandell v. Sherman, 107 Cal. 391, 40 Pac. 493; Dorr Cattle Co. v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 127 Iowa 153, 98 N. W. 918; Anderson v. Columbia Finance, etc., Co., 50 S. W. 40, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1790; Stone v. Swift, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 389, 16 Am. Dec. 349; Wiesinger v. Bohn, 43 Fed. 411); but advice of counsel on a full and fair statement of the material facts and information within defendant's knowledge is no defense when it appears that he kept back important facts in presenting his case to counsel (Struby-Estabrook Mercantile Co. v. Kyes, 9 Colo. App. 190, 48 Pac. 663; Willard v. Holmes, 2 Misc. (N. Y.) 303, 21 N. Y. Suppl. 998 [reversed on other grounds in 142 N. Y. 492, 37 N. E. 480]; Cuthbert v. 31. Such advice must be given by such counsel with full knowledge of all the material facts (Newton v. Weaver, 13 R. I. 616), in good faith (Phillips v. Bonham, 16 La. Ann. 387; Gould v. Gardner, 8 La. Ann. 11), before the commencement of the suit (Hull v. Smith, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 19; Blunt v. Little, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,578, 3 Mason 102).

But see Wetmore v. Mellinger, (Iowa 1883) 14 N. W. 722. And see Hogg v. Pinckney, 16 S. C. 387, where it is held that acting on advice of counsel is not in itself a defense, but is a circumstance to be considered by the jury.

That attachment plaintiff in good faith acted on the advice of counsel after a full and fair statement of all the material facts known to him constitutes a good defense to an action for malicious attachment. Some decisions consider that under these circumstances there is probable cause for suing out the writ of attachment (Farmers, etc., Tobacco Warehouse Co. v. Gibbons, 107 Ky. 611, 55 S. W. 2, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1348; Anderson v. Columbia Finance, etc., Co., 50 S. W. 40, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1790; Stone v. Swift, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 389, 16 Am. Dec. 349; Compass v. Light, 122 Mich. 86, 80 N. W. 1008; Wiesinger v. Benton Harbor First Nat. Bank, 106 Mich. 291, 64 N. W. 59; Alexander v. Harrison, 38 Mo. 258, 90 Am. Dec. 431), others that absence of malice is established (Alexander v. Harrison, 38 Mo. 258, 90 Am. Dec. 431; Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217). But the mere fact that the suit was brought in good faith to recover what the attachment plaintiff believed he was entitled to under the law does not of itself constitute a valid defense. It must further be shown that attachment plaintiff believed in the existence of the facts alleged as grounds for an attachment. A party may believe that he is entitled to collect an honest debt, and yet the means employed may be wanton and malicious. Scovill v. Glasner, 79 Mo. 449. So, where the defense is based on the fact that plaintiff in attachment acted on advice of counsel, the jury may still see from all the facts that the suit was malicious, notwithstanding the advice of counsel. Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217.

33. See supra, VI, B, 2, d.

34. Harr v. Ward, 73 Ark. 437, 84 S. W. 496; St. Pierre v. Warner, 24 R. I. 295, 53 Atl. 41.

To an action for a tort committed on property, advice of counsel is no defense unless the advice was taken and followed in good faith; and not then except as to exemplary damages. Chambers v. Upton, 34 Fed. 473.

Where liability is doubtful or depends on a construction of law, advice of counsel may be taken into consideration as bearing on probable cause in suing out an attachment.

this, it has been held, is the case no matter how erroneous³⁵ or mistaken³⁶ the advice may be.

4. INFERENCE FROM RESULT — a. Cessation of Proceeding. The voluntary dismissal³⁷ or the discontinuance³⁸ of the original action is prima facie, but not conclusive,³⁹ evidence of want of probable cause, according to the general, but not universal, opinion.⁴⁰ So also a settlement or compromise after commencement of the suit will preclude an action for malicious prosecution.⁴¹

b. Judgment or Findings. A finding or judgment for plaintiff in the original suit, according to the prevailing opinion, is conclusive⁴² evidence of probable cause, or estops defendant therein from denying the existence of probable cause,⁴³ even though reversed in a higher court,⁴⁴ until impeached;⁴⁵ but it has also

Dorr Cattle Co. v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, (Iowa 1904) 98 N. W. 918 [citing McAllister v. Johnson, 108 Iowa 42, 43, 78 N. W. 790].

35. Richardson v. Virtue, 4 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 441.

36. Hull v. Smith, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 19. But see Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217, where it was held in a suit for malicious prosecution that if the court can see that, notwithstanding the advice of counsel, it was unreasonable to believe that a ground of attachment existed, that fact of itself does not constitute probable cause.

37. Wetmore v. Mellinger, (Iowa 1883) 14 N. W. 722; Emerson v. Cochran, 111 Pa. St. 619, 4 Atl. 498. Contra, Smith v. Burrus, 106 Mo. 94, 16 S. W. 881, 27 Am. St. Rep. 329, 13 L. R. A. 59; Wise v. McNichols, 63 Mo. App. 141, dismissal of an action in attachment, where attachment was sued out upon grounds admitted by attachment defendant to attachment plaintiff to exist.

40. Cohn v. Saidel, 71 N. H. 558, 53 Atl. 800, holding that the mere fact that plaintiffs in the actions for whose prosecution damages are sought took a nonsuit therein is not sufficient to support a finding of a want of probable cause.

The mere suffering judgment of non prosequitur is not sufficient evidence to sustain the action (Roberts v. Bayles, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 47; Gorton v. De Angelis, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 413; Purton v. Honnor, 1 B. & P. 205; Sinclair v. Eldred, 4 Taunt. 7); but it may be aided by other evidence (Norrish v. Richards, 3 A. & E. 733, 1 Harr. & M. 437, 4 L. J. K. B. 254, 5 N. & M. 269, 30 E. C. L. 336).

Want of probable cause cannot be inferred from discontinuance of suit in consequence of plaintiff's failure to appear, as where two suits commenced before a justice of the peace have both gone down in consequence of the failure of plaintiff to appear on the adjourned day, and a new action is pending in a justice court for the same demand (Palmer v. Avery, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 290 [affirmed in 41 N. Y. 619]); or after judgment for plaintiff in replevin, another suit against the same defendant, involving the same issues, was discontinued pursuant to an agreement that it should abide the event of the first. Such discontinuance is not prima facie evidence that the discontinued suit was without probable cause (Brounstein v. Sahlein, 65 Hun (N. Y.) 365, 20 N. Y. Suppl. 213).

been held to be sufficient,⁴⁶ or only prima facie,⁴⁷ evidence of probable cause. That plaintiff in the suit complained of was defeated will not sustain an action without additional evidence of malice and want of probable cause in instituting it.⁴⁸

Issuing a rule nisi against a constable, in whose hands an execution has been placed, is not an adjudication that there is probable cause for suing out the same, when the petition for the rule does not truly set forth the facts, and therefore is not a defense to an action for malicious prosecution in suing out such rule. Roberts v. Cobliner, 68 Cal. 151, 8 Pac. 697), although he fails in the suit (Kemp v. Brown, 43 Fed. 391). Diligence in making inquiry.—In an action

B. Nature and Kinds — 1. WHAT CONSTITUTES. To constitute malice there must be malus animus, denoting that the party who instituted the original proceeding was actuated by wrong motives.⁵² And it is held that no distinction exists in this respect between an action for instituting a civil suit and an action for instituting a criminal prosecution.⁵³ The rule is well settled that malice may consist of any personal hatred or ill-will,⁵⁴ any improper or sinister purpose,⁵⁵ or any reckless disregard of the rights of others,⁵⁶ which is inconsistent with good for malicious prosecution, in causing the arrest of plaintiff for taking from defendant's possession grain which he had purchased at execution sale, but which he was stopped from threshing by an injunction suit, defendant cannot be charged with bad faith in not inquiring of plaintiff as to all the circumstances when he knew plaintiff was employed by his opponent in litigation. *Turner v. Malice not an act.—An instruction that malice "in its legal sense" is "any wrongful act done intentionally, without legal justification or excuse" is erroneous, as malice is not an act, but the wrongful motive which prompts the act. Garvey v. Wayson, 42 Md. 178. An instruction defining malice as not the act, but the motive which prompts it, as consisting of a bad motive, or reckless disregard of the rights of others so as to show an evil intent, and as an action based on an improper motive not necessarily presupposing hatred, ill-will, or revenge, is proper. Miles v. Walker, 66 Nebr. 728, 92 N. W. 1014.

The fact that defendant is an upright and honest man, incapable of swearing falsely, is not inconsistent with malice. Decoux v. Lieux, 33 La. Ann. 392. But see Ahrens, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Hoehner, 106 Ky. 692, 51 S. W. 194, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 299.

Belief as to liability for money mentioned in forged paper.—It is not necessary that a person making an affidavit before a magistrate of facts supposed by affiant to constitute a forgery of his name must have believed at the time that he was responsible for the payment of the money mentioned in the forged paper, in order to relieve him from liability. *Hahn v. The prosecution of a person criminally, with any other motive than that of bringing a guilty party to justice, is malicious. Krug v. Ward, 77 Ill. 603; Kendrick v. Cypert, 10 Humphr. (Tenn.) 291; Gabel v. Weissensee, 49 Tex. 131; Porter v. Martyn, (Tex. Civ. App., 1895) 32 S. W. 731; Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1. Contra, Jordan v. Alabama Great Southern R. v. Reisdorph, 49 Nebr. 529, 68 N. W. 943; Toomey v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 4 Misc. (N. Y.) 392, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 108 [affirmed in 147 N. Y. 709, 42 N. E. 726]; Morgan v. Duffy, 94 Tenn. 686, 30 S. W. 1101; especially if the claim is unfounded (Cannell v. Michel, 6 La. Ann. 577). Where defendant's own testimony showed that he had caused plaintiff's arrest for obtaining goods under false pretenses in order to coerce payment of a debt and not to vindicate public justice, the jury might properly infer malice. Ross v. Langworthy, 13 Nebr. 492, 14 N. W. 515. To the same effect see Reed v. Loosemore, 197 Pa. St. 261, 43 Atl. 20. And the same rule has been applied where the criminal law was invoked to establish rights under a contract. Whiteford v. Henthorn, 10 Ind. App. 97, 37 N. E. 419. Where a prosecution is instituted and defendant is arrested for the purpose of extorting money from him, in an action by him for malicious prosecution, he need not prove malice, as in such case the law will imply it. Prough v. Entriken, 11 Pa. St. 81. But proof that a criminal process has been made use of as a means for the collection of a debt is prima facie only and not conclusive in establishing malice. not necessarily a malicious act.⁶⁰ The mere existence of an ulterior purpose⁶¹ or personal anger and hostility toward the person proceeded against⁶² is not always inconsistent with good faith in bringing the proceedings and does not necessarily create liability therefor.⁶³

2. KINDS. Malice necessary to sustain an action for malicious prosecution may be express, actual, or as it is frequently called, malice in fact, resulting in intentional wrong.⁶⁴ Indeed malice in fact, or actual or express malice, as distinguished from malice in law, such for instance as the law presumes in actions for libel or slander,⁶⁵ is essential to the maintenance of an action for malicious prosecution; it is a fact to be found by the jury and not a fact to be established by legal presumption.⁶⁶ However, the term "legal malice" is sometimes used with reference to actions for malicious prosecutions, not as being synonymous with malice in law as referred to above, but to distinguish malice in its enlarged legal sense from malice in its more restricted popular sense;⁶⁷ and in this sense it is said that legal malice is made out by showing that the proceeding was instituted from any improper or wrongful motive, and it is not essential that actual malevolence or corrupt design be shown.⁶⁸ This enlarged conception of malice is, however, classified by other authorities as malice in fact.⁶⁹ Moreover malice may be implied in the sense that it may be inferred by the jury⁷⁰ like any other fact, from circumstances, and need not be proved by direct evidence.⁷¹ Thus it may be proved by defendant's conduct which considered as a whole is inconsistent with proper motives.⁷² So it is held that malice may be presumed not only from the total absence of probable cause,⁷³ but also from gross and culpable negligence in omitting to make suitable and reasonable inquiries.⁷⁴ On the other hand it is held that while to accuse and prosecute a person for crime without probable cause is matter of such serious consequences that malice may be inferred therefrom, but not necessarily so; the rule is otherwise with reference to an ordinary act of negligence, and unless the injury complained of was intentional, or so reckless or wanton as to indicate bad faith, malice is not to be inferred therefrom.⁷⁵

C. Inference From Want of Probable Cause⁷⁶—1. IN GENERAL. Malice and want of probable cause are both essential and distinct ingredients of a cause of action in malicious prosecution.⁷⁷ It has been held that, by proof of circumstances which establish want of probable cause, a prima facie case of malice is made out,⁷⁸ and that the burden of proof is on defendant to disprove does⁸³ infer malice, but is nevertheless not necessarily required to draw such inference.⁸⁴

2. REBUTTAL OF INFERENCE. The inference of malice from proof of want of probable cause may be rebutted by evidence showing a lawful and honest purpose,⁸⁵ or such facts as would be calculated to produce on the mind of a prudent and reasonable man a well grounded belief of the propriety of the proceedings instituted.⁸⁶

D. Inference From Result of Proceeding. The law does not presume malice merely because plaintiff has been prosecuted, acquitted,⁸⁷ and discharged,⁸⁸ or because the order of arrest has been vacated,⁸⁹ or the prosecution nolle pros'd,⁹⁰ abandoned,⁹¹ or voluntarily discontinued.⁹² Nor does the mere termination of the Compare Whitfield v. Westbrook, 40 Miss. 311.

In Missouri the rule is laid down that if want of probable cause is shown, the jury may infer malice from the facts which show the want of probable cause (Stubbs v. Mulholland, 168 Mo. 47, 67 S. W. 650; Holliday v. Sterling, 62 Mo. 321; Moore v. Sauborin, 42 Mo. 490; Callahan v. Caffarata, 39 Mo. 136; Casperson v. Sproule, 39 Mo. 39;

Brown*, 68 Mo. 627; Christian v. Hanna, 58 Mo. App. 37); and the burden then falls on defendant to show that he acted without malice (Stubbs v. Mulholland, supra; Butcher v. Hoffman, supra). In Sharpe v. Johnson, 76 Mo. 660, it was held that malice cannot be inferred from want of probable cause, but it may be inferred from the same facts which go to establish want of probable cause, and the inference is one of law.

Malice cannot be inferred from mere want of probable cause, when disproved by other circumstances. Emerson v. Cochran, 111 Pa. St. 619, 4 Atl. 498. See also Beach v. Wheeler, 24 Pa. St. 212. Malice will not be implied from the want of probable cause, where defendant is a man of high reputation, and humane disposition, and nothing induces the belief that he had any cause to prompt him to injure plaintiff. Digard v. Michaud, 9 Rob. (La.) 387.

suit, complained of as malicious, in favor of plaintiff in the suit for malicious prosecution, raise such presumption.⁹³

E. Effect of Advice of Counsel. Where probable cause is shown by sufficient proof of advice of counsel conforming to the requirements of the law, questions as to malice ordinarily become immaterial because in most jurisdictions a full defense to an action for malicious prosecution has thus been made out.⁹⁴ But where such advice falls short of showing probable cause⁹⁵ defendant, to negative and rebut implied but not express malice,⁹⁶ may prove that he had consulted counsel learned in the law⁹⁷ concerning a legal principle involved in the issues;⁹⁸ upon a full and fair statement of all the facts⁹⁹ within his knowledge or which with due diligence he might have known;¹ and that thereupon such attorney advised the prosecution;² and that defendant acted in such prosecution

Evidence of advice of counsel as showing malice.—The fact that the city attorney advised that the ordinance under which plaintiff was arrested was void is not evidence of malice. James v. Sweet, 125 Mich. 132, 84 N. W. 61.

Declarations of attorney as evidence of malice.—Declarations of plaintiff's attorney in a trover suit, not made in plaintiff's presence, nor brought home to him in any way, are inadmissible to show malice in bringing such suit. Farrar v. Brackett, 85 Ga. 463, 12 S. E. 686.

97. See cases cited infra, this note.

Advice of person not attorney at law.—The fact that in commencing the prosecution defendant acted upon the advice of a person who was not a counselor or attorney at law is incompetent to disprove malice. McCullough v. Rice, 59 Ind. 580; Burgett v. Burgett, 43 Ind. 78 (advice of a justice of the peace, after fully and fairly stating the case to him); Straus v. Young, 36 Md. 246 (advice of a magistrate); Olmstead v. Partridge, 16 Gray. (Mass.) 381; Breitmesser v. Stier, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 80 (advice of detective at a police station, specially empowered by the mayor to inquire into such cases, a person too of experience in criminal matters, although not learned in the law). Compare Cook v. Proskey, 138 Fed. 273, 70 C. C. A. 563.

That defendant had consulted the family physician, who from the description of plaintiff's action was of the opinion that she was insane, has been held admissible to rebut the inference of malice in an action for malicious prosecution in causing the arrest and imprisonment of plaintiff upon a charge of insanity. Griswold v. Griswold, 143 Cal. 617, 77 Pac. 672.

Evidence in rebuttal.—That the person consulted had no sign displayed as an attorney is admissible in rebuttal. Atkinson v. Van Cleave, 25 Ind. App. 508, 57 N. E. 731.

The fact that two justices of the peace issued an order of attachment which was unjust, illegal, and offensive does not, in all cases, conduce to show that the party or his attorney might not have procured the order maliciously. Wood v. Weir, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 544.

Consultation of counsel with county attorney.—Evidence of a witness who had been consulted as counsel by defendant, with relation to his having submitted the matter to the county attorney, has been held to be properly excluded, as immaterial. Kletzing v. Armstrong, 119 Iowa 505, 93 N. W. 500.

Instructions by prosecuting attorney.—It is not malicious prosecution for one to prefer charges against a person to the prosecuting attorney, and follow his instructions in laying the matter before the grand jury. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Wallin, 71 Ark. 422, 75 S. W. 477.

A letter of the prosecuting attorney, authorizing the commencement of the prosecuon such advice³ in good faith.⁴ Such evidence not amounting to proof of probable cause may operate strongly,⁵ but is not conclusive to show that defendant acted without malice.⁶

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 70.

In a prosecution for perjury defendant has no ground of action for want of probable cause for the prosecution, no matter how malicious and unfounded it may have been, until such prosecution is ended by his acquittal or discharge. McBean v. Ritchie, 18 Ill. 114.

Attachment proceedings.—According to what is believed to be the weight of authority, an action will not lie for a malicious attachment until a termination of the attachment suit in favor of defendant therein. Rea v. Lewis, Minor (Ala.) 382; Wall v. Toomey,

In Michigan it is held that a motion to dissolve an attachment need not precede the bringing of the suit for malicious attachment; but that if the motion to dissolve is made, the attachment defendant will have to wait until the termination of that proceeding before bringing suit; and that a motion to dissolve afterward made does not affect the suit once instituted. Cadwell v. Corey, 91 Mich. 335, 51 N. W. 888 [citing Brand v. Hinchman, 68 Mich. 590, 36 N. W. 664, 13 Am. St. Rep. 362]. Termination of suit by payment of plaintiff's demands and costs, it has been held, will not necessarily bar an action for malicious attachment, inasmuch as the interests of the party imperatively require that his property shall be released from the wrongful attachment without delay. Brand v. Hinchman, 68 Mich. 590, 36 N. W. 664, 13 Am. St. Rep. 362; Fortman v. Rottier, 8 Ohio St. 548, 70 Am. Dec. 606. To the same effect see Spaids v. Barrett, 57 Ill. 289, 11 Am. Rep. 10, where it was held that an action for malicious attachment might be brought where defendant in attachment paid the amount claimed in the writ to save his property from total ruin. That attachment defendant entered special bail to dissolve the attachment and confessed judgment for a smaller amount than claimed is no defense to the action. Foster v. Sweeny, 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 386.

The declaration must show that the suit complained of has been brought to an end the same as in a case of malicious prosecution of a criminal proceeding, and for the same reason, viz., that the party might recover in his action for malicious prosecution, and yet be guilty of and afterward convicted of the original charge. Bonney v. King, 103 Ill. App. 601 [affirmed in 201 Ill. 47, 66 N. E. 377].

2. EXCEPTION TO RULE. An exception to the rule just stated¹⁴ has been enforced where the proceedings complained of were *ex parte*¹⁵ and plaintiff had no opportunity of being heard,¹⁶ as in cases of malicious attachment.¹⁷

B. Mode of Termination — 1. IN GENERAL. Any mode of termination is sufficient which constitutes a bona fide and final disposition on the merits¹⁸ of the particular case by the proper judicial officer or body,¹⁹ or which amounts to such a cessation of proceedings as to render them incapable of being revived.²⁰

2. JUDGMENT OR ACQUITTAL — a. In General. A verdict and judgment are not essential to the maintenance of the action.²¹ A criminal prosecution has sufficiently terminated in this sense if plaintiff has been acquitted.²²

b. Effect of Appeal. It has been decided that the rendition of a judgment²³

17. A number of cases hold that if a civil suit is maliciously prosecuted, especially the swearing out of a false attachment without probable cause, it is not necessary in order to maintain an action to recover therefor that the suit should have ended, or that the attachment must have been discharged or otherwise terminated in favor of defendant in the original suit (Alsop v. Lidden, 130 Ala. 548, 30 So. 401; Page v. Cushing, 38 Me. 523; Zinn v. Rice, 154 Mass. 1, 27 N. E. 772, 12 L. R. A. 288; Caldwell v. Corey, 91 Mich. 335, 51 N. W. 888; *Brand v. Termination by lapse of a year from declaration in a malicious arrest see Cameron v. Fergusson, 30 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 318.

That no formal order of discharge is necessary see Potter v. Casterline, 41 N. J. L. 22. Compare Rutherford v. Dyer, (Ala. 1906) 40 So. 974. In this case the prosecution having been instituted before a justice, a transcript of the proceedings before the justice showed that, the cause coming on for hearing, it was ordered and adjudged that the prosecution as to plaintiff be dismissed, on motion of counsel representing the state to dismiss on the ground that plaintiff was a minor and acted under instructions of her mother. It was held that an objection that the transcript did not show that the charge had been judicially investigated and the prosecution ended was without merit.

for plaintiff after appeal,²⁴ if not while the appeal is pending,²⁵ is sufficient basis for the action.

3. DISMISSAL OR DISCHARGE. It is a sufficient termination of the original proceeding to serve as a basis for an action of malicious prosecution that plaintiff was discharged, or the original proceeding was dismissed at a preliminary hearing,²⁶ or before trial,²⁷ as upon an abandonment of the proceedings;²⁸ that the grand

Dismissal by the county court of a case on appeal from a justice's judgment of conviction terminates the prosecution within the rule requiring a prosecution to end by an acquittal in order to entitle accused to maintain an action for malicious prosecution. Evans v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 105 Va. 72, 53 S. E. 3.

25. An action for malicious prosecution cannot be maintained when the proceedings, under which the arrest complained of had been made, were not terminated, but an appeal was pending. Reynolds v. De Geer, 13 Ill. App. 113; Nebenzahl v. Townsend, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 353. Compare Howell v. Edwards, 30 N. C. 516. But in Marks v. Townsend, 97 N. Y. 590, however, it was held that when a party has a final judgment on trial, the prosecution is so far terminated that he may sue for malicious prosecution. If an appeal from the judgment be pending when he brings his action, he simply takes the risk of an adverse decision on the appeal, which will defeat such action.

Although the right to petition for a new trial on statutory grounds continues for a year from the time of the entry of the judgment, the action will lie at any time after entry of final judgment in the court of last resort in the action claimed to have been malicious. Foster v. Denison, 19 R. I. 351, 36 Atl. 93.

Before mandate carried into effect.—Where a decree for complainant on a bill in chancery brought in the circuit court was reversed by the court of appeals, with a mandate directing the circuit court to dismiss the bill, it was held that this was not such a final adjudication and determination of the suit as would authorize defendant to bring an action for malicious prosecution before the mandate was carried into effect. Spring v. Besore, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 551. But otherwise where it has been judicially determined that the arrest was illegal and defendant entitled to his discharge, as the appeal does not change his status and the warrant cannot be revived.

Staying action for malicious prosecution.—It seems that the appeal from the judgment may furnish a reason for staying the trial of the action for malicious prosecution until the decision of the appeal. Marks v. Townsend, 97 N. Y. 590.

But, although one arrested upon a criminal warrant be discharged by the magistrate, yet if the prosecutor, with due diligence, follows up the prosecution, and carries it on in a court having jurisdiction to try the case upon its merits, this is in effect a continuation of the original prosecution. Hartshorn v. Smith, 104 Ga. 235, 30 S. E. 666.

Discharge by a justice (Porter v. Martyn, (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 32 S. W. 731), with consent of the prosecutor (Welch v. Cheek, 115 N. C. 310, 20 S. E. 460), or for failure of the prosecutor to give security for costs (Casebeer v. Rice, 18 Nebr. 203, 24 N. W. 693).

Discharge from bail or imprisonment.—Ingram v. Root, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 238, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 858; Rice v. Ponder, 29 N. C. 390; Murray v. Lackey, 6 N. C. 368. In Bacon v. Townsend, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 426, in an action for malicious prosecution in preferring a criminal complaint against plaintiff, evidence that a recognizance had been taken from the plaintiff, and that an indorsement had subsequently been made upon the affidavits taken by the police magistrate, in these words, "Bail discharged, April 20, 1843," and that an entry to the same effect was made in the book of minutes kept by the clerk of the criminal court, is not sufficient proof that there was an end of the criminal prosecution, before the commencement of the suit. But in Hyde v. Greuch, 62 Md. 577, in an action for malicious prosecution in procuring a peace warrant, it was held that the release of the party on giving surety to keep the peace, although not technically a termination of the proceeding, entitled him to sue.

jury failed to indict;²⁹ or that the indictment has been quashed.³⁰ When the original proceeding, however, has been terminated by the consent³¹ or the procurement³² of plaintiff, or the dismissal or discharge is merely technical,³³ or has been improperly obtained,³⁴ no foundation has been laid for the action on the case. So it is held that a dismissal of a suit on a stipulation signed by both parties providing that each party shall pay his own costs³⁵ or at plaintiff's costs³⁶

And see Von Koehring v. Witte, 15 Tex. Civ. App. 646, 40 S. W. 63.

No information filed.—An order by a court in a criminal case that, the prosecuting attorney having filed "reasons therefor, he have leave not to file an information," is a final order and an end of the prosecution. Spalding v. Lowe, 56 Mich. 366, 23 N. W. 46.

Quashal as to one of two offenses charged.—Defendant filed an affidavit charging plaintiff and others with blackmailing with intent to extort money, and H was held to answer at the common pleas. Defendant appeared before the grand jury, which returned an indictment for the offense and also an indictment against plaintiff for assault. The indictment for blackmailing was quashed and plaintiff began an action against defendant for damages for malicious prosecution while the indictment for assault was still pending. 33. Marks v. Townsend, 97 N. Y. 590.

There must be a legal termination to support the action. The mere fact that the accused was discharged from the recognizance entered into by him at the time of his arrest (Bacon v. Townsend, 2 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 120), or striking a cause from the docket, on motion of the states' attorney, with leave to reinstate the same (Blalock v. Randall, 76 Ill. 224), or an unauthorized discharge (Hill v. Egan, 160 Pa. St. 119, 28 Atl. 646), or discharging an injunction (Wood v. Laycock, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 192), or the dismissal of a prosecution in a justice's court for the purpose of commencing it in a district court (Schippel v. Norton, 38 Kan. 567, 16 Pac. 804. And see Lancaster v. McKay, 103 Ky. 610, 45 S. W. 887), is not such legal termination of the prosecution as will permit an action to lie for malicious prosecution. A discharge under an act for not bringing on the trial of an indictment at the term in which issue is joined, or at the term after, operates only as a discharge of the accused from imprisonment or from his recognizance and not from the indictment or the legal consequences of his crime. *Apgar v. is a sufficient termination thereof in defendant's favor to enable him to maintain the action.

4. NOLLE PROSEQUI. There are authorities holding that an action of malicious prosecution will not lie on the entry of a nolle prosequi.³⁷ The greater weight of authority, however, is that it is a sufficient termination of the prosecution to authorize defendant to sue for malicious prosecution,³⁸ when entered with the consent of the court,³⁹ for reasons other than an irregularity or informality in the indictment,⁴⁰ and when not entered at the instance or with the consent of defendant.⁴¹

5. HABEAS CORPUS. The discharge on habeas corpus of one who has been committed to await the action of the grand jury is not such a termination of the prosecution as will enable the accused to maintain an action for malicious prosecution.⁴²

IX. DAMAGES.⁴³

A. An Essential Element. The original theory as to malicious prosecution was in large measure determined by the law adjective;⁴⁴ the common-law remedy was the one appropriate to cases in which damages were indirect and consequential, and not direct or necessary, and in which they must almost invariably have been proved and were not presumed.⁴⁵ The early law substantive was that plaintiff could recover no damages unless he had clearly proved that he had sustained any.⁴⁶ Later extensions of the principles and changes in the form of the action⁴⁷ have left the substance of this original rule in force, although not without question⁴⁸ or exception;⁴⁹ that is to say, one of the ordinary essentials of plaintiff's case is complementary rather than special damages or particularized injury conforming to legal standards.⁵⁰

In Massachusetts.—"The entry of nolle prosequi by the district attorney of his own motion, followed by a discharge of the accused party by the court, may be such a termination of the prosecution as will enable the party to maintain an action for malicious prosecution. . . . But our cases uniformly hold that, where a nolle prosequi is entered by the procurement of the party prosecuted, or by his consent, or by way of compromise, such party cannot have an action for malicious prosecution." *Langford v. 47. See supra, II, A-C; IV, D, 3.

B. Compensatory Damages—1. ELEMENTS. The party injured is entitled to adequate compensation covering all the elements of the particular injury.⁵¹

48. There is grave doubt whether this rule survives; for example when the original proceeding constituted an imputation upon the character (Clerk & L. Torts 502), or upon the credit (Pollock Torts, *p. 266. And see Quartz Hill Consol. Gold Min. Co. v. Eyre, 11 Q. B. D. 674, 691, 52 L. J. Q. B. 488, 49 L. T. Rep. N. S. 249, 31 Wkly. Rep. 668, per Bowen, L. J.). And although damages are by no means always presumed in actions for libel and slander, it was held, by Marshall, J., in Wisconsin that in an action for malicious prosecution where damages are necessarily inferable from the facts alleged, a statement of such facts sufficiently states the damages. Luby v. Bennett, 111 Wis. 613, 627, 87 N. W. 804, 87 Am. St. Rep. 897, 56 L. R. A. 261. And in Enright v. Gibson, 119 Ill. App. 411 [affirmed in 219 Ill. 550, 76 N. E. 689], it was held that proof of false imprisonment and malicious prosecution for alleged larceny is proof of actual damage.

49. Malicious prosecution lies in some cases in which damages are naturally presumed; as in cases of arrest of person on some theory, as in cases of trespass vi et armis; and in cases of seizure of property, as in cases of trespass de bonis asportatis. So where an attachment writ is levied and sued out maliciously and without probable cause the law will presume some injury to have resulted, and award at least nominal damages. Dorr Cattle Co. v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 127 Iowa 153, 98 N. W. 918. And so where plaintiff has been imprisoned, the law will presume damage. Garrison v. Pearce, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 255.

Ohio.—Springer v. Wise, 2 Disn. 391.

Texas.—Johnson v. King, 64 Tex. 226.

Arrest or special grievance.—Allgor v. Stillwell, 6 N. J. L. 166.

Where plaintiff has not been deprived of his property or his liberty, or his reputation attacked, he is entitled to damages only for the loss of time and reasonable expenses incurred in the defense of the action beyond reasonable costs. Closson v. Staples, 42 Vt. 309, 1 Am. Rep. 316. See also infra, text and note 53.

51. Alabama.—Marshall v. Betner, 17 Ala. 832.

Illinois.—Lawrence v. Hagerman, 56 Ill. 68, 8 Am. Rep. 674.

Indiana.—Fisher v. Hamilton, 49 Ind. 341, holding that every circumstance of the act of arrest and prosecution, and also every act by which plaintiff was injuriously affected, not only in his person, but also in his individual happiness and peace of mind, may be considered by the jury in assessing damages, but not circumstances and acts not directly connected with the arrest.

Iowa.—Pratt v. Hampe, 114 Iowa 237, 86 N. W. 292; Moffatt v. Fisher, 47 Iowa 473, deprivation of use of property.

Kansas.—Bauer v. Clay, 8 Kan. 580, for all injuries resulting to plaintiff from his wrongful imprisonment.

Kentucky.—Woods v. Fennell, 13 Bush 628; Pettit v. Mercer, 8 B. Mon. 51.

Massachusetts.—Wheeler v. Hanson, 161 Mass. 370, 37 N. E. 382, 42 Am. St. Rep. 408, damages accruing after the date of the writ in a criminal case.

New York.—Brown v. McIntyre, 43 Barb. 344; Toomey v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 4 Misc. 392, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 108 [affirmed in 147 N. Y. 709, 42 N. E. 726], substantial damages.

Ohio.—Newark Coal Co. v. Upson, 40 Ohio St. 17, deprivation of use of property, coal lands.

Texas.—Tynberg v. Cohen, (Civ. App. 1893) 24 S. W. 314.

Double damages.—Under the Pennsylvania act of 1705 see Campbell v. Finney, 3 Watts (Pa.) 84.

Probable cause for the proceeding is a good defense (Jarrett v. Higbee, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 546; Candler v. Petit, 2 Hall (N. Y.) 341), but would not be complete unless it shows probable cause for the whole charge (Boogher v. Bryant, 86 Mo. 42; Candler v. Petit, supra), and that defendant had a good cause of action to recover possession of personal property does not justify criminal proceedings and prevent recovery for their malicious prosecution. McCullough v. Rice, 59 Ind. 580.

Damages not recoverable.—Acts of an officer in serving a warrant in taking plaintiff out of bed at one o'clock at night, carrying him to a lock-up in a patrol wagon with intoxicated people, and placing him in a cell not sufficiently warmed, etc., were within his authority under the process, and hence no recovery could be had therefor against the prosecutor in an action for malicious prosecu-

Such elements⁵² of damage include loss of time,⁵³ peril to life and liberty,⁵⁴ injury to fame, reputation,⁵⁵ character,⁵⁶ and health,⁵⁷ mental suffering,⁵⁸ general impair-tion. Laing v. Mitten, 185 Mass. 233, 70 N. E. 128.

52. In Hamilton v. Smith, 39 Mich. 222, it is said that the elements of damage are the expenses plaintiff incurred about the prosecution complained of, his loss of time, his deprivation of liberty and the loss of the society of his family, the injury to his fame, personal mortification and the smart and injury of the malicious arts and acts and oppression of defendant. And see Wilson v. Bowen, 64 Mich. 133, 31 N. W. 81.

The elements of damage are classified by Holt, C. J., as: (1) Damages to a man's fame, as if the matter whereof he is accused be scandalous; (2) where a man is put in danger to lose his life or limb or property; (3) damage to a man's property, as where he is forced to expend money in necessary charges, to acquit himself of the crime; and (4) any special damage. Savile v. Roberts, 1 Ld. Raym. 374, 1 Salk. 13, 3 Salk. 16.

53. Ruth v. St. Louis Transit Co., 98 Mo. App. 1, 71 S. W. 1055; Johnson v. McDaniel, 5 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 717, 7 Ohio N. P. 467; Barnett v. Reed, 51 Pa. St. 190, 88 Am. Dec. 574; Amb's v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 114 Fed. 317. But not for loss of time after he was discharged by reason of his inability to find other employment. Cooper v. Seyoc, 104 Mo. App. 414, 79 S. W. 751.

Loss of time in preparing his defense and in attending court were not allowed to be considered in Osborn v. Moore, 12 La. Ann. 714, in the eye of the law, the expense of a suit which a party incurs as a general rule, being considered as covered by taxed costs. Compare cases cited infra, IX, B, 2, text and note 65.

54. Lavender v. Hudgens, 32 Ark. 763; Savile v. Roberts, 1 Ld. Raym. 374, 1 Salk. 13, 3 Salk. 16. Contra, Kansas, etc., Coal Co. v. Galloway, 71 Ark. 351, 74 S. W. 521, 100 Am. St. Rep. 79.

It is proper to take into consideration his arrest and imprisonment, the character of the accusation preferred, his arraignment and trial, and all circumstances of aggravation attending it (Anderson v. Callaway, 2 Houst. (Del.) 324), as well as the conditions surrounding the imprisonment (Spear v. Hiles, 67 Wis. 350, 30 N. W. 506, where plaintiff, who was arrested along with his wife, and confined in jail, was while in jail kept separate from her).

Damages for the imprisonment on the warrant may be recovered, although an action for false imprisonment would have been barred by the statute of limitation. Graves v. Dawson, 133 Mass. 419. But the jury ought not, in determining the amount of damages, to take into consideration facts establishing against some of defendants a case of false imprisonment, which constitute a distinct cause of action and for which they might be liable in another suit. Carpenter v. Sheldon, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 77.

Injury to feelings.—Mental suffering, although not arising directly from bodily suffering, is an element of damage. McKinley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 44 Iowa 314, 24 Am. Rep. 748. In an action for malicious prosecution it was not error to permit plaintiff to show that on his arrest at his home his mother fainted or was prostrated by the shock, and that plaintiff thereby suffered distress of mind. Flam v. Lee, 116 Iowa 289, 90 N. W. 70, 93 Am. St. Rep. 242; Parkhurst v. Masteller, 57 Iowa 474, 10 N. W. 864; Wheeler v. Hanson, 161 Mass. 370, 37 N. E. 382, 42 Am. St. Rep. 408; *Harris v. P. 467; Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1.

Partnership.—But the injury to the private feelings of partners (in a partnership action) cannot be inquired into. Donnell v. Jones, 13 Ala. 490, 48 Am. Dec. 59.

Indignity suffered.—Wheeler v. Hanson, 161 Mass. 370, 37 N. E. 382, 42 Am. St. Rep. 408.

Deprivation of the society of one's family.—Killebrew v. Carlisle, 97 Ala. 535, 12 So. 167.

Personal mortification and the smart and injury of the malicious arts and acts and oppression of defendant. Hamilton v. Smith, 39 Mich. 222.

Shame and humiliation.—Willard v. Holmes, 2 Misc. (N. Y.) 303, 21 N. Y. Suppl. 998 [reversed on other grounds in 142 N. Y. 492, 37 N. E. 480].

ment of social and mercantile standing;⁵⁹ actual loss and injury to property;⁶⁰ interest, and credit;⁶¹ decrease in earning capacity;⁶² and all losses sustained in business.⁶³ Such damages must be the direct, natural, and proximate result of the former suit.⁶⁴

2. EXPENSES AND COUNSEL FEES. Expenses incurred or paid about the original proceeding by plaintiff⁶⁵ and attorney's fees which have been incurred by him,⁶⁶

59. Willard v. Holmes, 2 Misc. (N. Y.) 303, 21 N. Y. Suppl. 998 [reversed on other grounds in 142 N. Y. 492, 37 N. E. 480].

60. Barnett v. Reed, 51 Pa. St. 190, 88 Am. Dec. 574. So where in an action for malicious prosecution of a trover suit by taking possession of a sawmill, plaintiff can plead and recover both the general damages caused by the taking and also the rent of the mill during the time he was deprived of its possession. Farrar v. Brackett, 86 Ga. 463, 12 S. E. 686.

Injuries to land, caused by a trespass thereon in taking possession of personality, constitute a proper element of damages. Brown v. Master, 104 Ala. 451, 16 So. 443.

61. Goldsmith v. Picard, 27 Ala. 142; Wheeler v. Hanson, 161 Mass. 370, 37 N. E. 382, 42 Am. St. Rep. 408.

Injuries caused by information given to commercial agencies that the property had been attached, or publication of such fact in newspapers are not elements of damage, where it is not shown that plaintiff in attachment was connected with such publication or furnished the information to the commercial agencies. Maskell v. Barker, 99 Cal. 642, 34 Pac. 340.

62. Wheeler v. Hanson, 161 Mass. 370, 37 N. E. 382, 42 Am. St. Rep. 408.

63. Magner v. Renk, 65 Wis. 364, 27 N. W. 26.

But a partnership can only recover injury to partnership trade or business. Donnell v. Jones, 13 Ala. 490, 48 Am. Dec. 59, injury to the private feelings of the partners cannot be inquired into.

Profits in business, lost as the direct consequence of wrongful seizure and detention of property, as far as ascertainable, have been held recoverable on part of plaintiff as actual damages (British, etc., Steamship Nav. Co. v. Sibley, 27 La. Ann. 191; Goebel v. Hough, 26 Minn. 252, 2 N. W. 847), where such property was valuable for present use (Hough v. Dickinson, 58 Mich. 89, 24 N. W. 809; Elder v. Frevert, 18 Nev. 446, 5 Pac. 69), especially where defendant had notice that the levy would probably interrupt plaintiff's business (Wilson v. Manning, (Tex. Civ. App. 1896) 35 S. W. 1079). But the more general opinion is that such profits are not recoverable as an element of actual damage (see Roach v. Brannon, 57 Miss. 490; Kirbs v. Provine, 78 Tex. 353, 14 S. W. 849; and infra, note 72), being too remote, uncertain, speculative and too much a matter of conjecture to form the basis of a recovery (Lowenstein v. Monroe, 55 Iowa 82, 7 N. W. 406; Watts v. Shropshire, 12 La. Ann. 797; Casper v. Klippen, 61 Minn. 353, 63 N. W. 737, 52 Am. St.

Rep. 604; Braunsdorf v. Fellner, 76 Wis. 1, 45 N. W. 97; Kennedy v. Meacham, 18 Fed. 312), as the field of inquiry thus opened is too broad (Zinn v. Rice, 161 Mass. 571, 37 N. E. 747), and evidence of such probable profits is not material on the question of actual damage (Sweeny v. Bienville Water Supply Co., 121 Ala. 454, 25 So. 575; Miller v. Jannett, 63 Tex. 82).

Loss of employment caused by an arrest may be shown as special damage. Stoecker v. Nathanson, 5 Nebr. (Unoff.) 435, 98 N. W. 1061, 70 L. R. A. 667.

64. O'Neill v. Johnson, 53 Minn. 439, 55 N. W. 601, 39 Am. St. Rep. 615.

Too remote.—That by reason of the finding of an indictment against plaintiff, it caused plaintiff's wife to become sick, nervous, insane, and utterly helpless is too remote. Hampton v. Jones, 58 Iowa 317, 12 N. W. 276. And see Fletcher v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 109 Mich. 363, 67 N. W. 330.

Where a writ of ne exeat is sued out without just cause, defendant may recover only for direct primary loss sustained. Burnap v. Wight, 14 Ill. 301.

65. Delaware.—Anderson v. Callaway, 2 Houst. 324.

Georgia.—Slater v. Kimbro, 91 Ga. 217, 18 S. E. 296, 44 Am. St. Rep. 19.

Indiana.—Whitesell v. Study, (App. 1906) 76 N. E. 1010, damages sustained in the defense of the original suit, in excess of the taxable costs.

Kentucky.—Woods v. Finnell, 13 Bush 628.

Massachusetts.—Wheeler v. Hanson, 161 Mass. 370, 37 N. E. 382, 42 Am. St. Rep. 408.

New York.—Fagnan v. Knox, 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 41.

Pennsylvania.—Barnett v. Reed, 51 Pa. St. 190, 88 Am. Dec. 574.

West Virginia.—Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 155.

66. Smith v. Bell, 91 Ky. 655, 25 S. W. 752; Bonesteel v. Bonesteel, 30 Wis. 511.

If plaintiff has become liable for such fees in defending such prosecution, but which has not been paid (Walker v. Pittman, 108 Ind. 341, 9 N. E. 175; Ziegler v. Powell, 54 Ind. 173), or where it has been paid by another for plaintiff (Krug v. Ward, 77 Ill. 603) evidence thereof is competent.

By statute in some states attorney's fees are provided for in action for malicious prosecutions. Killebrew v. Carlisle, 97 Ala. 535, 12 So. 167; Farrar v. Brackett, 86 Ga. 463, 12 S. E. 686; Krug v. Ward, 77 Ill. 603; Ziegler v. Powell, 51 Ind. 173; Connelly v.

if reasonable and necessary,⁶⁷ so far as they are shown to have been an actual and proximate consequence of the act complained of,⁶⁸ are items of damage which may be awarded plaintiff⁶⁹ to the extent of their proved value.⁷⁰

C. Exemplary Damages. In an action for malicious prosecution plaintiff is not limited to compensatory damages⁷¹ but may also recover exemplary damages⁷²

White, 122 Iowa 391, 98 N. W. 144; Drumm v. Cessnum, 61 Kan. 467, 59 Pac. 1078; Mitchell v. Davies, 51 Minn. 168, 53 N. W. 363; Ruth v. St. Louis Transit Co., 98 Mo. App. 1, 71 S. W. 1055; Kolka v. Jones, 6 N. D. 461, 71 N. W. 558, 66 Am. St. Rep. 615; Hughes v. Brooks, 36 Tex. 379. Contra, Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187, 25 L. ed. 116 [reversing 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,176, 2 Woods 599].

But in an action for suing out an attachment maliciously, and without probable cause, plaintiff cannot recover attorney's fees and expenses in defending the attachment without proof of malice and want of probable cause. Abohosh v. Buck, 43 S. W. 425, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1267.

67. Marshall v. Betner, 17 Ala. 832; Drumm v. Cessnum, 61 Kan. 467, 59 Pac. 1078.

But only so much of his expenditures, made in defense of the action held to be malicious, as were reasonably laid out and expended are recoverable. Eastin v. Stockton Bank, 66 Cal. 123, 4 Pac. 1106, 56 Am. Rep. 77.

68. Landa v. Obert, 45 Tex. 539. And see Crétin v. Levy, 37 La. Ann. 182, where it was held that the counsel fees allowable as damages for the wrongful issuance of conservative writs, in a suit for damages for malicious prosecution, are not those incurred for the defense of the suit, but only those rendered exclusively in relation to the writ.

69. Harr v. Ward, 73 Ark. 437, 84 S. W. 496. In Gregory v. Chambers, 78 Mo. 294 [affirming 8 Mo. App. 557], it was held that in an action for malicious prosecution the jury may, in their verdict for plaintiff, but are not bound to, allow plaintiff counsel fees expended in defending against the prosecution.

70. Hlubek v. Pinske, 84 Minn. 363, 87 N. W. 939; Mitchell v. Davies, 51 Minn. 168, 53 N. W. 363; Kolka v. Jones, 6 N. D. 461, 71 N. W. 558, 66 Am. St. Rep. 615. And see Brown v. Master, 111 Ala. 397, 20 So. 344; Billingsley v. Maas, 93 Wis. 176, 67 N. W. 49.

71. Ziegler v. Powell, 54 Ind. 173; Hyde v. Greuch, 62 Md. 577.

Compensatory damages generally see supra, IX, B, 1.

Defendant, although free from actual malice, should pay all actual damages, but nothing more. Cartwright v. Elliott, 45 Ill. App. 458; Ivers v. Ryan, 42 La. Ann. 32, 7 So. 61.

If a creditor merely approves of an unlawful arrest of a debtor by one acting on his behalf, on learning of such arrest, he will only be liable for the actual injury sustained. Rosenkrans v. Barker, 115 Ill. 331, 3 N. E.

93, 56 Am. Rep. 169. But compare Jacobs v. Crum, 62 Tex. 401.

72. Georgia.—Woodley v. Coker, 119 Ga. 226, 46 S. E. 89.

Indiana.—Lytton v. Baird, 95 Ind. 349.

Kansas.—Malone v. Murphy, 2 Kan. 250.

Louisiana.—See Sperier v. Ott, 116 La. 1087, 41 So. 323.

Maryland.—McWilliams v. Hoban, 42 Md. 56.

Montana.—Martin v. Corscadden, (1906) 86 Pac. 33.

North Carolina.—Kelly v. Durham Traction Co., 132 N. C. 368, 43 S. E. 923, 133 N. C. 418, 45 S. E. 826; Bradley v. Morris, 44 N. C. 395.

Tennessee.—Jones v. Turpin, 6 Heisk. 181.

Wisconsin.—Eggett v. Allen, 119 Wis. 625,

96 N. W. 803; Lueck v. Heisler, 87 Wis. 644, 58 N. W. 1101.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 157.

Smart money.—The jury may add such further sum by way of smart money as will sufficiently punish defendant for the wrong and injury done to plaintiff. Callahan v. Caffarata, 39 Mo. 136.

Attachment proceedings.—In an action for the malicious suing out of a writ of attachment, exemplary damages may be recovered. Stewart v. Cole, 46 Ala. 646; Spaid v. Barrett, 57 Ill. 289, 11 Am. Rep. 10; Hurlbut v. Hardenbrook, 85 Iowa 600, 52 N. W. 510. One who by his conduct ratifies and confirms the act of his agent who sues out an attachment, knowing the grounds on which the writ is obtained are without foundation, is liable in exemplary damages. Jacobs v. Crum, 62 Tex. 401. But compare Rosenkranz v. Barker, 115 Ill. 331, 3 N. E. 93, 56 Am. Rep. 169.

Injunction.—Exemplary damages cannot be recovered for the malicious suing out on an injunction. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Ware, 74 Tex. 47, 11 S. W. 918; Shackelford County v. Hounsfield, (Tex. Civ. App. 1893) 24 S. W. 358.

Loss of profits.—Where exemplary damages are sought plaintiff can show his loss of credit and prospective profits, although such loss cannot be properly recoverable as actual damages. Kirbs v. Provine, 78 Tex. 353, 14 S. W. 849; Kaufman v. Armstrong, 74 Tex. 65, 11 S. W. 1048. But plaintiff cannot prove what was the usual profit made by such establishments in the neighborhood of plaintiff in the same kind of business. O'Grady v. Julian, 34 Ala. 88. In an action for maliciously suing out summary process to dispossess a tenant who was using the premises as a boarding-house, the loss of boarders caused by suing out the process is recover-

where actual malice⁷³ and want of probable cause are shown.⁷⁴ To be effectual punitive damage may have relation to defendant's financial ability.⁷⁵ Where no actual damage has been suffered, no exemplary damages can be recovered.⁷⁶

D. Amount Awarded. The jury are the proper judges of the amount of damages to be awarded.⁷⁷ And unless their determination appears to have been influenced by passion, prejudice, or some improper motive,⁷⁸ or unless the amount is outrageously disproportionate, either to the wrong received or to the situation and circumstances of either plaintiff or defendant,⁷⁹ the court will not disturb their verdict.⁸⁰ In case of an award of excessive damages the court may direct a

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 157.

Where the facts justify an inference of malice, damages in the nature of punitive damages are authorized. Deslonde v. O'Hern, 39 La. Ann. 14, 1 So. 286. See also Sperier v. Ott, 116 La. 1087, 41 So. 323.

74. Tucker v. Davis, 77 N. C. 330; Faroux v. Cornwell, (Tex. Civ. App. 1905) 90 S. W. 537.

If a want of probable cause appears, the jury in estimating damages may properly consider the degree of malignity displayed by the prosecutor. Murphy v. Hobbs, 7 Colo. 541, 5 Pac. 119, 49 Am. Rep. 366.

79. Ives v. Bartholomew, 9 Conn. 309; Walker v. Martin, 52 Ill. 347; Leith v. Pope, W. Bl. 1327.

Disproportionate to the wrong received.—In Phelps v. Cogswell, 70 Cal. 201, 11 Pac. 628, a verdict of four thousand dollars was reduced to one thousand dollars. Where the undisputed testimony shows actual damages sustained by plaintiff to the amount of fifty dollars or more, a verdict for plaintiff for only five dollars will not be sustained. Waufler v. McLellan, 51 Wis. 484, 8 N. W.

300. But in Farrar v. Brackett, 86 Ga. 463, 12 S. E. 686, twenty dollars attorney's fee was held to be proportionate to his success in the trover suit.

80. Weaver v. Page, 6 Cal. 681 (fifteen thousand dollars allowed to stand, where no misconduct was shown on the part of the jury); Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Talbot, 131 Ind. 221, 29 N. E. 1134; Chapman v. Dodd, 10 Minn. 350; Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1. In Leith v. Pope, W. Bl. 1327, 1328, an action for malicious prosecution where the jury rendered a verdict for £10,000, De Grey, C. J., said: "That in cases of tort the Court will not interpose on account of the largeness of damages, unless they are so flagrantly excessive as to afford an internal evidence of the prejudice and partiality of the jury. That is, unless they are most outrageously disproportionate, either to the wrong received, or to the situation and circumstances of either the plaintiff or defendant."

Where the verdict is not so excessive as to indicate bias or prejudice, the granting of a new trial is unwarranted. Olmstead v. Williams, 89 Ga. 144, 15 S. E. 31.

Not excessive.—The verdicts in the following cases have been held not excessive under the foregoing rule. National Surety Co. v. Mabry, 139 Ala. 217, 35 So. 698 (seven thousand five hundred dollars); Williams v. Casebeer, 126 Cal. 77, 58 Pac. 380 (one hundred and sixty-two dollars eighty cents); Ives v. Bartholomew, 9 Conn. 309 (two hundred dollars); Nelson v. Danielson, 82 Ill. 545 (seven hundred and fifty dollars); Montross v. Bradsby, 68 Ill. 185 (one thousand dollars); Mexican Cent. R. Co. v. Gehr, 66 Ill. App. 173 (forty thousand dollars); Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Talbot, 131 Ind. 221, 29 N. E. 1134 (six thousand five hundred dollars); Rule v. McGregor, 115 Iowa 323, 88 N. release of part of such damages or award a new trial in case the release is not given.⁸¹

X. PERSONS ENTITLED TO SUE.

A. In General. Any person who is capable of holding property in his own right,⁸² and of bringing other actions at law in his own name,⁸³ who was a party defendant to the original wrongful proceeding⁸⁴ and who suffered directly from the wrongful act,⁸⁵ is entitled to maintain an action for malicious prosecution. The right, however, is a personal one which does not survive to the personal rep-

B. 390 (£4, 5s.).

Excessive.—The verdicts in the following cases have been held excessive under the foregoing rule: Seabridge v. McAdam, 119 Cal. 460, 51 Pac. 691 (eight hundred dollars); Gray v. Fanning, 73 Conn. 115, 46 Atl. 831 (one thousand dollars); Loewenthal v. Streng, 90 Ill. 74 (ten thousand dollars and a remittitur of four thousand dollars did not remove the element of passion or prejudice and passion); Walker v. Martin, 52 Ill. 347 (twenty-five thousand dollars even after a remittitur was entered of five thousand dollars); Walker v. Martin, 43 Ill. 508 (twenty thousand dollars set aside, where the record disclosed that the evidence clearly established the fact that plaintiff was a man of very bad character); Wheeler, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Barrett, 70 Ill. App. 222 [affirmed in 172 Ill. 610, 50 N. E. 325] one thousand five hundred dollars); Davis v. Seeley, 91 Iowa 583, 60 N. W. 183, 51 Am. St. Rep. 356 (three thousand dollars); Bell v. Morse, 48 Kan. 601, 29 Pac. 1086 (one thousand dollars, although plaintiff remitted six hundred dollars judgment for four hundred dollars); Wright v. Hagerman, 42 S. W. 917, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1032 (four thousand five hundred dollars);

Cointement v. Cropper, 41 La. Ann. 303, 6 So. 127 (one thousand dollars); Driggs v. Morgan, -10 Rob. (La.) 119 (one thousand five hundred dollars); Davis v. McMillan, 142 Mich. 391, 105 N. W. 862, 3 L. R. A. N. S. 923 (four thousand dollars); Farrell v. St. Louis Transit Co., 103 Mo. App. 454, 78 S. W. 312 (one thousand five hundred dollars actual and one thousand dollars exemplary damages); Ruth v. St. Louis Transit Co., 98 Mo. App. 1, 71 S. W. 1055 (one thousand dollars actual and one thousand dollars punitive damages); Dann v. Wormser, 38 N. Y. App. Div. 460, 56 N. Y. Suppl. 474 (one thousand dollars); Billingsley v. Mass, 93 Wis. 176, 67 N. W. 49 (three thousand five hundred dollars); Tuckett v. Eaton, 6 Ont. 486 (one thousand five hundred dollars); Crawford v. McLaren, 9 U. C. C. P. 215 (£80).

Where the person sought to be charged was merely the messenger or agent of the gov-responsible for damages in malicious prosecution upon proof of all essentials of the wrong.⁹⁵

B. Joint Tort-Feasors. The usual principles as to joint tort-feasors apply;⁹⁶ the liability is joint and several.⁹⁷ All persons who originate,⁹⁸ aid, or abet in,⁹⁹ or voluntarily participate in,¹ such original proceeding are liable as principals,² jointly or severally if they acted with malice and without probable cause.³ Partners may be joint tort-feasors with third persons.⁴

XII. ACTIONS IN GENERAL.⁵

A. Form of Remedy. As respects the form of the remedy, it clearly appears that the common-law remedy developed from the old writ of conspiracy⁶ error of Arkansas and his only act was done by him as such agent, as prescribed by the act of congress, now U. S. Rev. St. § 5278 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 3597], even though maliciously, creates no liability. In re Titus, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 14,062, 8 Ben. 411.

Case and conspiracy compared and distinguished.—The old action of conspiracy could not be brought against one person only. Cox v. Wirrall, Cro. Jac. 193. This was one reason why the action on the case came to be used. Stephen Mal. Pros. *p. 85. When the wrong was committed by only one person there was an action on the case "in the nature of an action for conspiracy" (Mills v. Mills, Cro. Car. 239; Phillips v. Jansen, 2 Esp. 624; Savile v. Roberts, 1 Ld. Raym. 374, 1 Salk. 13, 3 Salk. 16; Price v. Crofts, T. Raym. 180; Saur Abr. p. 62, pl. 3); and was early brought for malicious prosecution (Skinner v. Gunton, 1 Saund. 228; Daw v. Swaine, Sid. 424; Atwood v. Monger, Style 378). The distinction between the two actions is treated by Lord Chief Justice Holt, in Savile v. Roberts, 1 Ld. Raym. 374, 1 Salk. 13, 3 Salk. 16, which is considered the foundation of the modern action for malicious prosecution.

The historical aspect of the subject will be found in Bigelow Lead Cas. Torts 190, 196.

7. Alabama.—Randall v. Henry, 5 Stew. & P. 367; Seay v. Greenwood, 21 Ala. 491.

Arkansas.—Bach v. Cook, 21 Ark. 571.

Illinois.—Davis v. Baker, 88 Ill. App. 251.

Iowa.—Center v. Spring, 2 Iowa 393.

Pennsylvania.—Stewart v. Thompson, 51 Pa. St. 158.

Rhode Island.—Hobbs v. Ray, 18 R. I. 84, 25 Atl. 694.

South Carolina.—Thomas v. Rouse, 2 Brev. 75.

Virginia.—Shaver v. White, 6 Munf. 110, 8 Am. Dec. 730.

Case is the proper remedy: For the malicious use of process regularly issued by a court of competent jurisdiction. Sheppard v. Furniss, 19 Ala. 760. For the malicious abuse of process in issuing an execution. Barnett v. Reed, 51 Pa. St. 190, 88 Am. Dec. 574. For an illegal arrest made under a writ of attachment wrongfully sued out, but regularly issued by a court of competent jurisdiction. Plummer v. Dennett, 6 Me. 421, 20 Am. Dec. 316. For malicious arrest. Bassett v. Bratton, 86 Ill. 152; Turner v. Walker, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 377, 22 Am. Dec. 329; Hamilton v. Feemster, 4 Rich. (S. C.) 573; Doolan v. Martin, 6 Ont. Pr. 319; Dobbyn v. Decow, 25 U. C. C. P. 18; Thorne v. Mason, 8 U. C. Q. B. 236; Cameron v. Playter, 3 U. C. Q. B. 138; Dunn v. McDougall, 5 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 156. For maliciously procuring a capias ad satisfaciendum to be issued. Turner v. Walker, supra. For maliciously procuring a search warrant to be issued. Riley v. Johnston, 13 Ga. 260; Beaty v. Perkins, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 382. For maliciously suing out an attachment and for injury to credit and business. State v. Thomas, 19 Mo. 613, 61 Am. Dec. 580. To recover damages incident to the taking and carrying away of property under a replevin process issued in furtherance of a conspiracy. Cannon v. Sipples, 39 Conn. 505. Where, in an action for malicious prosecution, or a malicious abuse of legal process, special loss to plaintiff's business resulting from the wrong is alleged to aggravate the damages, such allegation does not change the character of an action. It remains an action for a personal injury. Noonan v. Orton, 34 Wis. 259, 17 Am. Rep. 441.

Case, trespass, or trover.—In an action for malicious prosecution by attachment of plaintiff's property, plaintiff cannot recover as for a conversion of the goods attached. Burton v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 33 Minn. 189, 22 N. W. 300. Where the proceedings complained of are merely irregular (Sheppard v. Furniss, 19 Ala. 760); or where an arrest is made on a void warrant (Kramer v. Lott, 50 Pa. St. 495, 88 Am. Dec. 556; Baird v. Householder, 32 Pa. St. 168), the proper remedy is trespass; but where the warrant is void for want of jurisdiction, trespass, or trover is proper (Zachary v. Holden, 47 N. C. 453). When an injury is effected by regular process of a court of competent jurisdiction, case is the proper remedy, and trespass is not sustainable, although the process may have been maliciously adopted. Riley v. Johnston, 13 Ga. 260; Owens v. Starr, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 230; Warfield v. Walter, 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 80; Boyd v. Snyder, 207 Pa. St. 330, 56 Atl. 924; McHugh v. Pundt, 1 Bailey (S. C.) 441; Olinger v. McChesney, 7 Leigh (Va.) 660; Shaver v. White, 6 Munf. (Va.) 110, 8 Am. Dec. 730; Smith v. Miles, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,079a, 1 Hempst. 34.

Groundless proceeding.—In no case has he who instituted a groundless proceeding been held liable as a trespasser. Lovier v. Gilpin, 6 Dana (Ky.) 321; Cassier v. Fales, 139 Mass. 461, 1 N. E. 922; Barber v. Rollinson, 1 Crompt. & M. 330, 2 L. J. Exch. 101, 3 Tyrw. 267; Daniels v. Fielding, 4 D. & L. 329, 10 Jur. 1061, 16 L. J. Exch. 153, 16 M. & W. 200.

On the same facts one may be liable both for false imprisonment and for malicious prosecution. Lueck v. Heisler, 87 Wis. 644, 58 N. W. 1101.

Trespass lay for false imprisonment.—The two causes of action (false imprisonment and malicious prosecution) are different and inconsistent, but may be united in

B. Conditions Precedent.¹¹ Rules of court requiring that before the action may be maintained a certain order be had must be duly complied with.¹²

C. Jurisdiction and Venue.¹³ Jurisdiction and venue in actions for malicious prosecution must substantially conform to the provisions of local statutes.¹⁴ The action is transitory, and under the common law may be brought in any county in which defendant may be found.¹⁵

D. Defenses. In addition to showing the non-existence of an essential element of the alleged malicious original proceeding,¹⁶ defendant may, when the facts or circumstances warrant or permit it, resort to any defense which may be interposed in civil actions generally.¹⁷ For example he may plead the statute of limitations in bar of the action.¹⁸

Copy of indictment.—By rule of court in some states it is provided that a copy of the indictment, in cases of felony, shall be obtained by order of the judge before whom the cause was brought, before an action for malicious prosecution shall be commenced. Where such rule is in force the action for malicious prosecution cannot be maintained without first complying therewith in cases of felony. A. v. B., R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 228. But where one person prefers a bill of indictment against another for a felony, and the bill is thrown out by the grand jury, the party prosecuted, who has brought an action for malicious prosecution, may give a copy of the indictment in evidence, although it had not been obtained by order of the judge. Taylor v. Cooper, 2 Mill (S. C.) 208. But the rule is otherwise where the action is predicated on a charge of misdemeanor. Cherry v. McCants, 7 S. C. 224; Mims v. Burts, 2 Mill (S. C.) 308.

Production of record.—When the prosecution alleged to have been malicious was for misdemeanor, and plaintiff was acquitted, he can prove his acquittal without producing a copy of the record, although if the crime of which he was acquitted was felony he must produce it. Morrison v. Kelly, W. Bl. 384.

XIII. PLEADING.¹⁹

A. Complaint²⁰ — 1. GENERAL REQUISITES. In accordance with the general theory of current pleading²¹ the complaint or declaration in malicious prosecution should plainly state the specific facts constituting the cause of action,²² not conclusions²³ nor evidence of facts²⁴ nor unnecessary repetitions thereof;²⁵ but so as to sufficiently allege all of the essential elements of the wrong.²⁶ It has been held Louisiana.—King v. Erskins, 116 La. 480, 40 So. 844.

Pennsylvania.—Boyd v. Snyder, 207 Pa. St. 330, 56 Atl. 924.

West Virginia.—Porter v. Mack, 50 W. Va. 581, 40 S. E. 459.

When statute commences to run.—McCusker v. Walker, 77 Cal. 208, 19 Pac. 382 (from time of the wrongful act); Printup v. Smith, 74 Ga. 157 (from time of termination of litigation); King v. Erskins, 116 La. 480, 40 So. 844 (from date of arrest).

Civil proceedings as well as criminal prosecutions have been held to be embraced within the term "prosecution" as used in a statute relating to the limitation of actions for malicious prosecution. Burnap v. Marsh, 13 Ill. 535.

In Canada a declaration in the form prescribed by U. C. Consol. St. schedule B, No. 27, is sufficient. Eakins v. Christopher, 18 U. C. C. P. 532. See also McBride v. Howard, 12 Can. L. J. N. S. 280; Davis v. Fortune, 6 U. C. Q. B. 281.

22. Pangburn v. Bull, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 345, holding that the rule that plaintiff in an action for malicious prosecution must set out the facts which constitute his ground of action is complied with where he sets out several suits brought by defendant and adjournments and other proceedings connected therewith.

Failure to state specific facts no ground for demurrer.—That a complaint is not sufficiently specific cannot be taken advantage of by demurrer. Cottrell v. Cottrell, 126 Ind. 181, 25 N. E. 905; McBean v. Campbell, 6 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 457; Thompson v. Garrison, 6 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 309.

Ohio.—Tilton v. Morgaridge, 12 Ohio St. 98.

Oklahoma.—Schrieber v. Clapp, 13 Okla. 215, 74 Pac. 316.

Rhode Island.—Lauzon v. Charroux, 18 R. I. 467, 28 Atl. 975.

Canada.—Nagle v. Timmins, 31 U. C. C. P. 221; Dewar v. Carrique, 14 U. C. C. P. 137. See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 91.

Complaints were held insufficient in Woodall v. McMillan, 38 Ala. 622 (a count claiming damages of defendant "for maliciously, that a complaint in an action for malicious prosecution is not demurrable for misjoinder of distinct causes of action, because it seeks to recover: (1) For wrongfully causing the writ to be issued; (2) for wrongfully causing the same to be levied; (3) for excessive levy; and (4) for improper conduct in making the levy.²⁷

2. ORIGINAL PROCEEDING.²⁸ It is essential that the complaint must contain a substantial, accurate, and complete description of the original proceeding,²⁹ and it must set forth facts showing that it was judicial in character;³⁰ in criminal and without probable cause therefor, causing the plaintiff to be arrested and imprisoned on a charge of perjury;" and a second count claiming damages "for this—that the defendant . . . falsely imprisoned plaintiff, and then detained him in prison and custody, without any reasonable or probable cause . . . contrary to law, and against the will of plaintiff" are counts in trespass); Holly v. Carson, 39 Ala. 345 (complaint alleging that plaintiff claimed damages against defendant "for maliciously, and without probable cause therefor, causing the plaintiff to be arrested and imprisoned on a charge of felony"); Duckworth v. Boykin, 114 Ga. 969, 41 S. E. 62; Steel v. Williams, 18 Ind. 161 (complaint not showing that the prosecution against plaintiff had ended in his acquittal); Spring v. Besore, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 551 (not showing that suit terminated in plaintiff's favor and the manner of its termination); Bartlett v. Christhilf, 69 Md. 219, 14 Atl. 518; Lansing v. Oliver, 1 Nebr. (Unoff.) 602, 95 N. W. 782; Ford v. Kelsey, 4 Rich. (S. C.) 365 (where complaint failed to show writ was issued without probable cause); Miskimmons v. Moore, 10 Wyo. 41, 65 Pac. 1000.

In an action by a corporation for malicious prosecution the complaint averred that defendants wilfully, maliciously, and without probable cause filed a bill for plaintiff's dissolution, wherein they made false, malicious, and slanderous allegations against plaintiff, and widely circulated the same, to destroy public confidence in plaintiff, and that having taken no proof the suit was dismissed by order of court. It was held that the complaint stated no cause of action. Supreme Lodge A. P. L. v. Unverzagt, 76 Md. 104, 24 Atl. 323.

Under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 499, providing that the objection that a complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action is not waived by an omission to demur, the objection that a complaint for malicious prosecution does not allege want of probable cause may be raised by motion to dismiss. Palmer v. Palmer, 8 N. Y. App. Div. 331, 40 N. Y. Suppl. 829.

Formal defects in the complaint in a justice's court will be overlooked, if no objection is made to them until evidence is offered. Holbrook v. Cooper, 44 Mich. 373, 6 N. W. 850. See also, generally, JUSTICES OF THE PEACE, 24 Cyc. 570.

Complaint which negatives existence of statutory ground for an attachment stated in the attachment affidavit and denies the existence of any and all statutory grounds for the issuance of the writ is sufficient as against a demurrer that such complaint "fails to negative or deny that any statutory ground existed for the issuance of the attachment." Brown v. Master, 104 Ala. 451, 16 So. 443.

27. All the matters thus specified are component parts of the malicious prosecution complained of. Brown v. Master, 104 Ala. 451, 16 So. 443.

Joinder of count for circulating slanderous charges.—In Cadwell v. Corey, 91 Mich. 335, 51 N. W. 888, it is held that counts for maliciously suing out a writ of attachment, on a false affirmation of dishonesty and fraud in the contraction of the debt sued for, may be joined with a count for circulating reports of the same general character and referring to the same dealings between the parties, and plaintiff cannot be compelled to an election of counts.

Joinder of actions for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution see 19 Cyc. 358.

28. The original proceeding as an element of liability see supra, IV.

29. Ammerman v. Crosby, 26 Ind. 451; Haskins v. Ralston, 69 Mich. 63, 37 N. W. 45, 13 Am. St. Rep. 376 (allegations held sufficient); Closson v. Staples, 42 Vt. 209, 1 Am. Rep. 316.

The declaration is good if it states that defendant maliciously caused plaintiff to be indicted, although he was tried and acquitted and there is no averment that defendant caused plaintiff to be tried. Graham v. Noble, 13 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 233.

Charge of illegal arrest.—Where a complaint is susceptible of no other interpretation than a charge of illegal arrest, detention, and restraint of liberty, the action is to be regarded as one of false imprisonment and not malicious prosecution. Burns v. Erben, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 273.

The judgment need not be set out. McBride v. Howard, 12 Can. L. J. N. S. 280; Wilcox v. Burnside, 5 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 525; Crawford v. Stennett, (East. T. 2 Vict.) 3 K. & J. Dig. 2193.

The affidavit to arrest need not be set out. Beamer v. Darling, 4 U. C. Q. B. 211.

30. Drew v. Potter, 39 Vt. 189. See also Ragsdale v. Bowles, 16 Ala. 62, holding that an allegation that defendant caused plaintiff to be released and set at liberty, and abandoned the prosecution, does not show with any reasonable certainty that the charge was investigated judicially, that the prosecution was ended by the judgment of any judicial tribunal, or that defendant was discharged after judicial investigation.

Court's jurisdiction.—That the declaration must show that the court had jurisdiction of cases the particular offense must be stated.³¹ Process issued must be adequately described.³²

3. PARTIES.³³ So it is necessary that the complaint should set forth such facts as are sufficient to show that plaintiff has the capacity to sue,³⁴ and that defendant is liable individually³⁵ as the proximate cause of the damage complained of.³⁶ In case there is more than one defendant it is not necessary,³⁷ and may be the original action see Anderson v. Wilson, 25 Ont. 91; Stephens v. Stephens, 24 U. C. C. P. 424.

Magistrate's jurisdiction.—Where the original proceeding was before a magistrate, the complaint must set forth facts showing that the magistrate had jurisdiction. Stephens v. Stephens, 24 U. C. C. P. 424. See also Munroe v. Abbott, 39 U. C. Q. B. 78; Campbell v. McDonell, 27 U. C. Q. B. 343; Sinclair v. Haynes, 16 U. C. Q. B. 247.

31. Cochran v. Bones, 1 Cal. App. 729, 82 Pac. 970.

Extent and limits of rule.—The doctrine seems to be well settled that the averment in the declaration must substantially charge the particular felony or misdemeanor charged in the affidavit. But it is not necessary to recite the affidavit in full. Hughes v. Ross, 1 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 258. The declaration should state the offense imputed to plaintiff by its technical name, or by its legal description. Bartlett v. Jennison, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 295; Turpin v. Remy, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 210. But it need not describe the offense by name for which the party was prosecuted, nor draw the legal conclusion from the acts of the prosecutor. Long v. Rogers, 17 Ala. 540. An allegation that defendant "falsely and maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause, charged the said plaintiff with having feloniously stolen a certain horse of the defendant's," is sufficient to show that the crime of larceny was imputed to plaintiff. Cox v. Kirkpatrick, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 37. The petition should state the facts, and not the conclusion of the pleader upon the facts. Brown v. Cape Girardeau, 90 Mo. 377, 2 S. W. 302, 59 Am. Rep. 28. But when the offense imputed is stated by its technical name, it is sufficient, especially after verdict. Thomas v. Hunter, 44 Ind. 477. It is held not to be necessary that it should appear that the complaint under which plaintiff was arrested alleged a crime in terms sufficient, where it is shown that the complaint sought to charge an offense against the law. Klein-smith v. Hamlin, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 60 S. W. 994. But see Whaley v. Lawton, 57 S. C. 256, 35 S. E. 558.

32. Sheppard v. Furniss, 19 Ala. 760, holding that a complaint or declaration in case, for malicious prosecution, must aver the issuance of process, properly describing it.

It is not essential that the writ should be described by its technical name (Ammerman v. Crosby, 26 Ind. 451); or that the writing be set out in full, in the malicious suit (Bernard v. Cafferty, 11 Gray (Mass.) 10; Closson v. Staples, 42 Vt. 209, 1 Am.

Rep. 316). Nor is it necessary to aver that the affidavit was in writing. Forrest v. Collier, 20 Ala. 175, 56 Am. Dec. 190.

Persons liable see supra, XI.

34. See supra, X, A.

35. Describing a defendant in his fiduciary capacity is not merely surplusage, but erroneous, as he can be made liable only in his individual capacity. Wengert v. Beashore, 1 Penr. & W. (Pa.) 232, styling defendant as executor. And see Louque v. Saloy, 45 La. Ann. 1386, 14 So. 255; Lamorere v. Cox, 32 La. Ann. 246; Mell v. Barner, 135 Pa. St. 151, 19 Atl. 940.

36. Marshall v. Betner, 17 Ala. 832 (holding that in an action for malicious attachment defendant must be connected by averment with the execution of the process of attachment); Watters v. De la Matter, 109 Ill. App. 334; Gittinger v. McRae, 89 Md. 513, 43 Atl. 823. Compare Walser v. Thies, 56 Mo. 89, where it is held to be unnecessary either to plead or prove that defendant participated in the execution of the attachment process; that if he makes out the affidavit maliciously and without probable cause this is sufficient without further intervention on his part to render him liable in damages for any resulting injury. See also supra, V, B, text and note 98.

37. Dreux v. Domec, 18 Cal. 83; Russell v. Chamberlain, (Ida. 1906) 85 Pac. 926 (holding that it is not necessary, in an action for malicious prosecution, to allege that all defendants combined in instituting the proceedings, but if, after they were commenced, they without probable cause and with malice voluntarily participated in the prosecution, they may be joined in an action with the persons who instituted the action); Gilmore v. Mastin, 115 Ill. App. 46; Jenner v. Carson, 111 Ind. 522, 13 N. E. 44 (holding that where the action is against several defendants a complaint which charges that defendants wrongfully, maliciously, and without probable cause did the several things therein charged is sufficient); Hamilton v. Smith, 39 Mich. 222.

Name and authority of agent.—It is not necessary that the complaint should set forth the name and authority of the agent or employee through whom the prosecution was instituted. Indiana Bicycle Co. v. Willis, 18 Ind. App. 525, 48 N. E. 646.

Prosecution to finality without probable cause.—A declaration charging a conspiracy to sacrifice and destroy plaintiff's property and business by the malicious use of judicial proceedings must, it has been held, allege that such proceedings were instigated, instituted, superfluous,³⁸ to allege a conspiracy. When, however, the action is brought against persons not parties to the record, a concise statement should be made of their relation to each other,³⁹ and of what they did in connection with the proceeding complained of.⁴⁰

4. WANT OF PROBABLE CAUSE.⁴¹ Want of probable cause for the original proceeding being an essential element, it must be alleged in the declaration.⁴² The specific allegation in hæc verba is proper as the allegation of an ultimate fact,⁴³ but is not essential or sacramental.⁴⁴ If the petition states not conclusions⁴⁵ and prosecuted to a finality by defendants without probable cause. Porter v. Mack, 50 W. Va. 581, 40 S. E. 459. See also CONSPIRACY, 8 Cyc. 673 note 43. But in Dreux v. Domec, 18 Cal. 83, 88, it was said: "An action lies for a conspiracy unjustly to prosecute a defendant; but we apprehend that this action is somewhat different, in form at least, from an action on the case for a malicious prosecution. The gist of this action is the malicious prosecution; that of the other conspiracy—the combining of two or more to do an unlawful and injurious act. In the first case . . . an action is complete before an acquittal; in the other, the acquittal or termination of the prosecution is necessary."

Form of petition held sufficient see Nehr v. Dobbs, 47 Nebr. 863, 866, 66 N. W. 864. Compare Locke v. Wilson, 6 U. C. Q. B. 600, 601.

But where the declaration shows upon its face that plaintiff was convicted or indicted, but judgment was reversed on appeal, the averment of want of probable cause by itself is not a statement of fact, but only a conclusion of law, and presumption of probable cause must be rebutted by some additional averment showing fraud or undue means in procuring such conviction or binding over. Boogher v. Hough, 99 Mo. 183, 12 S. W. 524; Giusti v. Del Papa, 19 R. I. 338, 33 Atl. 525.

"Without good cause" is not sufficient. Mitchell v. Mattingly, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 237.

but facts from which the inference of want of probable cause naturally follows,⁴⁶ it is sufficient.

5. MALICE.⁴⁷ Malice as well as absence of probable cause must be alleged;⁴⁸ otherwise the declaration or complaint is bad on demurrer.⁴⁹ It is not sufficient Want of "just" or "proper" cause is not a good averment of want of probable cause. De Wiele v. Callanan, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 386.

"Want of any just cause" is insufficient. Ellis v. Thilman, 3 Call (Va.) 3.

"Without any legal or justifiable cause" is insufficient. Young v. Gregory, 3 Call (Va.) 446, 2 Am. Dec. 556.

Falsity of charge.—It is not necessary to charge that the accusation complained of was false. McCarthy v. Kitchen, 59 Ind. 500; Ziegler v. Powell, 54 Ind. 173, holding that however false the charge might have been, if the person making it had probable cause for so doing, he would not be liable in a suit for malicious prosecution.

Where an attachment was sued out by defendant as agent for a third person, and the declaration in an action for maliciously suing out such attachment alleges that he was not the agent of such third person, but acted wholly without authority from him, it is unnecessary to aver the want of probable cause. Forrest v. Collier, 20 Ala. 175, 56 Am. Dec. 190.

For forms of petitions held sufficient see Forrest v. Collier, 20 Ala. 175, 178, 56 Am. Dec. 190 (holding that in an action for wrongfully suing out an attachment, an allegation that the attachment was sued out wrongfully, fraudulently, and in order to oppress and injure plaintiff, is equivalent to an averment that it was sued out maliciously); *Swindell v. Repetition of allegation.—Where the complaint in an action for malicious prosecution contains allegations of malice and want of probable cause, by defendant in filing an affidavit charging plaintiff with a criminal offense, such allegation need not be repeated in connection with the averments concerning the issue of the warrant, the arrest, and the imprisonment. Ruston v. Biddle, 43 Ind. 515.

to allege that the original proceedings were wrongfully procured.⁵⁰ It is held that the allegation that defendant acted "maliciously" is sufficient,⁵¹ and that it is bad pleading to set forth the evidence to establish malice.⁵² On the other hand it is held that the complaint or declaration must set forth the conduct of defendant alleged to have been malicious.⁵³

6. FAVORABLE TERMINATION OF PROCEEDING.⁵⁴ As a general rule plaintiff's pleading must consistently⁵⁵ allege the fact⁵⁶ of the final⁵⁷ termination of the previous Wisconsin.—Luby v. Bennett, 111 Wis. 613, 87 N. W. 804, 87 Am. St. Rep. 897, 56 L. R. A. 261.

Canada.—Wilcox v. Burnside, 5 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 525.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 98 et seq.

This rule is not changed by the fact that the petition alleges, as the cause of action, the malicious issuing of an attachment, if the action in which it is issued and the attachment proceedings rest upon the same grounds, and must be determined together. McCracken v. Covington City Nat. Bank, 4 Fed. 602.

Bad on demurrer.—A complaint which fails to show that the action complained of had been terminated is bad on general demurrer. Smith v. Smith, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 573; Hull v. Sprague, 23 R. I. 188, 49 Atl. 697; King v. Johnston, 81 Wis. 578, 51 N. W. 1011; Barrell v. Simonton, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 1,041, 2 Cranch C. C. 657. The failure of the complaint to show that the writ of arrest had been vacated or set aside by the court in the action in which it was issued (Forster v. Orr, 17 Oreg. 447, 21 Pac. 440), or to otherwise show that it has been avoided by competent authority (Searll v. McCracken, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 262), renders it bad on demurrer.

No appeal taken.—A complaint which does not allege that no appeal has been taken is bad. The complaint in an action brought on the vacation of an order of arrest alleged to have been obtained on false and malicious affidavits, from which no appeal is taken, which does not allege that no appeal has been taken from the order vacating the order of arrest, is demurrable. Ingram v. Root, 51 Hun (N. Y.) 238, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 858.

Good for false imprisonment.—A complaint which does not contain an allegation as to the termination of the prosecution may state a good cause of action for false imprisonment, proceeding complained of as wrongful favorably⁵⁸ to defendant; or it must contain averments obviating the force and effect of the absence of termination, or of an adverse determination.⁵⁹

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 99.

The declaration or complaint must show that the civil action (Wood v. Laycock, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 192; Murson v. Austin, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 116), or criminal prosecution claimed to have been malicious, has been legally terminated by judgment in his favor (Wood v. Laycock, supra; Murson v. Austin, supra), or that he was acquitted (Monroe v. Maples, 1 Root (Conn.) 553; Steel v. Williams, 18 Ind. 161; Mooney v. Kennett, 19 Mo. 551, 61 Am. Dec. 576; Scholl v. Schnebel, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 855), or discharged (Gorrell v. Snow, 31 Ind. 215; Hains v. Elwell, 3 N. J. L. 411), by order or judgment of the court (Teague v. Wilks, 3 McCord (S. C.) 461). And the averment of "discharged" is not always sufficient. Carpenter v. Nutter, 127 Cal. 61, 59 Pac. 301; Kirkpatrick v. Kirkpatrick, 39 Pa. St. 288; Tyler v. Smith, 25 R. I. 486, 56 Atl. 683.

Illustrations.—An averment in a declaration for malicious prosecution of an examination of plaintiff before a justice of the peace, touching the alleged offense, and a discharge by him therefrom (Long v. Rogers, 17 Ala. 540); that the grand jury had made a return of "no bill" on a bill of indictment, and "expressed in their finding that the prosecution was malicious" (Horn v. Sims, 92 Ga. 421, 17 S. E. 670); that "on the motion and request of the defendant made in person, said affidavit, prosecution and charges were dismissed, and plaintiff was not required to go to trial thereon" (Clegg v. Waterbury, 88 Ind.

21); or that plaintiff had been acquitted by the grand jury's finding "No bill" (Teague v. Wilks, 3 McCord (S. C.) 461), shows a sufficient termination of the prosecution. Where the wife of a plaintiff in an action for malicious prosecution was arrested and bound over on the charge of conspiring to poison the prosecutor, and, a true bill being found, was tried and convicted, but the judgment was arrested and she discharged, the averment of "discharged" was held not to be a sufficient averment and proof of the termination of the prosecution to sustain an action for malicious prosecution, as it did not countervail the effect of the record of the conviction. Nothing short of an acquittal will answer where the prosecution has progressed to a trial by a petit jury. Kirkpatrick v. Kirkpatrick, 39 Pa. St. 288. A complaint which alleges that judgment was rendered and entered in favor of defendant in the action in which the attachment issued is sufficient without further alleging that the judgment remains in full force. If the judgment is no longer in force, this fact should be alleged by defendant in his answer. Carter v. Paige, 80 Cal. 390, 22 Pac. 188. A declaration alleging that one R engaged defendant to pay a note made by said R to plaintiff, and bring him (R) said note; that defendant paid said note, but did not deliver it to said R, but maliciously, in the name of one P, and without his knowledge, procured a writ of attachment against plaintiff upon said note, etc., is not sufficient in that it does not allege what judgment was rendered in the attachment action. Parker v. Willard, Quincy (Mass.) 326.

59. Risser v. Liberman, 102 N. Y. App. Div. 482, 92 N. Y. Suppl. 942, holding that in the absence of allegations showing either the termination of the replevin suit, or any fact showing that plaintiff was deprived of her right to assert her defense in that suit, the complaint is demurrable.

An exception exists to the general rule requiring an averment of the termination of the original proceeding favorable to defendant under certain circumstances, as where the termination of the former suit can neither tend to establish nor invalidate plaintiff's cause of action, it is not necessary to aver such determination. Turner v. Walker, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 377, 22 Am. Dec. 329; Boogher v. Hough, 99 Mo. 183, 12 S. W. 524 (averment that conviction was obtained by fraud and undue means); Fortman v. Rotter, 8 Ohio St. 548, 70 Am. Dec. 606 (holding that where the facts are such that the trial or judgment in the main action does not involve the question of the existence of probable cause, it is not necessary to allege the termination of the former suit); Hogg v. Pinckney, 16 S. C. 387. In Grainger v. Hill, 4 Bing. N. Cas. 212, 7 L. J. C. P. 85,

7. DAMAGES.⁶⁰ The complaint or declaration must contain a sufficient allegation of damage, conforming to legal standards.⁶¹ Actual or compensatory damages may be shown under the general ad damnum,⁶² but special⁶³ damages, and, it has been held, exemplary, must be particularly stated.⁶⁴

5 Scott 561, 33 E. C. L. 675, where plaintiff complained of an abuse of the process of law for the purpose of extorting property, to which defendants had no claim; that the abuse having been perpetrated, and defendants having attained their end by it, it was held to be immaterial whether their suit was terminated or not. In Sneed v. Harris, 109 N. C. 349, 13 S. E. 920, 14 L. R. A. 389, in an action for malicious prosecution, the complaint alleged that plaintiff was arrested and imprisoned in an action for slander of title wrongfully instituted for the sole purpose of getting immediate possession of land claimed and occupied by him, it was held that it was not necessary to allege that such action had been finally determined. So in Forrest v. Collier, 20 Ala. 175, 56 Am. Dec. 190, where an attachment was sued out by defendant as agent for a third person, and the declaration in the action for the malicious suing out of such attachment alleged that he was not the agent of such third persons but acted wholly without authority from them, it was held unnecessary to aver that the attachment suit was ended, as the false and fraudulent representation of agency resulted in the consequent damage and was the gist of the action. So the general rule does not apply to a case arising in obtaining a peace warrant (Hyde v. Greuch, 62 Md. 577); nor to an arrest under a judge's order (Eakins v. Christopher, 18 U. C. C. P. 532).

If defendant has had no opportunity to defend, it has been held that this fact should be alleged. Freymark v. McKinney Bread Co., 55 Mo. App. 435; Bump v. Betts, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 421. See also Pixley v. Reed, 26 Minn. 80, 1 N. W. 800.

60. Damage as an element of liability see supra, IX, A.

61. See cases cited infra, this note.

In an action for malicious attachment plaintiff must allege that he was injured by the attachment (Springer v. Wise, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 391), and that the attachment was actually levied on the property of the attachment defendant (Maskell v. Barker, 99 Cal. 642, 34 Pac. 340).

Averment of special damages.—Where the complaint in an action for malicious prosecution of a civil suit fails to aver that plaintiff suffered any special loss, annoyance, or inconvenience, it is demurrable. Smith v. Hintz, 67 Iowa 109, 24 N. W. 744. But a specific allegation as to damages, specifying the amount thereof, is not essential to plaintiff's cause of action to recover such damages as are necessarily inferable from the facts alleged. Luby v. Bennett, 111 Wis. 613, 87 N. W. 804, 87 Am. St. Rep. 897, 56 L. R. A. 261.

Allegations of damage held sufficient see Ramsey v. Flowers, 72 Ark. 316, 80 S. W.

Matters which merely tend to aggravate the damages which necessarily result from the acts set out in the complaint need not be alleged. Jackson v. Bell, 5 S. D. 257, 58 N. W. 671.

62. French v. Guyot, 30 Colo. 222, 70 Pac. 683.

As mental pain and suffering is an element of actual or compensatory damages, evidence of the condition of plaintiff's family at the time of his arrest is admissible to show the character and extent of the mental anguish caused plaintiff by his arrest and prosecution, although it is not specially pleaded. Davis v. Seeley, 91 Iowa 583, 60 N. W. 183, 51 Am. St. Rep. 356.

63. Horne v. Sullivan, 83 Ill. 30 (loss of boarders); Fine v. Navarre, 104 Mich. 93, 62 N. W. 142 (impairment of credit).

Damages for an abuse of the process of the law by cruel and oppressive conduct are not recoverable unless a count charging such abuse is inserted in the declaration. Baldwin v. Weed, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 224.

Expenses for costs and counsel fees in defending himself must be specifically alleged and proved by plaintiff as matters of special damage. Thompson v. Lumley, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 74.

Inability to perform contract.—Under a general allegation of damage evidence of damages resulting from plaintiff's inability, on account of sickness occasioned by such prosecution, to perform a certain contract of employment, is inadmissible. Oldfather v. Zent, 14 Ind. App. 89, 41 N. E. 555.

Allegations held sufficient see Ten Cate v. Fansler, 10 Okla. 7, 65 Pac. 375; Morrow v. Cheyne, 12 Ont. Pr. 487.

Allegations held insufficient see Evins v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 55 N. Y. App. Div. 626, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 1132; Mitchell v. McMurich, 22 Ont. 712.

St. Rep. 356 (where it was held that exemplary damages may be recovered without being specially pleaded, as such damages arise from the existence of malice); Martin v. Corscadden, (Mont. 1906) 86 Pac. 33 (holding that under Mont. Civ. Code, § 4290, providing that in any action for breach of an obligation not arising from contract where defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, actual or presumed, punitive damages may be awarded, plaintiff in an action for malicious prosecu-

B. Answer or Plea — 1. IN GENERAL. The plea must answer all it proposes to answer, otherwise it will be bad on demurrer, whether it be a plea in abatement,⁶⁵ or in bar.⁶⁶

2. DEFENSIVE MATTER — a. Specific. The action of malicious prosecution is peculiar in not being susceptible of specific defenses; the burden resting on plaintiff to show the concurrence of the many elements rendering the defense by justification ordinarily a negative one.⁶⁷ Usually every matter of fact which goes to defeat plaintiff's cause of action⁶⁸ may be shown without any special pleading.⁶⁹

b. Conventional — (i) IN GENERAL. A counter-claim,⁷⁰ want of capacity to sue,⁷¹ or of liability to be sued,⁷² estoppel of plaintiff by his own previous consent,⁷³ or by settlement or compromise,⁷⁴ or other conventional defenses may avail defendant⁷⁵ under elementary rules of pleading.⁷⁶

Where loss of financial credit resulting from a wrongful arrest is considered exemplary damages, plaintiff in an action for malicious prosecution may properly introduce evidence as to such loss under a general count for exemplary damages. Curlee v. Rose, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 259, 65 S. W. 197.

(II) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.⁷⁷ The action must be brought within the time specified by the statute in force in the jurisdiction in which the action is brought;⁷⁸ otherwise it is barred⁷⁹ and this whether it is based on a civil or criminal proceeding.⁸⁰ As a general rule the statute begins to run against the right to maintain such an action from the time when the original proceeding complained of as malicious was terminated.⁸¹

3. GENERAL ISSUE.⁸² The plea of the general issue or general denial puts in issue all essential elements of the wrongful act charged in the complaint,⁸³ which plaintiff must affirmatively show in the first instance as necessary parts of a prima facie case.⁸⁴ In many jurisdictions it is not only a proper, but the only proper,⁸⁵ plea to that end.⁸⁶

4. SPECIAL PLEADING—a. Justification. Under statutes permitting contradictory defenses, defendant may plead both the general issue and justification.⁸⁷ It has been frequently held that the admitted sufficiency of the general denial

82. Evidence admissible under general issue see infra, XIV, B.

83. An answer denying the allegations of the complaint is sufficient (Radde v. Ruckgaber, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 684; Rost v. Harris, 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 446); to enable defendant to put in evidence facts showing presence of probable cause and want of malice (Trodden v. Deckard, 45 Ind. 572; Crane v. Buchman, 30 Cinc. L. Bul. 120); as that he acted upon the advice of counsel learned in the law, and upon a full presentation of the facts (Smith v. Davis, 3 Mont. 109; Crane v. Buchman, supra). See also infra, XIV, B.

No other evidence is admissible, however, under a plea of the general issue, or not guilty, except such as disproves plaintiff's cause of action. Andrews v. Mitchell, 92 Ga. 629, 18 S. E. 1017.

A plea that defendant was not indebted, and did not undertake and promise, in manner and form as charged by plaintiff, is bad. Ventress v. Rosser, 73 Ga. 534.

A plea to an action for wrongfully and vexatiously suing out an attachment, which alleges that the attachment "was not sued out wrongfully, maliciously, or vexatiously, or without reasonable or probable cause," presents a substantial defense to the action and is not demurrable. Marshall v. Betner, 17 Ala. 832.

Striking out redundant matter.—The detail of actual facts which are relied on to constitute probable cause are but matters of evidence upon issue raised by a general denial, and not new matter, nor the denial of allegations of the complaint controverted, and may be stricken as redundant matter. Rost v. Harris, 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 446.

84. Brigham v. Aldrich, 105 Mass. 212.

85. See cases cited infra, this note. But see infra, XIII, B, 4, text and note 89.

Effect of joining other plea.—If the facts relied on to constitute probable cause be specially pleaded, and also the general issue, the special plea may be struck out on motion (Brown v. Collely, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 390; Simpson v. McArthur, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 302 note); and the action of the court in striking out a paragraph setting up such facts, when a general denial is in, cannot be assigned as an available error (Trodden v. Deckard, 45 Ind. 572).

Where a special plea of probable cause is insufficiently pleaded, it may be stricken out (Smith v. Davis, 3 Mont. 109) or demurred to (Wilson v. Ferrari, 1 Disn. (Ohio) 579, 12 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 807), for if the facts stated would not constitute probable cause they would be irrelevant.

Pleading facts in mitigation.—In a state where defendant may prove at the trial facts not amounting to a total defense but which may tend to mitigate plaintiff's damage if properly set forth in the answer, if the alleged facts could in any form of relation be material to be proved upon the trial, the court should not strike them out. Bradner v. Faulkner, 93 N. Y. 515.

does not exclude the use of a special plea;⁸⁸ and in some instances a special plea has been held to be required.⁸⁹ Such special plea must set forth facts which are in law sufficient to justify⁹⁰ the whole charge.⁹¹

b. Mitigation. Matter not amounting to a total defense but tending to reduce the extent of plaintiff's recovery has been held proper to be asserted by way of a special plea in the answer.⁹²

C. Reply. A reply is necessary only where new matter is pleaded in the

A plea of justification admits that the act complained of was done, but sets up that defendant was authorized by law to do the same. Andrews v. Mitchell, 92 Ga. 629, 18 S. E. 1017. A plea that admits the eviction and also sets out the facts which led to the suing out and execution of a warrant, and claims that defendant was authorized by law, under these facts, to have a warrant issued and executed, and that he did so in good faith, and without malice, and with probable cause, is a sufficient plea in justification. Andrews v. Mitchell, supra. An answer admitting that defendant procured the warrant and caused the arrest upon the charge mentioned, but denies that it was done maliciously, and without probable cause, and also that plaintiff was tried and acquitted, makes an issue of fact that involves a trial upon the merits of the case. Redman v. Stowers, 12 S. W. 270, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 429. But a plea that defendant, without any malice, consented to become prosecutor as a matter of friendship to another, and on the assurance of the solicitor-general that so doing was only a matter of form, is not a plea of justification. Horn v. Sims, 92 Ga. 421, 17 S. E. 670.

89. Andrews v. Mitchell, 92 Ga. 629, 18 S. E. 1017; Eihlert v. Gommoll, 23 Ohio Cir. Ct. 586, holding that the matter of advice of counsel, to be available, should be pleaded as an affirmative defense; but where no objection is made to the introduction of evidence on that ground, all being heard and considered and submitted to the jury, and the jury charged as to the law relating thereto, the absence of such defense in the pleading is immaterial.

Sufficiency of plea.—A plea to an action for malicious prosecution stating in general terms that defendant had probable cause for the prosecution, without stating the facts, is insufficient. Brown v. Connelly, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 390. But the plea need not state in so many words that defendant was justified in so doing. If from the matter set up justification must be plainly implied or inferred it is sufficient. Andrews v. Mitchell, 92 Ga. 629, 18 S. E. 1017. And see Rigden v. Jordan, 81 Ga. 668, 7 S. E. 857. In an action for malicious prosecution on a charge of arson, defendant pleaded that before the commencement of the prosecution his barn was burned; that plaintiff stated a short time before that that defendant would soon be as poor as plaintiff; that before the fire was extinguished, and while some people were looking at it, plaintiff passed by without stopping or appearing to notice the ruins; and that defendant stated the circumstances to an attorney, who was of the opinion that they amounted to arson, and advised defendant to commence the prosecution. In New York under Code Civ. Faulkner*, 93 N. Y. 515. Faulkner*, supra.

In Texas in an action for damages, actual and exemplary, for wrongfully and maliciously attaching plaintiff's goods, defendants can plead, in mitigation of exemplary damages, that they had, since suit was brought, offered to redeliver the goods. *Billingsley v. answer,⁹³ but when facts constituting probable cause have been pleaded as an affirmative justification in the answer, a reply has been held to be necessary.⁹⁴ If the allegation of an answer, however, really results in a particular denial of a charge which is already covered by a general denial, it is not new matter and needs no reply.⁹⁵

D. Amendment and Supplemental Pleading. In accordance with the general trend of the law on this subject amendments to the pleadings in actions for malicious prosecutions are liberally allowed,⁹⁶ including cases in which the purpose is to conform the pleadings to the proof, upon such terms as may appear proper and just to the court.⁹⁷ But when the amendment is insufficient⁹⁸ or too indefinite⁹⁹ it should not be allowed. Nor has a party a right by a supplemental complaint to establish a cause of action where none existed at the time of the commencement of the suit.¹

E. Bill of Particulars. Plaintiff cannot as a rule be required to furnish a bill of particulars in an action for malicious prosecution.²

F. Exhibits. The action for malicious prosecution is not founded upon the papers in the original proceedings; they need not be attached to the complaint as exhibits.³

G. Variance. Following the general rule as to variance, an essential or substantial⁴ but not an immaterial⁵ difference between the allegations of the declaration and the proof is fatal to plaintiff's case.

H. Alder by Verdict. If the issue joined be such as necessarily requires on trial proof of facts defectively pleaded, whether in substance or form, without which it is not to be presumed either that the judge would have directed the jury to give or that the jury would have given the verdict, such imperfection is cured by the verdict.⁶ The general but not universal⁷ rule is that the verdict will make good only imperfectly or insufficiently pleaded statements of facts,⁸ and that if the pleading totally omits to state any essential or constituent element of the action a verdict will not cure the defect.⁹

XIV. EVIDENCE.¹⁰

A. Burden of Proof and Presumptions—1. IN GENERAL. The burden of proof in the first instance according to the general rule¹¹ rests upon plaintiff when

If the proof substantially shows what is alleged in the declaration, it is sufficient. Peterson v. Toner, 80 Mich. 350, 45 N. W. 346.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 111.

This is especially true where the objection is not made until at the trial (Beyersdorf v. Sump, 39 Minn. 495, 41 N. W. 101, 12 Am. St. Rep. 678; Hershey v. O'Neill, 36 Fed. 168), or after verdict (Robson v. Comstock, 8 Wis. 372).

7. See cases cited infra, this note.

Want of an averment that the prosecution is at an end would be a fatal defect to the declaration on a demurrer (Forster v. Orr, 17 Oreg. 447, 21 Pac. 440), but cannot be taken advantage of after verdict (Weinberger v. Shelly, 6 Watts & S. (Pa.) 336).

An averment that defendant abandoned the charge, and that the prosecution is wholly ended, is good after verdict. Cotton v. Wilson, Minor (Ala.) 203.

An omission to aver the termination of the suit is cured by verdict. Rea v. Lewis, Minor (Ala.) 382; Wall v. Toomey, 52 Conn. 35; Spaids v. Barrett, 57 Ill. 289, 11 Am. Rep. 10; Olson v. Neal, 63 Iowa 214, 18 N. W. 863; Young v. Gregory, 3 Call (Va.) 446, 2 Am. Dec. 556. But in Missouri it is held that the failure to aver the termination of the former suit is an essential constituent element of the cause of action, and is not cured by verdict. Freymark v. McKinney Bread Co., 55 Mo. App. 435.

8. Grove v. Kansas City, 75 Mo. 672.

9. See cases cited infra, this note.

Failure to allege malice is held to be a fatal defect, which is not cured by verdict. Dauchy v. Salisbury, 29 Conn. 124; Mitchell v. Silver Lake Lodge No. 84, I. O. O. F., 29 Oreg. 294, 304, 45 Pac. 798, where Moore, J., said: "The absence of an allegation of malice in the complaint was a failure to state a cause of action, and not a defective statement which was cured by the verdict." Compare Spengler v. Davy, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 381.

Failure to allege want of probable cause.—So in Gibson v. Waterhouse, 4 Me. 226, it was held that the want of an allegation of probable cause was an omission which was not cured by verdict, nor was it supplied by an allegation that the prosecution was unjust. In Ellis v. Thilman, 3 Call (Va.) 3, the allegation was that the prosecution was malicious and without just cause. In Young v. Gregory, 3 Call (Va.) 446, 2 Am. Dec. 556, it was alleged that the proceedings were had maliciously and without any legal or justifiable cause. And in Kirtley v. Deck, 2 Munf. (Va.) 10, 5 Am. Dec. 445, the allegation was that defendant falsely and maliciously conspired, etc., to prefer a false and malicious prosecution, etc.; but there was no averment that the prosecution was without probable cause. In each of the foregoing Virginia cases it was held that the declaration was radically defective and was not cured by verdict. Compare Spengler v. Davy, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 381.

An exception to this rule has been recognized, in cases arising out of attachment proceedings. Plaintiff may allege in one count the wrongful attachment and the existence of malice, and, if he fails in establishing malice, he may recover such actual damages caused him by the attachment as are secured by the attachment bond, if it was wrongful. Fry v. Estes, 52 Mo. App. 1. And see Kirksey v. Jones, 7 Ala. 622; McLaughlin v. Davis, 14 Kan. 168; Reed v. Samuels, 22 Tex. 114, 73 Am. Dec. 253. These cases seem to rest on the theory that the statute recognizes a liability in the bond for an attachment which is wrongful, even though not malicious, hence the party aggrieved may either sue in debt on the undertaking, or in case for the wrong.

12. Griffin v. Chubb, 7 Tex. 603, 58 Am. Dec. 85, holding that where a general denial is pleaded, in an action for malicious prosecution, plaintiff must prove that he has been prosecuted by defendant, either criminally or in a civil suit, and that the prosecution is at an end; that it was instituted maliciously, and without probable cause; and that he has sustained damages thereby.

Mo. Rev. St. (1879) § 2100, provides that, when the grand jury ignores a bill against a person committed by a magistrate, the costs shall be paid by the state if the grand jury shall certify that there was probable cause for the prosecution. Where the record only shows that the bill was ignored, and judgment was entered against the state for costs, it must be presumed, in a collateral proceeding for malicious prosecution, that such certificate was made. Miller v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. 898.

16. Wood v. Tinnell, 17 Am. L. Reg. N. The connection of defendant with the prosecution is a fact which must be established. Klug v. McPhee, 16 Colo. App. 39, 63 Pac. 709. For a malicious prosecution in procuring an indictment against plaintiff, to sustain an action it must appear that the proceedings under the indictment are legally at an end. Whether or not this rule applies to an indictment found in a foreign country, under our federal constitution and the laws of congress relating to fugitives from justice escaping from one state into another, and those relating to the authentication of records and judicial proceedings, it is applicable to an indictment found in a different state from that in which the action is brought. Pratt v. Page, 18 Wis. 337.

Limits of rule.—The rule that plaintiff must prove at the trial that the alleged malicious prosecution has resulted in his favor does not apply to a case arising in obtaining a peace warrant. Hyde v. Greuch, 62 Md. 577. Nor is plaintiff bound to prove that he was acquitted by the jury promptly, without hesitation, delay, or deliberation. Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217; *Scott v. Canada.—Malcolm v. Perth Mut. F. Ins. Co., 29 Ont. 717 [affirming 29 Ont. 406].

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 113.

Prima facie showing—Slight proof.—It is incumbent on plaintiff to make some proof that there was no reasonable ground for the charge, and that it was without probable cause to sustain it (Anderson v. Callaway, 2 Houst. (Del.) 324); the burden does not devolve on defendant; the fact must be shown prima facie by plaintiff before he can recover (Davis v. Cook, 3 Greene (Iowa) 539). Want of probable cause, although negative in its form and character, must be proved by plaintiff, when put in issue, by some affirmative evidence. Lavender v. Hudgens, 32 Ark. 763; Ventress v. Rosser, 73 Ga. 534; Bousch v. Fidelity, etc., Co., 100 Va. 735, 42 S. E. 877. But slight proof may be sufficient in view of the difficulty of establishing it. Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1; Barbour v. Gettings, 26 U. C. Q. B. 544.

A preponderance of evidence that defendant did not have probable cause to institute the prosecution is necessary (Palmer v. Richardson, 70 Ill. 544; Epstein v. Berkowsky, 64 Ill. App. 498; Skala v. Rus, 60 Ill. App. 479; Legallee v. Blaisdell, 134 Mass. 473); especially where there is evidence both for and against the truth of a plea of justification, the jury should find against the plea unless it is sustained by a preponderance of the evidence (Mitchell v. Andrews, 94 Ga. 611, 20 S. E. 130). However, it is not incumbent upon plaintiff, in proof of want of probable cause, to give in evidence all the testimony introduced before the magistrate, in order that the court may determine whether there was or was not probable cause. Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217.

Burden of proof shifts to defendant to show probable cause, where plaintiff has made out some jurisdictions that onus is thrown on defendant²² on a plea of probable cause,²³ or where it is shown that there has been a voluntary dismissal of a civil action,²⁴ or an arrest and dismissal,²⁵ or a discharge of a criminal proceeding²⁶ for want of sufficient proof²⁷ after full investigation.²⁸

4. WANT OF PROBABLE CAUSE AND MALICE. The burden of proving the concurrence of malice and want of probable cause is on plaintiff.²⁹ a prima facie case of want of probable cause. Martin v. Corscadden, (Mont. 1906) 86 Pac. 33; MacDonald v. Schroeder, 214 Pa. St. 411, 63 Atl. 1024.

Until plaintiff has proved express malice, he cannot require defendant to prove a probable cause. Frowman v. Smith, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Pa.) 7, 12 Am. Dec. 265.

Malice may be inferred by the jury from an utter absence of probable cause, but in such case the absence of probable cause, to form the basis of a presumption of malice, should be shown affirmatively. McCormick v. Conway, 12 La. Ann. 53.

In an action for malicious prosecution for stealing, however, it is not necessary for plaintiff, in order to show a want of probable cause, to prove a good title to the property stolen, or that defendant actually knew it. Sexton v. Brock, 15 Ark. 345.

Plaintiff's unexplained neglect to testify may be considered by the jury on the question of want of probable cause. Pullen v. Glidden, 68 Me. 559.

22. Thus where plaintiff was arrested on a charge of an intention to depart from the country and remove his property in order to defraud creditors, and the arrest is made as he was stepping into the cars, although there was ample opportunity to have executed the process during the two preceding days, the burden of proving probable cause is on defendant. Widmaier v. Mellert, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 515.

If want of probable cause is shown by plaintiff, the burden of proof, in the absence of malice, is then thrown on defendant. Le Maistre v. Hunter, Brightly (Pa.) 494.

Where a prosecution is commenced for the purpose of extorting money the burden of proof is on defendant. Prough v. Entriiken, 11 Pa. St. 81.

New York.—Morris v. Corson, 7 Cow. 281, where defendant pleaded the truth of the facts involved in the prosecution, which was for felony, it was an assumption of the burden of proving the probable cause, and plaintiff need not in the first instance prove a want of it.

5. MALICE. Plaintiff must prove that the conduct of defendant was such as to lead to the inference that the proceedings were not undertaken from public or proper motives, but from malice.³⁰

6. DAMAGES. Except where damages are presumed³¹ the burden is on plaintiff to show that he suffered damage and what damage he in fact suffered.³²

B. Admissibility Under Pleadings. Evidence is not admissible³³ unless it concerns a matter in issue by the pleadings,³⁴ except as to controversies litigated

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Malicious Prosecution," § 114.

An instruction that, "if you believe from the evidence that the defendant had probable cause, and instituted the proceedings against the plaintiff and caused said writ to be issued in good faith and without malice, then you must find defendant not guilty," is erroneous, as the burden is on plaintiff to show malice and want of probable cause. Emery v. Ginnan, 24 Ill. App. 65.

By a preponderance of evidence plaintiff must show that the prosecution was begun by defendant with malice and without probable cause. Barber v. Scott, 92 Iowa 52, 60 N. W. 497; Christian v. Hanna, 58 Mo. App. 37.

Clear proof, etc.—While other courts hold that it cannot be maintained without clear proof of malice and the absence of probable cause (Maloney v. Doane, 15 La. 278, 35 Am. Dec. 204); and that plaintiff was acquitted (Scott v. Shelor, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 891); or that the suit or proceeding was finally determined before action brought for the injury (Emery v. Ginnan, 24 Ill. App. 65).

Facts neutralizing each other.—Where a magistrate, after hearing, has committed an accused person, and the grand jury has ignored the bill, these two facts neutralize each other, and plaintiff to sustain his action must produce other evidence of malice, and want of probable cause for the institution of the prosecution. Miller v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. 898.

Missouri.—Finley v. St. Louis Refrigerator, etc., Co., 99 Mo. 559, 13 S. W. 87, it being sufficient to show that defendant either commenced or continued the prosecution maliciously.

Pennsylvania.—Travis v. Smith, 1 Pa. St. 234, 44 Am. Dec. 125, holding that one who institutes criminal proceedings against another rashly, wantonly, or wickedly is responsible as he is conclusively presumed to have acted maliciously.

West Virginia.—Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1, holding that actual malice, a design to injure plaintiff, or fraud and oppression may be inferred where a prosecution for larceny was instituted to get possession of certain oil, defendant's claim to which was not well founded, and defendants instructed the constable not to serve the warrant if he could get the oil, although advice of counsel was sought.

Defendant's character for veracity is not a proper subject of inquiry, unless made so by the pleading. Rogers v. Lamb, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 155; Baker v. Hopkins, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 587.

Evidence respecting the character of defendant's wife and son for peace and quietness is inadmissible. Horne v. Sullivan, 83 Ill. 30.

Malice of defendant.—It is not competent for the purpose of showing malice to admit testimony showing that plaintiff had been arrested at the instance of defendants in Washington, D. C., one year before the pending trial, and four years after the suit was brought. Acts done so long after the original cause of action are not to be supposed in any sense a part of the original matter. Shipman v. Fletcher, 20 D. C. 245.

Under a plea of justification, advice of private counsel as well as of the solicitor-general upon the statement made by defendant to them, which was substantially the same as that sworn to by him on trial, is admissible. Ventress v. Rosser, 73 Ga. 534.

by consent.³⁵ Under the general denial, or general issue, facts showing the existence of probable cause,³⁶ and the non-existence of malice,³⁷ the guilt of plaintiff,³⁸ and all circumstances attending the transactions which tend to show defendant's motive³⁹ may be offered in evidence.⁴⁰

C. Admissibility Under Usual Rules of Evidence — 1. IN GENERAL. Extent and limits of rule.—It is competent for defendant to show, for the purpose of proving probable cause, the notorious bad character of plaintiff for honesty (Miller v. Brown, 3 Mo. 127, 23 Am. Dec. 693); that his only occupation was that of horse-racing and gambling (Martin v. Hardesty, 27 Ala. 458, 62 Am. Dec. 773); the quarrelsome disposition of plaintiff, and that he had threatened defendant, and would be likely to carry such threats into execution (Sherwood v. Reed, 35 Conn. 450, 95 Am. Dec. 284); and that plaintiff was, at the time of the prosecution, generally reputed to be guilty of acts similar to the one for which he was prosecuted, upon the question of probable cause (Barron v. Mason, 31 Vt. 189), but not other facts not connected with the prosecution complained of (Gregory v. Thomas, 2 Bibb. (Ky.) 236, 5 Am. Dec. 608). But evidence of the bad reputation of plaintiff "among the men and parties in the same business with him in this community" is inadmissible. Eschbach v. Hurtt, 47 Md. 61. So also, where a mother and her thirteen-year-old son, having been arrested for larceny and acquitted, the bad character of the mother for honesty is not competent evidence for defendant in a suit by the son for malicious prosecution. *Bruce v. b. Of Defendant. Evidence of defendant's character for truth, either at the time of the original proceeding or at the trial of the action of malicious prosecution, is not admissible until after he has testified thereto and then only for the purpose of determining his credibility.⁶⁴

3. FINANCIAL CONDITION OF PARTIES. In an action for malicious prosecution having for its foundation an alleged malicious attachment, plaintiff's financial condition is competent evidence on the question of probable cause.⁶⁵ It has been regarded as error⁶⁶ and as proper to show defendant's financial standing and ability to respond to judgment.⁶⁷

4. DEFENDANT'S CONNECTION WITH ORIGINAL PROCEEDING. It is proper to show that the present defendant was the cause of the original prosecution⁶⁸ by circumstantial evidence,⁶⁹ by conduct of defendant or his servant,⁷⁰ although subsequent in time to the arrest,⁷¹ or by the record;⁷² and per contra to show that defendant was not such cause.⁷³

5. PROBABLE CAUSE OR WANT THEREOF — a. In General. All competent evidence,⁷⁴

Atl. 465, 54 Am. Rep. 170, holding that where the declaration charges injury to character, evidence on part of defendant, in mitigation of damages, tending to show the bad reputation of plaintiff is admissible.

62. Finley v. St. Louis Refrigerator, etc., Co., 99 Mo. 559, 13 S. W. 87, holding that where injury to plaintiff's good name and reputation in his business is alleged as an element of damage, there is no error in allowing proof that at the time of the prosecution plaintiff was not of good credit.

63. Hart v. McLaughlin, 51 N. Y. App. Div. 411, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 827. And see Barge v. Weems, 109 Ga. 685, 35 S. E. 65; Neys v. Taylor, 12 S. D. 488, 81 N. W. 901.

Plaintiff is not bound to prove his good character in order to recover in malicious prosecution. It is therefore new matter, and as such must be specially pleaded. Degenhart v. Schmidt, 7 Mo. App. 117.

It is competent for plaintiff to prove by evidence dehors the record who in fact acted as the prosecutor in the alleged malicious prosecution (Knauer v. Morrow, 23 Kan. 360), and what the officer said at the time of the arrest as to the instructions from defendant may be shown by plaintiff (Reynolds v. Haywood, 77 Hun (N. Y.) 131, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 467. Contra, Womack v. Circle, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 192).

But an order in the criminal prosecution designating defendant as the prosecutor and taxing him with costs is not admissible against him either to show malice or the want of probable cause, as it adjudges nothing as between the parties. Coble v. Huffines, 132 N. C. 399, 43 S. E. 909, 133 N. C. 422, 45 S. E. 760.

including statements of third persons,⁷⁵ but not mere rumors⁷⁶ and other proceedings,⁷⁷ which evidence naturally tends to establish probable cause,⁷⁸ or want of probable cause⁷⁹ at the time of the institution of the original proceeding,⁸⁰ and as it is sometimes held which is shown to have come to defendant's knowledge,⁸¹ is admissible.

Evidence of: Character see supra, XIV, C, 2; Financial condition see supra, XIV, C, 3.

75. Where the question is, whether the party acted prudently, wisely, or in good faith, the statements of third persons on which he acted, whether true or false, is original evidence.

Letter to plaintiff in attachment containing facts tending to strengthen the circumstances already known to her, according to her own testimony, going to show probable cause for believing there existed a ground for attachment, is admissible. Brown v. Master, 104 Ala. 451, 16 So. 443.

That most of the debt was due for usurious interest, when the judgment in the attachment suit is for the whole sum claimed, is inadmissible. Such judgment is conclusive of probable cause until reversed, set aside, or its validity impaired by the judgment of some competent tribunal. Jones v. Kirksey, 10 Ala. 839.

Evidence is not admissible to show that plaintiff became convinced, and admitted that his testimony in the first action could not be true, in the absence of any showing that defendant had knowledge of the facts disclosed by it (Driggs v. Burton, 44 Vt. 124); to show a conversation between strangers to the action imputing an attempt on the part of defendant to procure testimony against plaintiff by means of bribery (Valiquette v. McMahon, 30 Ill. App. 181); to show conversations between defendant and third persons collateral to the issue (Holden v. Merritt, 92 Iowa 707, 61 N. W. 390); to show a statement by defendant's clerk not made in connection with the action claimed to have been malicious (Seovill v. Glasner, 79 Mo. 449); or to show declarations of a police captain after plaintiff's arrest that defendant had had plaintiff arrested, in the absence of proof that the captain was defendant's agent in making the arrest (Diel v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 27 Mo. App. 454).

And where the question at issue is that of probable cause, false representations made to a third person, without design that they should reach the prosecutor and influence his conduct, are not admissible. Chrisman v. Carney, 33 Ark. 316.

89. Bullock v. Lindsay, 9 Gray (Mass.) 30; Carpenter v. Halsey, 57 N. Y. 657. Thus where in an action for malicious prosecution of plaintiff for maliciously removing a fence between his land and land of defendant, the dividing line between which had been settled by arbitration, evidence of prior wrongful removals of the fence by plaintiff, before the submission to arbitration, is inadmissible to prove probable cause for the prosecution. Tillotson v. Warner, 3 Gray (Mass.) 574.

Evidence that plaintiff was in the habit of carrying his gun with him when going about his farm, offered to rebut the presumption that defendant had probable cause to believe he intended a breach of the peace, was incompetent, where there was no evidence that defendant knew of such practice. Killebrew v. Carlisle, 97 Ala. 535, 12 So. 167.

94. See supra, IV.

Admissibility of other indictments see Provident Sav. L. Assur. Soc. v. Johnson, 72 S. W. 754, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1902; Coble v. Huffines, 133 N. C. 422, 45 S. E. 760. Defendant caused plaintiff to be indicted twice, and the prosecuting attorney entered a nolle prosequi on the second indictment, after an acquittal on the first, on the ground that he had been acquitted of the offense charged; it was held that it might be shown that the two prosecutions were for distinct offenses, and therefore that there was probable cause for the latter. White v. Ray, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 467.

However the judgment awarding costs against a prosecutor for want of probable cause is not admissible against such person in an action for malicious prosecution. McAllister v. Johnson, 108 Iowa 42, 78 N. W. 790. Nor can defendant give in evidence a plea of justification to the action complained of, and a demurrer which was sustained. Stone v. Powell, 5 Mo. 435.

96. The reasons of the justice for discharging defendant, contained in the record, are immaterial in a subsequent action for malicious prosecution (Kansas, etc., Coal Co. v. Galloway, 71 Ark. 351, 74 S. E. 521, 100 Am. St. Rep. 79; Chapman v. Dodd, 10 Minn. 350; Martin v. Corscadden, (Mont. 1906) 86 Pac. 33; Hinson v. Powell, 109 N. C. 534, 14 S. But the docket of a justice of the peace, although it stated therein in effect that he found no evidence in the case sufficient to justify the conviction of plaintiff of the offense charged against him, where such was the conclusion the law required him to reach, is admissible. *Price v. acquittal⁹⁸ or discharge,⁹⁹ and the discontinuance of the original proceeding¹ have been held on the one hand to be admissible to prove a final termination and nothing else;² and on the other hand to show also want of probable cause³ subject to rebuttal, contradiction, or explanation.⁴

e. Original Proceeding and Evidence Given. Evidence concerning the former trial or proceeding may be admitted on the trial of the action for malicious prosecution when material and within the issue,⁵ and competent.⁶ All competent⁷ evidence pertaining to the trial of the former proceeding,⁸ including what evidence was there given,⁹ so far as it is relevant and material to the issues of probable cause¹⁰ in issue on malicious prosecution, is admissible. The testimony of defendant as to facts peculiarly within his own knowledge given upon that trial is admissible for¹¹ or against him for causing that proceeding,¹² even though such

N. W. 220, holding that a special finding of a jury, in a criminal proceeding, that the complaint was made without probable cause, is not admissible. Nor is the testimony of one who served as a juror (Scott v. Shelor, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 891) or as a grand juror, in such a prosecution (Scotten v. Longfellow, 40 Ind. 23) admissible to show that the jury deliberated on the question of guilt or innocence of the accused party.

3. Miles v. Walker, 66 Nebr. 728, 92 N. W. 1014. See Thomas v. Smith, 51 Mo. App. 605, holding that where defendant has had plaintiff arrested for larceny of part of the money in dispute, and after plaintiff's discharge he has been cast in a civil suit for the money, the civil judgment is relevant to prove probable cause.

4. Defendant may show that it was the result of a compromise (Carroll v. New Jersey Cent. R. Co., 134 Fed. 684); or settlement (Loftus v. Meyer, 84 N. Y. Suppl. 861); or that plaintiff was guilty of the offense charged notwithstanding his acquittal (Mack v. Sharp, 138 Mich. 448, 101 N. W. 631). That the affidavit in attachment did not allege as facts the grounds on which the arrest was vindicated is admissible to show want of probable cause. Eagleton v. Kabrich, 66 Mo. App. 231.

Evidence explanatory of the voluntary dismissal of the action complained of is admissible on behalf of defendant. Swindell v. Houck, 2 Ind. App. 519, 28 N. E. 736.

That such proceedings were dismissed by the prosecuting attorney entitles defendant to show by the prosecuting attorney why he dismissed the proceedings. Anderson v. Friend, 71 Ill. 475.

5. York v. Webster, 66 Ind. 50, holding that unusual delay in commencing the prosecution complained of after the alleged commission of the crime, and in bringing such prosecution to a trial, after it was commenced, is admissible.

However in the absence of evidence that defendant induced the committing magistrate to require an excessive bail-bond, evidence that such bond was required is not admissible. Davis v. Seeley, 91 Iowa 583, 60 N. W. 183, 51 Am. St. Rep. 356. Nor is an explanation of the action of the grand jury. Owens v. Owens, 81 Md. 518, 32 Atl. 247.

Whether the jury gave credit to the evidence of plaintiff in the original action or to the other witnesses is not material. Rigden v. Jordan, 81 Ga. 668, 7 S. E. 857; Parkhurst v. Masteller, 57 Iowa 474, 10 N. W. 864.

But where plaintiff and another were both jointly charged with a crime, it is not competent in a suit for malicious prosecution to prove that evidence was given at the preliminary examination of threats made by plaintiff's co-defendant some time before the offense, and of an attempt by him to induce a witness to make false statements in his defense, the only evidence of concert between plaintiff and his co-defendant being the testimony of a witness that he saw them commit the offense. *Jordan v. 26. Lansky v. Prettyman, 140 Mich. 40, 103 N. W. 538; Perrenoud v. Helm, 65 Nebr. 77, 90 N. W. 980. In Whitfield v. Westbrook, 40 Miss. 311, it was held that to allow the witness to state simply that he "stated all the facts in his knowledge" instead of stating what facts he communicated would enable the witness to evade the real question upon which the matter of defense rested. But in Brinsley v. Schulz, 124 Wis. 426, 102 N. W. 918, it was held that such testimony in general terms was sufficient to show that all facts material to the matter known to defendants were stated to the officer.

33. Evidence of malice toward other persons than the complaining parties is not admissible. Barton v. Kavanaugh, 12 La. Ann. 332. The jury ought not, on the question of malice, to take into consideration facts establishing against some of defendants a case of false imprisonment, which constitutes a distinct cause of action and for which they might be liable in another suit. Carpenter v. Sheldon, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 77. Contra, Thomas v. Norris, 64 N. C. 780, where plaintiff and another were charged with stealing a blanket; plaintiff was allowed to show defendant's malice toward such other person as tending to show malice against himself.

But the general bad reputation of plaintiff's mother, as a peaceable and orderly person, cannot be admitted to show that defendant acted in good faith in procuring a peace warrant against her son. Hyde v. Gruech, 62 Md. 577.

Commission of similar acts.—For the purpose of proving want of malice, it is competent for defendant to show that plaintiff was at the time of the prosecution generally reputed to be guilty of acts similar to the one for which he was prosecuted. Barron v. Mason, 31 Vt. 189.

35. Ammerman v. Crosby, 26 Ind. 451. See, generally, EVIDENCE, 16 Cyc. 1192 et seq.

To rebut malice defendant may prove that a certain person communicated to another, with a request that the latter would make it known to defendant, the fact that the former saw plaintiff do the criminal act of which he was accused, and that this information was communicated to defendant before the complaint against plaintiff was made. Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217.

Common report that plaintiff had committed the alleged crime is not of itself sufficient to show probable cause; it may, with other circumstances, tend to negative malice, and is admissible in defendant's behalf. Pullen v. Glidden, 68 Me. 559.

ing,⁴⁹ connected with the transactions⁵⁰ and tending to prove intent, is admissible upon the issue of malice.⁵¹

f. Original Proceeding. Any proceedings taken or any testimony taken in the former action having a natural tendency to show malice may be proved;⁵² but evidence having no bearing upon the question of malice is immaterial and should be excluded.⁵³

g. Other Actions. Evidence of other judicial proceedings tending either to establish malice⁵⁴ or to rebut the inference of malice⁵⁵ is admissible.

h. Advice of Counsel. Defendant may repel the inference of malice by showing that he acted upon legal advice.⁵⁶

But see Christian v. Hanna, 58 Mo. App. 37, holding that a conversation, had between prosecutor and accused after the beginning of the trial which tended to show malice, but not lack of probable cause for the continuance of the trial, is not admissible.

52. Plaintiff may introduce the record (Dreux v. Domec, 18 Cal. 83; Olmstead v. Partridge, 16 Gray (Mass.) 381. Contra, Wilmerton v. Sample, 39 Ill. App. 60), as well as the testimony given upon the former trial (Logan v. Maytag, 57 Iowa 107, 10 N. W. 311), the conduct of the parties before the justice (Thurston v. Wright, 77 Mich. 96, 43 N. Suppl. 467), and defendant's reasons for dismissal of former action (Collins v. Fisher, 50 Ill. 359), are admissible on the question of malice.

A judgment reciting finding of court that prosecution was frivolous and malicious and imposing costs on defendant is admissible to prove malice. Coble v. Huffines, 132 N. C. 399, 43 S. E. 909.

Evidence as to what occurred between defendant and the magistrate at the time the information on which plaintiff was arrested was sworn to was admissible on the question of malice, although it did not constitute a defense. Fetzer v. Burlew, 114 N. Y. App. Div. 650, 99 N. Y. Suppl. 1100.

Where defendant is disqualified to testify he may prove by the magistrate what he testified to before him (Guerrant v. Tinder, Gilm. (Va.) 36), but not rehearsals of testimony given by witnesses other than defendant (John v. Bridgman, 27 Ohio St. 22).

7. FAVORABLE TERMINATION OF ORIGINAL PROCEEDING. The fact that an original judicial proceeding had been prosecuted to a final termination in favor of plaintiff, when within the issues,⁵⁷ may be proved⁵⁸ by conventionally appropriate and competent evidence,⁵⁹ viz., by the production of the original records,⁶⁰ or a certified or examined copy thereof,⁶¹ or of secondary evidence when a proper foundation has been laid.⁶² Specifically, the record of the quarter sessions,⁶³ or of the police court,⁶⁴ entries in the justice's docket,⁶⁵ the original warrant with the necessary in such a case for defendant to show what facts he stated to his counsel when he obtained such advice); Sehon v. Whitt, 92 S. W. 280, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 1222, 92 S. W. 280, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 691; Cooper v. Utterbach, 37 Md. 282.

A letter of the prosecuting attorney authorizing the commencement of the prosecution complained of is admissible for such purpose. Thurston v. Wright, 77 Mich. 96, 43 N. W. 860.

Declarations of plaintiff's attorney in a trover suit, not made in plaintiff's presence nor brought home to him, are inadmissible to show malice in bringing such suit. Farrar v. Brackett, 86 Ga. 463, 12 S. E. 686.

57. If the allegation is made part of the description of the instrument referred to, it must be literally proved to admit it in evidence (Munns v. De Nemours, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,926, 3 Wash. 31; Purcell v. Macnamara, 9 East 157, 9 Rev. Rep. 578; Pope v. Foster, 4 T. R. 590), while if it be one of matter of substance only, it may be substantially proved (Usher v. Whiting, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 250; Richards v. Foulks, 3 Ohio 66). See Cooper v. Langway, 76 Tex. 121, 13 S. W. 179.

Matter not pertinent to issues.—When the transcript or record contains matter not pertinent to the issue on trial, the proper course is to apply to the court to prevent the reading in evidence of the improper matter or to instruct the jury to disregard it. Granger v. Warrington, 8 Ill. 299; Casey v. Sevatson, 30 Minn. 516, 16 N. W. 407.

Declarations.—In Bennett v. Black, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 39, in an action for malicious prosecution, on a charge of robbery in taking a slave from defendant, the declaration of the person claiming title to the slave "that he had determined to abandon his claim to the slave," although made in the absence of plaintiff, was held admissible in evidence.

An affidavit alleging malicious prosecutions, that plaintiff was arrested and brought before an alderman for breach of the peace, that defendant neglected to prosecute the suit, and that it was ended and determined, was held insufficient, as it did not set forth what action was taken by the alderman. Walker v. Curran, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 113.

The decision of the court discharging plaintiff of the crime charged against him has no relevancy on the question of probable cause, but is only relevant to prove that the prosecution has ended. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Bryant, 105 Va. 403, 54 S. E. 320.

But the records can only be used to prove the fact that such judgment was rendered; when it is sought to use it as evidence of ulterior facts, that it is sought to bind a litigant to recitations in a record to which he was not a party, and about which determination he had no voice or direction, that portion should be excluded. Sweeney v. Perney, 40 Kan. 102, 19 Pac. 328; Casey v. Sevatson, 30 Minn. 516, 16 N. W. 407.

Defendant's peculiar situation and circumstances at the time suit was brought may be shown. Nichols v. Bronson, 2 Day (Conn.) 211.

Evidence of attachments immediately following defendant's attachment may be shown. Grimes v. Bowerman, 92 Mich. 258, 52 N. W. 751.

Condition of apartment in jail in which he was confined may be shown. Driggs v. Morgan, 10 Rob. (La. 119. But see Zebley v. Storey, 117 Pa. St. 478, 12 Atl. 569.

Duration of imprisonment may be shown. King v. Colvin, 11 R. I. 582.

Search for exiled plaintiff.—Where one of the injuries complained of was that defendants by threats and violence had maliciously driven plaintiff into exile and forced him to abandon his home, family, and business, it is competent to prove that search had been made for him. Pullen v. Lane, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 249.

Too remote.—In an action by partners for damages from the issue of an attachment against them maliciously, and without probable cause, evidence of the disposition subsequently of the partnership property, including the appointment of a receiver thereof, in a suit for dissolution of the partnership, and the loss and shrinkage in the assets on the resulting from conditions over which defendant was not directly responsible, and over which it does not appear that he exercised control.⁷⁷

b. Mitigation of Damages. Plaintiff's general bad character⁷⁸ or his reputation for insanity,⁷⁹ and any relevant evidence⁸⁰ explanatory of defendant's motives,⁸¹ and, in cases in which exemplary damages might be awarded, advice of counsel may be proven in mitigation of damages.⁸²

c. Aggravation of Damages. The action of malicious prosecution being one in which exemplary damages⁸³ are allowable, evidence of defendant's pecuniary receiver's sale, is not admissible as such damages are too remote. Cochrane v. Quackenbush, 29 Minn. 376, 13 N. W. 154. So it is error to allow plaintiff to show the course of his business during the nine years before the attachment, during which time his connecting stores had come to have twenty-three departments, and to testify that there had been a steady increase in the business every year, but that the business for the part of the year after the attachment had decreased. Zinn v. Rice, 161 Mass. 571, 37 N. E. 747.

77. Marks v. Hastings, 101 Ala. 165, 13 So. 297 (evidence as to the number of persons present when the officer went to arrest plaintiff); Garvey v. Wayson, 42 Md. 178 (evidence that, pursuant to the regular custom of the detective police department, his name was entered on the detective police annals, and open to the inspection and use of the police force, as tending to show the publicity of the charge made against him and the consequent injury).

Insult.—Evidence that the officer making the arrest acted in an insulting manner toward plaintiff is not admissible, without offering to prove that such conduct was instigated by defendant. Vansickle v. Brown, 68 Mo. 627.

Plaintiff's surroundings and treatment while in prison cannot be shown, to enhance damages, where defendant had no control over the public officials. Zebley v. Storey, 117 Pa. St. 478, 12 Atl. 569.

Oregon.—Gee v. Culver, 13 Ore. 598, 11 Pac. 302.

West Virginia.—Vinal v. Core, 18 W. Va. 1.

Defendant may show, in mitigation of damages, that after the prosecution by him plaintiff's character was bad on subjects unconnected with the felony for which he was prosecuted. Bostick v. Rutherford, 11 N. C. 83.

Irrelevant evidence.—Evidence that plaintiff had committed a different theft (Patterson v. Garlock, 39 Mich. 447); that the criminal prosecution was dismissed at the instance of defendant, without the knowledge of plaintiff (Owens v. Owens, 81 Md. 518, 32 Atl. 247); that plaintiff had instituted a similar complaint against him (Bliss v. Franklin, 13 Allen (Mass.) 244); and the record of an action of replevin for the same property, which was alleged to have been stolen to show former recovery (Schofield v. Ferrers, 47 Pa. St. 194, 86 Am. Dec. 532), is irrelevant, and is not admissible in mitigation of damages. And so, in an action for malicious prosecution on a charge that plaintiff had embezzled goods from defendant's store, which plaintiff had been authorized to sell, evidence that plaintiff had taken land at a price greatly above its real value, in exchange for the store, is not admissible in mitigation of damages. Wheeler v. Hanson, 161 Mass. 370, 37 N. E. 382, 42 Am. St. Rep. 408. Nor is the fact that plaintiff might, in the criminal proceeding, have shortened his imprisonment by availing himself of a preliminary examination, admissible in mitigation of damages, unless there is affirmative proof that his motive in waiving examination and exposing himself to continued imprisonment was to enhance damages. King v. Colvin, 11 R. I. 582.

Ohio.—Johnson v. McDaniel, 5 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 717, 7 Ohio N. P. 467. In White v. Tucker, 16 Ohio St. 468, it was held that defendant might show, on the question of mitigation of damages, that he went before the magistrate, and after he had related to him all the facts and circumstances of the case, and before making the affidavit, the magistrate told him that, if the statement was true, the accused was guilty of the crime charged, and that it was upon this assurance that the affidavit was made and the prosecution instituted.

circumstances may be received,⁸⁴ but not of his social position,⁸⁵ or of his influence in the community.⁸⁶ The condition of plaintiff's family is not to be shown for the purpose of affecting the amount of general damages.⁸⁷ Circumstances of personal insult, indignity, outrage, humiliation, or discomfort are properly shown to aggravate damage.⁸⁸

A. Conduct of Trial. The usual rules as to order of proof,⁹⁰ examination of witnesses,⁹¹ notice to produce,⁹² the necessity of taking exceptions,⁹³ and addresses of counsel to the jury⁹⁴ and the giving of instructions.⁹⁵

B. Province of Court and Jury—1. IN GENERAL. It is the province and duty of the court to determine the preliminary question whether there is any evidence sufficient to justify the submission of the case to the jury.⁹⁶ When that question has been resolved for plaintiff the trial judge should properly instruct the jury,⁹⁷ in which case it is for the jury in accordance with such instructions to determine the credibility of witnesses,⁹⁸ the sufficiency of evidence,⁹⁹ the conflict in testimony,¹ and, if its finding be for plaintiff, the extent of his damages.² If the question be resolved for defendant, it is the duty of the judge to direct a verdict or otherwise render judgment for him.³

2. PROBABLE CAUSE — a. In General. The question of probable cause is an anomalous one.⁴ In nature or logic it is a question of fact;⁵ at the common law it was determined by the court alone.⁶ In England the conduct of the reasonable man appears to be, and according to the letter of the law must be left to the judge, but is in fact left to the jury.⁷ In America it is universally regarded as a mixed question of law and fact.⁸

to render a verdict contrary to the whole law and the whole evidence in the case, the court ought to have the courage to perform its duty, and go where the law leads. Miller v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. 898.

In the early stages of the English law, there can be no doubt that the question of reasonable cause was one of law, for the court. Mr. Stephen (Stephen Mal. Pros.

(1888) *p. 57), after an exhaustive review of the English cases, concludes that this "acknowledged rule has been gradually affected by successive judicial decisions, until the practical burden of deciding whether or not the plaintiff has shown a want of reasonable cause has been, in effect, transferred to the jury." If the evidence is such that a reasonable man would think a person guilty of a felony which has been proved to have been committed, probable cause is established. Molloy v. Long Island R. Co., 59 Hun (N. Y.) 424, 13 N. Y. Suppl. 382 [affirmed in 137 N. Y. 629, 33 N. E. 745].

When the facts are undisputed, or when they fail to show a want of probable cause, a question of law arises which comes within the province of the court to decide. Fagnan v. Knox, 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 41.

A seeming exception to this rule may grow out of the nature of the evidence, as when defendant's belief of the facts which are relied on by plaintiff to prove want of probable cause is a question involved. What that belief was is always a question for the jury. Stewart v. Sonneborn, 98 U. S. 187, 25 L. ed. 116. See also Seibert v. Price, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 438, 40 Am. Dec. 525. And although, in an action for malicious prosecution, the burden is on plaintiff to prove a want of probable cause for the prosecution, and although the evidence be uncontradicted, yet if the facts proved are capable of different inferences, it is for a jury to determine what, under the circumstances, would be the belief and action of men of ordinary prudence. *Heyne v. According to the general, but not universal,¹⁸ opinion, it is error to leave it to the jury not only to determine the facts but also whether they constitute probable cause;¹⁹ the court, not the jury, should draw that inference.²⁰ The court may take a special verdict and determine the question or probable cause thereon as a matter of law;²¹ or it may instruct the jury hypothetically within the range of facts which the evidence tends to establish as to what constitutes probable cause, and thus leave it to the jury to determine only the facts.²²

Want of probable cause is in all cases a question of law, which the court alone is competent to determine, and in relation to which the judge who tries the case is bound to express a positive opinion; and if instead of so doing he leaves it to the jury to determine, not only whether the facts alleged by plaintiff are true, but also whether, if true, they prove want of probable cause, he commits a fatal error. Bulkeley v. Smith, 2 Duer (N. Y.) 261. But where the facts had not been found by the jury, it is erroneous to instruct the jury "that admitting all the testimony in favor of the plaintiff to be true, yet that the plaintiff had not shewn a want of probable cause." Furness v. Porter, Walk. (Miss.) 442.

18. New York rule.—If the facts are undisputed and admit of but one inference, probable cause is a question of law (Anderson v. How, 116 N. Y. 336, 22 N. E. 695; Francis v. Tilyou, 26 N. Y. App. Div. 340, 49 N. Y. Suppl. 799), but if the facts are in dispute or admit of opposing inferences, the question is for the jury (Long Island Bottlers' Union v. Seitz, 180 N. Y. 243, 73 N. E. 20; Wass v. Stephens, 128 N. Y. 123, 28 N. E. 21; Fagnan v. Knox, 66 N. Y. 525; Rawson v. Leggett, 97 N. Y. App. Div. 416, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 5; Ericson v. McBride, 24 Misc. 235, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 620). But, although want of probable cause is a question of law, yet the question may properly be passed upon by the jury, in the absence of any request to the judge to instruct them as to the law. Haupt v. Pohlmann, 16 Abb. Pr. 301.

In Alabama it has been laid down that whether an attachment has been sued out

The presumption of probable cause arising from the finding of a "true bill" by the grand jury warrants the granting of a nonsuit in an action for malicious prosecution where plaintiff rests after proving defendant's information on oath, the issuing of a warrant, arrest, indictment, finding of a "true bill" good character of plaintiff, and malice of defendant. *Brown v. 48. Panton v. Williams, 2 Q. B. 169, 1 G. & D. 504, 10 L. J. Exch. 545, 42 E. C. L. 622. It is error for the court to withdraw the case from the jury and dismiss the action, although there was no contradiction of defendant's testimony, it being competent for the jury to disbelieve the same, although not contradicted (Nigh v. Keifer, 5 Ohio Cir. Ct. 1, 3 Ohio Cir. Dec. 1), or as where the truth or falsity of plaintiff's contention was within the actual knowledge of defendants (Sanders v. Palmer, 55 Fed. 217, 5 C. C. A. 77).

ing that plaintiff was guilty of the offense with which he was charged,⁴⁹ it is error for the court to withdraw the case from the jury. When probable cause or want of probable cause is conclusively shown, the court should so direct the jury and leave other appropriate matters to it for determination.⁵⁰

C. Instructions ⁵¹—1. IN GENERAL. The same general principles governing instructions to the jury in other cases are applicable to actions of malicious prosecutions.⁵²

2. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY IN GENERAL. When any instruction is necessary other than an instruction to find for either party,⁵³ it should be technically correct,⁵⁴ or sufficiently accurate,⁵⁵ complete,⁵⁶ and applicable to the facts under consideration to properly present the question to the jury,⁵⁷ without undue repetition⁵⁸ and without inconsistency.⁵⁹ The instructions must be taken as a whole, and, if so taken, they correctly express the law, they will be upheld.⁶⁰

3. REQUESTS FOR INSTRUCTIONS. It is the duty of the trial court, when requested, to give in his charge any requested instructions not covered by the general charge,⁶¹ which is correct as a proposition of law, and is applicable to the issue.⁶² But error cannot be predicated on the omission to charge upon a point to

Province of court and jury see supra, XV, B, 2.

In some jurisdictions the court should charge hypothetically what facts, if found, would constitute probable cause (Dorr Cattle Co. v. Des Moines Nat. Bank, 127 Iowa 153, 98 N. W. 918; Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 114 Ky. 754, 71 S. W. 921, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1561), or to find the existence or non-existence of probable cause as they believe one state of facts or another exist (Alexander v. Reid, 44 S. W. 211, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 1636. Compare Holliday v. Holliday, 123 Cal. 26, 55 Pac. 703), or to collate all (Florence Oil, etc., Co. v. Huff, 14 Colo. App. 281, 59 Pac. 624) relevant parts of evidence and instruct what facts, if found, constitute probable cause (Williams v. Kyes, 9 Colo. App. 220, 47 Pac. 839).

A mere definition should not be given (Scrivani v. Dondero, 128 Cal. 31, 60 Pac. 463) unless sufficiently supplemented by instructions telling the jury what facts if established in plaintiff's case would or would not constitute probable cause (Maynard v. Sigman, 65 Nebr. 590, 91 N. W. 576). And see Scrivani v. Dondero, supra.

The court may properly instruct the jury that if they find that there were no circumstances connected with the transaction which would warrant a reasonable, dispassionate man in believing plaintiff to have

5. ADVICE OF COUNSEL.⁷² Where there is evidence that defendant consulted counsel before commencing the proceeding, it is proper⁷³ and in appropriate cases necessary⁷⁴ for the court to give consistent⁷⁵ instructions in regard to the law pertaining to the advice of counsel,⁷⁶ including the character of counsel consulted,⁷⁷ defendant's belief,⁷⁸ the truthfulness and completeness of statement,⁷⁹ the advice given,⁸⁰ his good faith and reliance upon the advice given,⁸¹ the degree of proof requisite,⁸² and the extent to which such advice may be a defense.⁸³

40. Brace v. Solner, 1 Alaska 361, 367.

41. In re Sanders, 53 Kan. 191, 197, 36 Pac. 348, 23 L. R. A. 603, as the management of a family, or of the household, or of servants, or of great enterprises, or of great affairs.

42. Com. v. Johnson, 144 Pa. St. 377, 381, 22 Atl. 703.

43. In re Western Counties Steam Bakeries, etc., Co., [1897] 1 Ch. 617, 632, 66 L. J. Ch. 354, 76 L. T. Rep. N. S. 239, 45 Wkly. Rep. 418.

As used in an affidavit of publication of legal notice, it is equivalent to and synonymous with "publisher" or "foreman" (Waters

v. Waters, 7 Misc. (N. Y.) 519, 522, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 1004); as used in the verification of a statement by one in behalf of another it denotes agency (Chicago Lumber Co. v. Osborn, 40 Kan. 168, 172, 19 Pac. 656); as applied to an officer of a corporation, it conveys the idea that to the one thus named has been committed the management of the affairs of the company, and one dealing with the person so held out may assume that his acts are authorized (Saunders v. U. S. Marble Co., 25 Wash. 475, 483, 65 Pac. 782; Carrigan v. Port Crescent Imp. Co., 6 Wash. 590, 591, 34 Pac. 148).

In maritime law it is an agency unknown, and the authority implied from such a position is in that law undefined. Davidson v. Baldwin, 79 Fed. 95, 100, 24 C. C. A. 453.

44. Wheeler, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Lawson, 57 Wis. 400, 401, 15 N. W. 398; Carr v. Racine Commercial Bank, 19 Wis. 272, 273; Upper Mississippi Transp. Co. v. Whittaker, 16 Wis. 220, 221.

45. Brown v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 12 N. D. 61, 65, 95 N. W. 153, 102 Am. St. Rep. 564 [citing Porter v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 1 Nebr. 14, 15; American Express Co. v. Johnson, 17 Ohio St. 641; Foster v. Charles Betcher Lumber Co., 5 S. D. 57, 68, 58 N. W. 9, 49 Am. St. Rep. 859, 23 L. R. A. 490].

47. Hat-Sweat Mfg. Co. v. Davis Sewing Mach. Co., 31 Fed. 294, 296.

The term implies the carrying on of the corporate business or some substantial part thereof by means of an agent who maintains and conducts the same within the limits of the state on account of the foreign corporation. U. S. v. American Bell Tel. Co., 29 Fed. 17, 33.

48. Clinard v. White, 129 N. C. 250, 251, 39 S. E. 960.

management of a corporation, in distinction from the management of a particular branch or department of its business;⁴⁹ a person clothed with general power;⁵⁰ a person having independent discretionary control of the locality where his duties are performed;⁵¹ a person vested by a corporation with general powers involving the exercise of judgment and discretion, as distinguished from an ordinary agent or attorney, who acts in an inferior capacity and under the direction and control of superior authority.⁵² (See, generally, CORPORATIONS; PRINCIPAL AND AGENT; PROCESS.)

MANAGING OWNER. One of several coöwners, to whom the others, or those of them who join in the adventure, have delegated the management of the ship.⁵³ (See, generally, MARITIME LIENS; SHIPPING.)

MANBOTE. A compensation paid the relations of a murdered man by the murderer or his friends.⁵⁴

49. Brewster v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 183, 186.

50. Stubing v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 78 Hun (N. Y.) 610, 28 N. Y. Suppl. 960.

51. Ruland v. Canfield Pub. Co., 10 N. Y. Suppl. 913, 914, 18 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 282.

52. Persons v. Buffalo City Mills, 29 N. Y. App. Div. 45, 48, 51 N. Y. Suppl. 645 [citing Taylor v. Granite State Provident Assoc., 136 N. Y. 343, 346, 32 N. E. 992, 32 Am. St. Rep. 749]; Reddington v. Mariposa Land, etc., Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.) 405, 408 [cited and approved in Great West Min. Co. v. Woodmas of Alston Min. Co., 12 Colo. 46, 52, 20 Pac. 771, 13 Am. St. Rep. 204; Glines v. Supreme Sitting O. of I. H., 20 N. Y. Suppl. 275, 276, 22 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 437].

The term includes the agent of a railroad company described as "General Agent, Passenger Dept., 261 Broadway, N. Y." (Tuchband v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 115 N. Y. 437, 438, 22 N. E. 360); a division superintendent of a railroad, located at a point remote from the general offices of the company (Brayton v. New York, etc., R. Co., 72 Hun (N. Y.) 602, 603, 25 N. Y. Suppl. 264); a general superintendent of a telegraph or telephone company (Barrett v. American Tel., etc., Co., 138 N. Y. 491, 493, 34 N. E. 289); a manager (Pacific Coast R. Co. v. San Luis Obispo County Sup. Ct., 79 Cal. 103, 105, 21 Pac. 609); a person who was in the habit of making the semiannual statements to the bank comptroller and the only person exercising a general supervision over the affairs of the bank (Carr v. Racine Commercial Bank, 19 Wis. 272, 273); a soliciting agent with power to contract (Palmer v. Chicago Herald Co., 70 Fed. 886, 888); and a superintendent of a mining company (Lake County v. Sulphur Bank Quicksilver Min. Co., 68 Cal. 14, 18, 8 Pac. 593).

The term does not include an agent in charge of a branch store belonging to a corporation, having a manager exercising the general control of the corporate business, including that transacted by such agent (Osborne v. Columbia County Farmers' Alliance Corp., 9 Wash. 666, 667, 38 Pac. 160); an attorney in fact, authorized by corporation to apply for a patent to mining lands claimed by it, and to execute such papers as might be necessary for that purpose (Mars v. Oro Fino Min. Co., 7 S. D. 605, 611, 65 N. W.

19); a baggage-master in the employ of a railroad company (Flynn v. Hudson River R. Co., 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 308, 309); a business manager of a corporation (Scorpion Silver Min. Co. v. Marsano, 10 Nev. 370, 382); a captain of a steamboat belonging to a foreign corporation, but transacting business on the waters of this state (Upper Mississippi Transp. Co. v. Whittaker, 16 Wis. 220, 221); a clerk employed in a store belonging to a mining corporation, although he keeps the accounts and pays the miners (Blanc v. Paymaster Min. Co., 95 Cal. 524, 531, 30 Pac. 765, 29 Am. St. Rep. 149); a general manager (Meton v. Isham Wagon Co., 4 N. Y. Suppl. 215, 216, 15 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 259); an ordinary agent or employee, who acts in an inferior capacity and under the direction and control of superior authority (Glines v. Supreme Sitting O. of I. H., 20 N. Y. Suppl. 275, 276, 22 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 437); a superintendent of a street railway employed by the president of a steam railroad to superintend the running of horse-cars on a portion of the steam railroad's track not yet completed, without authority to make contracts, and having no control over or knowledge of the affairs of the railroad company or its books (Emerson v. Auburn, etc., R. Co., 13 Hun (N. Y.) 150, 152); and a telegraph operator in the employ of a telegraph company (Jepson v. Postal Tel. Cable Co., 20 N. Y. Suppl. 300, 301, 22 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 434).

Judicial notice will be taken that a superintendent is a managing agent, so that the making an affidavit in replevin signed by one so described is a sufficient compliance with a statute providing that the statement shall be verified by the affidavit of plaintiff, his agent, or attorney. South Missouri Land Co. v. Jeffries, 40 Mo. App. 360, 361.

In statutory provisions authorizing service of process upon a managing agent within the state, it means a person holding responsible and representative relation, such as the term would include. Coler v. Pittsburgh Bridge Co., 146 N. Y. 281, 283, 40 N. E. 779.

53. Frazer v. Cuthbertson, 6 Q. B. D. 93, 95, 50 L. J. Q. B. 277, 29 Wkly. Rep. 396. See also The Odorilla v. Baileys, 128 Pa. St. 283, 292, 18 Atl. 511; The Jennie B. Gilkey, 19 Fed. 127, 129.

I. DEFINITION AND NATURE OF REMEDY.

A. Definition.¹ Mandamus is an action or judicial proceeding of a civil nature,² extraordinary in the sense that it can be maintained only when there is no other adequate remedy,³ prerogative in its character to the extent that the issue of both the alternative and the peremptory or final command is discretionary,⁴ to enforce only clear legal rights,⁵ and to compel courts to take jurisdiction or proceed in the exercise of their jurisdiction,⁶ or to compel corporations, public⁷ and private,⁸ and public boards, commissions, or officers,⁹ to exercise their jurisdiction or discretion and to perform ministerial duties, which duties result from an office, trust, or station,¹⁰ and are clearly and peremptorily enjoined by law as absolute and official.¹¹

Prerogative defined.—"Prerogative simply means a power or will which is discretionary and above and uncontrolled by any other will; the term is frequently used to express the uncontrolled will of the sovereign power in the state. It is applied not only to the king but also to the legislative and judicial branches of the government, as 'the royal prerogatives,' the 'prerogatives of parliament,' the 'prerogatives of the court.'" 1 Halleck Int. L. 125. "Specifically, a privilege inherent in one's office or position; an official right; an exclusive or sovereign privilege, in theory subject to no restriction or interference, but practically often limited by other similar rights or prerogatives." Century Dict. By the phrase "high prerogative writ" is meant, not that the proceeding is not a judicial one, but that it is not a writ of right, issuing only at the discretion of the court. Shortt Mand. & Proc. 223.

"A command issuing from a superior court, to some inferior court of judicature, corporation, or public officer, requiring them to do some particular act, therein specified, which appertains to their office and duty." 1 Swift Dig. 563 [quoted in Ansonia v. Studley, 67 Conn. 170, 176].

"A command issuing from the Superior Court, directed to some person, corporation or inferior court, within the jurisdiction of the superior court, requiring them to do some particular thing therein specified which by law they are bound to do, and which a superior court has previously determined or at least supposes to be consonant to right and justice." Swift v. State, 7 Houst. (Del.) 338, 345, 6 Atl. 856, 32 Atl. 143, 40 Am. St. Rep. 127.

"[A writ which] issues by the command of the sovereign power, and in the name of the State, and is directed to some subordinate court, judicature or body within the jurisdiction of the court from which it issues, and it requires the performance by the body to whom it is directed of a specific act, as being the legal duty of the office, character, or situation." 2 Potter Corp. § 634 [quoted in Richardson v. Swift, 7 Houst. (Del.) 137, 153, 30 Atl. 781, 783].

"A process, issued from the judicial branch of the government, which seeks to compel the officer to go forward and to do that which is enjoined upon him by the position he holds." People v. Hallett, 1 Colo. 352, 354.

B. Historical Development. Mandamus was originally one of a large class of writs by which the sovereign directed the performance of any desired act on the part of a subject. They were non-judicial, being merely commands issued directly to the subject, without any action by the courts. Afterward the power passed to the king's bench, the court which was supposed to represent the king.¹² It is still issued, in England, only by that court, except in cases where acts of parliament have specially authorized its issue by other courts.¹³

C. Nature of Remedy. Mandamus is a civil proceeding¹⁴ or remedy¹⁵ hav-

"A writ commanding the performance of some act or duty, therein specified, in the performance of which the applicant for the writ is interested, or by the non-performance of which he is aggrieved or injured." Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 203, 226.

"An order of a court of competent and original jurisdiction, commanding an executive or ministerial officer to perform an act or omit to do an act, the performance or omission of which is enjoined by law." School Dist. No. 14 v. School Dist. No. 4, 64 Ark. 483, 487, 43 S. W. 501; Traynor v. Beckham, 116 Ky. 13, 23, 74 S. W. 1105, 76 S. W. 844, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 283; Young v. Beckham, 115 Ky. 246, 253, 72 S. W. 1092, 1094, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 2135; Furnish v. Satterwhite, 114 Ky. 905, 908, 72 S. W. 309, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1723; Denny v. Bosworth, 113 Ky. 785, 792, 68 S. W. 1078, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 554; State v. San Antonio St. R. Co., 10 Tex. Civ. App. 12, 13, 30 S. W. 266.

"The prerogative writ of mandamus is the direct intervention of the State to compel a person, natural or artificial, on whom the law imposes a public duty, to perform that duty." Norwalk, etc., Electric Light Co. v. South Norwalk, 71 Conn. 381, 390, 42 Atl. 82; Fuller v. Plainfield Academic School, 6 Conn. 532, 543.

"Mandamus is a high prerogative and remedial writ, the appropriate functions of which are the enforcement of duties to the public, by officers and others, who either neglect or refuse to perform them." Com. v. Allegheny County Com'rs, 37 Pa. St. 277, 279.

As synonymous with command or order.—The word "mandamus," it has been held, may properly be used as a substitute for "order" in a petition to compel payment for support of a pauper. Rouse v. McKean County Poor Dist., 169 Pa. St. 116, 32 Atl. 541.

12. Kendall v. U. S., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 524, 9 L. ed. 1181; Ex p. Crane, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 190, 8 L. ed. 92, Baldwin, J., dissenting. See also Atlanta v. Wright, 119 Ga. 207, 45 S. E. 994; State v. Lewis, 76 Mo. 370.

The earliest form of mandamus issued by the court seems to have been the writ issued in cases of escheat. The usual writ in such cases was Diem causit extremum, a form of which is given in Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium. If this writ was not issued within a year from the ancestor's death only mandamus could issue. Powis' Case, 2 Dyer 170, 73 Eng. Reprint 372. And see 1 Pollock & M. Hist. Eng. L. 292.

Influence of Mansfield.—"Until the time of Lord Mansfield . . . this writ had been of comparatively little value. It had been called a writ of restitution, and had been confined exclusively to offices of a public nature. . . . But in several cases which came before him, Rex v. Bloomer, 2 Burr. 1043, in 1759, and Rex v. Barker, 3 Burr. 1265, in 1762, he extended its operation, first to the case of a curate in the established church, next to that of a dissenting minister, and laid down the principle that 'where there is a right to execute an office, perform a service, or exercise a franchise, (more especially if it be in a matter of public concern, or attended with profit,) and a person is kept out of possession, or dispossessed of such right, and has no other specific and legal remedy, the court ought to assist by a mandamus, upon reasons of justice . . . and . . . public policy, to preserve peace, order and good government.'" People v. Steele, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 397, 416, per Edmonds, J., holding that a minister may be placed in possession of his pulpit, although occupied by another, ejectment not adequate. See also Oneida Common Pleas v. People, 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 79.

15. Colorado.—Stoddard v. Benton, 6 Colo. 508.

Delaware.—State v. Wilmington Bridge Co., 3 Harr. 312.

Indiana.—Brower v. O'Brien, 2 Ind. 423. The remedy partakes of the qualities and attributes of a civil action, but is nevertheless regarded as of an extraordinary character, being the highest known to the law. Burnsville Turnpike Co. v. State, 119 Ind. 382, 20 N. E. 421, 3 L. R. A. 265. It is an extraordinary remedy, at law, but has lost its prerogative character, and is treated as in the nature of a civil action. Seymour Water Co. v. Seymour, 163 Ind. 120, 70 N. E. 514.

Montana.—Mandamus is not a case at common law, nor a civil action within the Civil Practice Act. Attempts to classify it are futile. It is sui generis. It may be called an extraordinary legal remedy, civil in its nature. The absolute right to a jury trial does not exist. Chumaseo v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242. It is a developed remedy, adapted to modern needs and ideas, and should be issued readily, without regard to any mere lifeless distinctions of past history. State v. Great Falls, 19 Mont. 518, 49 Pac. 15. The application for the writ is an equitable proceeding. The ing the nature and attributes of a civil suit or action,¹⁶ legal and not equitable,¹⁷ personal in its nature¹⁸ and civil and not criminal,¹⁹ although it is available in maxim, that equity looks upon that as done which ought to have been done, applies. Territory v. Gilbert, 1 Mont. 371.

Nebraska.—Mandamus is not a prerogative writ, but an ordinary remedy, to which the ordinary rules of pleading apply. State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 19 Nebr. 476, 27 N. W. 434. It is an action at law, governed by the ordinary rules of practice. State v. Affholder, 44 Nebr. 497, 62 N. W. 871.

Nevada.—Mandamus is a civil remedy, having all the qualities and attributes of a civil action, and is applied solely for the protection of civil rights. State v. Gracey, 11 Nev. 223.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 2.

16. Connecticut.—State v. New Haven, etc., R. Co., 41 Conn. 134 (holding that if not technically an action at law, it is such within a statute requiring findings in actions at law); Gilman v. Bassett, 33 Conn. 298.

Illinois.—Chicago v. People, 210 Ill. 84, 71 N. E. 816; Roodhouse v. Briggs, 194 Ill. 435, 62 N. E. 778; Dement v. Rokker, 126 Ill. 174, 19 N. E. 33; People v. Weber, 86 Ill. 283; McBane v. People, 50 Ill. 503; Hall v. Mann, 96 Ill. App. 659.

Iowa.—Dove v. Keokuk Independent School Dist., 41 Iowa 689; Brown v. Crego, 29 Iowa 321. Under the code of 1851, it was held that mandamus was a prerogative writ, and not one of right, and was a prosecution within the meaning of the constitution, and should be prosecuted in the name of the state. Chance v. Temple, 1 Iowa 179.

New Hampshire.—In modern practice mandamus is regarded as an action at law, and a writ of right, and is not now regarded as a prerogative writ in the historical sense. Atty.-Gen. v. Taggart, 66 N. H. 362, 29 Atl. 1027, 25 L. R. A. 613.

New Mexico.—Mandamus is within a statute authorizing injunctions in aid of suits at law, the words being used in their broadest sense. In re Sloan, 5 N. M. 590, 25 Pac. 930. It is an extraordinary proceeding; process issues only on leave of court. Territory v. Ashenfelter, 4 N. M. 85, 12 Pac. 879. It is a civil action and, with the exception of the pleadings, is tried and proceeded with in the same manner as other actions. Perez v. Barber, 7 N. M. 223, 34 Pac. 190.

New York.—Mandamus is an action under the code. People v. Lewis, 3 Abb. Dec. 537 [affirming 28 How. Pr. 159]; People v. Ovenshire, 41 How. Pr. 164; People v. Albright, 23 How. Pr. 306. But it is a special proceeding within the New York charter imposing limitations on time for reinstatement on police force. People v. Greene, 87 N. Y. App. Div. 346, 84 N. Y. Suppl. 565.

North Carolina.—Under the constitution providing that there shall be but one form of action, mandamus is in the nature of, and to be commenced as, a civil action. Belmont v. Reilly, 71 N. C. 260.

Oklahoma.—The action has lost, to a considerable extent, its prerogative character, and is not now considered in most of the states as anything more than a civil action. It is governed by the code, and a jury trial is a matter of right. Ex p. Epley, 10 Okla. 631, 64 Pac. 18 (the peremptory writ is a judgment reviewable like other judgments); Territory v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 2 Okla. 108, 39 Pac. 389.

Tennessee.—Under the code mandamus is a civil action, and may be brought in a court of equity. Simmons v. Leonard, 89 Tenn. 622, 15 S. W. 444; Hawkins v. Kercheval, 10 Lea 535. And see State v. Sneed, 105 Tenn. 711, 58 S. W. 1070. The issuance of the writ is in some respects regulated by statute. State v. Marks, 6 Lea 12.

Texas.—Mandamus is now regarded as an action by the party on whose relation it is granted, although subject still to the restriction that it cannot be granted to a party where the law affords him any other adequate means of redress. General Land Office Com'r's v. Smith, 5 Tex. 471.

Utah.—Mandamus is a civil action, controlled by the Practice Act. Lyman v. Martin, 2 Utah 136; Chamberlain v. Warburton, 1 Utah 267.

Wisconsin.—After issue joined by return mandamus is a civil action governed by the code. State v. Giljohann, 111 Wis. 377, 87 N. W. 245; State v. Lincoln, 67 Wis. 274, 30 N. W. 360; State v. Jennings, 56 Wis. 113, 14 N. W. 28. It is not a civil action as respects the manner of beginning it, but is such in other respects, that is, as to costs. State v. Policemen's Pension Fund, 121 Wis. 44, 98 N. W. 954. In the supreme court, when brought to protect the franchises or sovereignty of the state, it is treated as a prerogative writ. State v. Doyle, 40 Wis. 175, 22 Am. Rep. 692.

2. INJUNCTION. Compared with injunction, mandamus cannot be used as a preventive writ, or as a substitute for injunction.²⁴ A mandatory injunction, when used against public officers, is the counterpart in equity of mandamus.²⁵ But mandamus is sometimes employed to regulate or restrain a judge in the exercise of his jurisdiction.²⁶

3. PROHIBITION. Prohibition²⁷ is the converse of mandamus²⁸ and is defined by statute in some jurisdictions as its counterpart.²⁹

II. RIGHT TO MANDAMUS IN GENERAL.

"Where the established distinctions between equity and common law jurisdiction are observed, injunction and mandamus are not correlative remedies, in the sense of being applicable to the same subject matter, the choice of the writ to be resorted to in a particular case to depend upon whether there is an excess of action to be restrained or a defect to be supplied. The two writs properly pertain to entirely different jurisdictions and to different classes of proceedings, injunction being the proper writ only in cases of equitable cognizance, and mandamus being a common law writ, and applicable only in cases coming within the appropriate jurisdiction of courts of common law." *Fletcher v. which it is sometimes said to result that the writ issues as a matter of right.³² It will be found, however, that there is little real or substantial conflict in the authorities. The writ is employed only in unusual cases where other remedies fail,³³ and it is hedged about by many conditions totally inapplicable to the ordinary suit at law. The applicant must in all cases substantially demonstrate the propriety and justice of his case.³⁴ Nor is the court bound to take the case as the applicant presents it. It may consider defendant's rights, the interest of third persons, the importance or unimportance of the case, and the applicant's conduct, in determining whether or not the writ shall go.³⁵ The issuing of the writ therefore is generally, almost universally, considered discretionary, and to this extent only is the proceeding a prerogative one.³⁶ The discretion to be exercised is a

The court cannot direct what is not lawful, without its being subject to review. There arise matters of discretion which may induce the court to withhold it, matters connected with delay, or possibly with the conduct of the parties. If what is directed to be done be lawful, other courts will not question this exercise of discretion. But in regard to that which is not lawful, it is open to correction on appeal. *Reg. v. secured only through the writ, it has been held that it would be an abuse of discretion to refuse it.⁴¹

2. STATE CASES. Where the writ is applied for by the state, for the public benefit, it has been held that the court has no discretion to refuse it.⁴² The question of whether a mandamus should issue to protect the interest of the public does not depend upon the state of facts existing when the petition is filed, if that state of facts has ceased to exist when the final judgment is rendered.⁴³

3. MATTERS LEADING TO REFUSAL OF WRIT — a. Public Policy. Mandamus may be refused where the public interest would be injuriously affected,⁴⁴ and it will not issue to compel the performance of an act which will work a public and private mischief.⁴⁵

b. Doubtful Cases. The writ of mandamus issues only in case of necessity to prevent injustice or great injury. If there is a doubt of its necessity or propriety it will not go.⁴⁶

c. Introduction of Disorder and Confusion. Where the issue of the writ would disturb official action, or create disorder or confusion, it may be denied.⁴⁷

State*, 4 Ga. 26; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Jefferson County Com'rs, 12 Kan. 127. It is an abuse of judicial discretion to deny a writ of mandamus where the application is made to enforce a clear legal right; where the duty to be enforced is plain and positive; where substantial damage will follow its non-performance; or where there is no other adequate remedy, no laches chargeable to applicant, and no special reasons which render his resort to the remedy inequitable. *Neu v. of a third person,⁷³ or which is beyond the possibility of performance.⁷⁴ But an act may be compelled, although the actual legal rights conferred must be subject to subsequent judicial determination.⁷⁵

3. EQUITABLE RIGHTS. Mandamus cannot be employed as a general rule for the enforcement of equitable rights.⁷⁶ It follows that a purely equitable defense cannot be set up.⁷⁷

4. TECHNICAL RIGHTS. The writ is employed to promote principles of justice. It should not issue to compel a technical compliance with the letter of the law, in violation of its clear intent or spirit, nor to wrest a statute from its true purpose.⁷⁸ Hence the writ will not issue in support of unjust claims, although they may be technically regular.⁷⁹

5. ABSTRACT OR MOOT QUESTIONS. The matter involved must be substantial and of sufficient importance to justify the use of the remedy in cases where it would otherwise issue. Abstract or moot questions will not be determined, or petty controversies considered.⁸⁰ So where the right is, or will become, a mere abstract right, the enforcement of which, by reason of some change of circumstances, can be of no substantial or practical benefit to the petitioner, mandamus will be denied.⁸¹ It has been held, however, that where the question is one of public interest, an appeal from an order refusing mandamus will be heard, although the question is no longer a practical one.⁸²

6. CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTIONS. It is rarely, if ever, proper to award a mandamus in a case in which it can be done only by declaring an act of the legislature unconstitutional.⁸³ In cases where the duty to perform an act depends solely on the question whether a statute or ordinance is constitutional and valid, the question may sometimes be determined on a petition for mandamus.⁸⁴ But an officer who in any particular way.¹ But in contradiction to these general rules, under the statutes in some jurisdictions, it is held that mandamus will issue to control discretionary as well as ministerial duties.² The fact that certain incidents and details of the duty are discretionary is, however, no objection to starting performance of the duty itself;³ and when the duty is mandatory and no discretion is vested, its performance and manner of performance both may be compelled by mandamus.⁴

(II) DISTINCTION BETWEEN MINISTERIAL AND DISCRETIONARY DUTIES—

(A) In General. While there is some conflict of opinion as to what constitutes, strictly speaking, a ministerial duty as distinguished from a discretionary duty,⁵ and while it is not always easy to determine where the line of demarcation lies between a ministerial act and an act involving the exercise of judgment,⁶ the distinction between merely ministerial and judicial and other official acts seems to be that, where the law prescribes and defines the duty to be performed with such precision and certainty as to leave nothing to the exercise of discretion or judgment, the act is ministerial. But where the act to be done involves the exercise of discretion or judgment it is not to be deemed merely ministerial.⁷ Discretion may be defined, when applied to public functionaries, as the power or right conferred upon them by law of acting officially under certain circumstances, according to the dictates of their own judgment and conscience, and not controlled by the judgment or conscience of others.⁸

(B) Determination of Questions of Fact. Where the duty is such as necessarily requires the examination of evidence and the decision of questions of law and fact, such a duty is not ministerial;⁹ but an act is none the less ministerial because the person performing it may have to satisfy himself that the state of facts exists under which it is his right and duty to perform the act,¹⁰ and although in so doing he must to such extent construe a statute by which the duty is imposed.¹¹ The construction of a statute is in itself, however, a judicial act.¹²

(III) ABUSE OF DISCRETION. An exception to the general rule that discretionary acts will not be reviewed or controlled exists when the discretion has been abused,¹³ for example mandamus may in a case be granted where the action has been cretion.²⁷ Mandamus may, however, issue to enforce payment of municipal obligations.²⁸ And the writ will issue in a proper case to enforce a contract between a public corporation and a municipality, and to compel the performance of public duties,²⁹ or by statute provision may be made for the enforcement of public contracts.³⁰

d. Duty Consisting of Continuous Acts. While it has been stated that mandamus will not lie to compel a continuing course of action,³¹ there are frequent precedents for the granting of writs of such nature,³² and the weight of authority is that to some degree at least the order may require a continuous action³³ or enforce a continuing duty.³⁴

e. Requisite Act or Coöperation of Third Person. Mandamus will not issue when the official act to be performed depends on the act, approval, or coöperation of a third person, not a party.³⁵

3. CREATION OR IMPOSITION OF NEW POWERS OR DUTIES. One of the most well-established principles governing mandamus is that it can create or impose no powers,³⁶ holding that mandamus will not issue to compel a stenographer hired by a legislative committee under implied power to furnish copies of evidence.

b. Equitable Remedies. An equitable remedy will not deprive a party of his legal remedy by mandamus,⁶⁵ unless given by express statute,⁶⁶ or unless the relator before asking the writ has gone into a court of equity and instituted proceedings under which the relief may be obtained that is sought by mandamus.⁶⁷ But the fact that an equitable remedy exists may influence the exercise of the court's discretion.⁶⁸

c. ACTIONS FOR DAMAGES. In case adequate relief may be had by an action for damages, mandamus will not lie.⁶⁹ But in the case of corporations and ministerial officers, there is an exception to the general rule, and they may be compelled to exercise their functions according to law by mandamus, even though the party has another remedy against them by action for neglect of duty.⁷⁰ And as a develop-

Nuisance.—A right of action for damages will not prevent mandamus to abate a nuisance. Habersham v. Savannah, etc., Canal Co., 26 Ga. 665, such as the failure of a canal company to bridge its canal.

70. California.—Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488; People v. Loucks, 28 Cal. 69;

ment of this rule it is held by the weight of authority that mandamus will lie, although the party may have also a remedy upon the official bond of a ministerial officer.⁷¹

d. Criminal Remedies. A criminal remedy is not as a general rule considered an adequate one, so as to prevent the issue of mandamus.⁷² But mandamus will not issue to compel a magistrate to continue the examination of a person on a criminal charge, where the relator has a remedy through the placing of an indictment before the grand jury.⁷³ Nor will mandamus lie to compel a court to take jurisdiction of offenses against a state law, which can also be prosecuted in other courts as violations of ordinances.⁷⁴

e. Appeal and Error. Mandamus will not lie where there is an adequate remedy by appeal, or by writ of error.⁷⁵

Mandamus to compel registry of a voter denied because of two statute remedies given. Com. v. Cuncannon, 3 Brewst. 344. Mandamus refused to reduce an assessment, for like reasons. Yuengling v. Schuylkill County Com'rs, 2 Leg. Chron. 350. Also mandamus, to compel a recorder to enter satisfaction of a mortgage. Com. v. Lane, 3 Wkly. Notes Cas. 546. A statutory remedy for the failure of an election officer to advertise an election takes the place of mandamus. Com. v. Sellers, 7 Pa. Dist. 665, 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 509. It was held in 1843 that a special remedy under the Statute of Westminster II, and not mandamus, was the proper method of procuring the settlement of a bill of exceptions. Drexel v. Man, 6 Watts & S. 386, 40 Am. Dec. 573. And in 1888 a peremptory mandamus was issued under such statute for the purpose. Reichenbach v. Ruddach, 121 Pa. St. 18, 15 Atl. 488. Where a statute as to removal of paupers does not give a remedy, but a punishment for non-performance, mandamus will issue. Porter Tp. v. Jersey Shore, 82 Pa. St. 275.

adequate⁷⁸ and its applicability must not be doubtful,⁷⁹ and it must not be obsolete.⁸⁰ A remedy available to a city, however, will not prevent mandamus by the state to enforce a judgment concerning a public matter.⁸¹

3. STATUTORY DUTIES WHERE NO REMEDY IS PROVIDED. If the statute prescribing a duty provides no remedy mandamus will lie.⁸²

4. DOUBTFUL CASES. If the remedy is doubtful, the writ will issue.⁸³

5. EFFECT OF ELECTION OF OTHER REMEDY. Where relator has sought other means of redress the writ should be denied,⁸⁴ unless, it would seem, in a case where such other relief would be unavailing.⁸⁵

6. WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS. An objection that mandamus is not the only plain and adequate remedy may be waived.⁸⁶ But defendant may insist that

Mandatory injunction.—Under Civ. Code Pr. § 271, providing that a mandatory injunction may affirmatively direct the doing of the act required to be done, injunction and not mandamus is the proper remedy to compel a telephone company to install an instrument. Williams v. Maysville Tel. Co., 119 Ky. 33, 82 S. W. 995, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 945.

78. State v. Jacksonville Terminal Co., 41 Fla. 377, 27 So. 225, statutory action for damages not adequate for refusal of terminal company to admit carrier to station. If a railroad company, required to erect fences on both sides of its road, builds a fence on the edge of its road-bed, and not at the margin of its right of way, an adjoining landowner may compel it to build on such margin. A remedy given the landowner to build and recover the expense is inapplicable, because the statute does not contemplate two fences, and the company had built one in the wrong place. Ohio, etc., R. The duty of the court must be plain, the refusal to proceed within its jurisdiction to perform that duty must be clear, the results of such refusal prejudicial, the remedy, if any, by appeal or writ of error utterly inadequate, and the application for relief by mandamus speedy and prompt, in order to justify the issuance error.⁸⁹ In some jurisdictions, however, these rules have been relaxed in particular cases and mandamus issued to avoid the consequences of errors where no remedy has been provided by way of review,⁹⁰ or so far as the error consists in an act or refusal which makes an adequate remedy by appeal impossible,⁹¹ or

This is, of course, an evil, but we cannot for that reason apply a remedy which the law will not sanction"); State v. Hadley, 20 Wash. 520, 56 Pac. 29 (where it was urged that the issue sought to be forced upon a court by mandamus was of great importance to the county; that it was desirable to obtain a construction of the law in question before the session of the legislature; and that appeal would be too slow, and it was held that the length of time involved in litigation was not a test of adequacy of remedy by appeal); State v. Johnson, 103 Wis. 591, 622, 79 N. W. 1081, 51 L. R. A. 33 (where the court said: "The remedy by appeal must be substantially adequate in order to prevent relief by mandamus. Definition of terms.—"An office is a public station or employment conferred by the appointment of the government. And any man is a public officer who is appointed by government, and has any duty to perform concerning the public; nor is he any the less a public officer because his authority or duty is confined to narrow limits." Polk v. James, 68 Ga. 128, 131.

Necessity that duty arise from office, trust, or station see supra, II, C, 2, c.

96. State v. Beloit, 21 Wis. 280, 91 Am. Dec. 474, holding that persons elected supervisors of a town, who refuse to qualify or serve, cannot be treated as supervisors de facto and commanded to levy a tax.

Extinct public corporation.—Mandamus will

De facto officers are, however, subject to the writ.⁹⁷ The writ will not lie against an officer after the expiration of his term,⁹⁸ or after he has resigned⁹⁹ or ceased to act as an officer,¹ or the office has become functus officio.² A continuing duty may be enforced against successors of the officer originally in default,³ although a writ will not lie against such successors when not themselves in default, for the failure of their predecessors to perform the duty.⁴ Where, however, an officer is charged ex officio with a duty in another capacity, he may be compelled to perform such duty, although the term of the office from which it arose has expired.⁵ And it has been held that an officer may be compelled to perform a duty personal to himself and which does not devolve upon his successor even after his term has expired.⁶ A new public corporation which has succeeded another, which has not lie against an extinct public corporation or the former members thereof. Barkley v. Madison Parish, etc., Bd. of Levee Com'rs, 93 U. S. 258, 22 L. ed. 893.

97. Wright v. Kelley, 4 Ida. 624, 43 Pac. 565; People v. Ingham County, 36 Mich. 416; Kelly v. Wimberly, 61 Miss. 548; People v. Schiellein, 95 N. Y. 124.

98. Alabama.—Ex p. Trice, 53 Ala. 546.

Arkansas.—Lamar v. Wilkins, 28 Ark. 34, where refusal to issue the writ was based on the ground that it would be ineffectual.

Kentucky.—Terry v. Baker, 67 S. W. 258, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 2406.

New Jersey.—State v. Holliday, 8 N. J. L. 265.

Ohio.—State v. Lynch, 8 Ohio St. 347, holding that the fact that prior to the issue and service of an alternative writ of mandamus to compel a township treasurer to pay an order, the term of office of such treasurer had expired and all the funds in his hands had in good faith been paid over to his successor in office, is as to him a good defense.

West Virginia.—Holdermann v. Schane, 56 W. Va. 11, 48 S. E. 512; Dent v. Taylor County, 45 W. Va. 750, 32 S. E. 250.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 59.

Abatement of proceedings on expiration of officer's term see infra, IX, D, 4.

Effect of termination of power to act in general see supra, II, C, 4, a.

Judges.—One who is no longer a judge cannot be compelled to exercise judicial functions. People v. Pearson, 4 Ill. 270; People v. Altgeld, 43 Ill. App. 460. Hence a judge before whom an action is tried cannot after his term of office has expired be compelled to settle a bill of exceptions, although he is authorized by statute to settle such a bill. Leach v. Aitken, 91 Cal. 484, 28 Pac. 777; State v. Allyn, 7 Wash. 285, 34 Pac. 914. But see State v. Barnes, 16 Nebr. 37, 19 N. W. 701. Nor will a judge whose term is about to expire be compelled to proceed to trial. Terry v. Baker, 67 S. W. 258, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 2406.

Justices of the peace.—Mandamus will not issue to a justice of the peace whose term has expired. Center First Nat. Bank v. Rowland, (Tex. Civ. App. 1907) 99 S. W. 1043.

Delivery of books and papers to successor see infra, VI, C, 7, b.

99. De Haas v. Newaygo Cir. Judge, 46 Mich. 12, 8 N. W. 587, holding that mandamus to settle a case for review will not issue to a judge who has resigned since filing his answer to the order to show cause, but that relief should be asked from his successor.

Simulated resignation.—It seems that a simulated resignation from office, or a resignation made for the purpose of evading the performance of official duties, does not bar mandamus to compel the officer to perform. Edwards v. U. S., 103 U. S. 471, 26 L. ed. 314.

5. People v. Burns, 106 N. Y. App. Div. 36, 94 N. Y. Suppl. 196.

6. State v. Shearer, 29 Nebr. 477, 45 N. W. 784, holding that an ex-county clerk might be compelled to report the fees of his office and pay the excess over the amount to which he was entitled into the county treasury. And thereupon become extinct, cannot be compelled to perform a duty of the old corporation.⁷

2. CORPORATION OR OFFICER. If a public duty is imposed on a public or private corporation generally, and not on a particular officer thereof, a party seeking to have that duty performed may proceed against the corporation as such.⁸ But if the duty is imposed on a particular officer of the corporation, the party seeking to have the duty performed must generally proceed against that officer; he cannot as a rule proceed against the corporation as such to compel it to perform the duty;⁹ nor can he proceed against the corporation to compel it to require the officer to act.¹⁰

G. Conditions Precedent—1. DEMAND. As a general rule relator must have demanded performance of the act or duty which he seeks to enforce.¹¹ Where, however, the duty is strictly public and enjoined by law and no person is charged by law with the duty to demand, no demand is necessary,¹² and this is see Keokuk v. Merriam, 44 Iowa 432, holding that mandamus would be a proper remedy of a municipal corporation for the wrongful detention of its books by a public officer after resignation.

also true where the duty is imperatively required by law of ministerial officers,¹³ particularly where respondent has done an act which he calls a performance.¹⁴ But where the duty is of a private nature affecting only the right of the relator there must have been a demand.¹⁵ Where it appears that a demand would be unavailing it need not be made,¹⁶ as where the course and conduct of officers is such as to show a settled purpose not to perform the imposed duty.¹⁷ The demand must be unambiguous.¹⁸ A demand upon an officer is good as against his successor.¹⁹

Recount of votes.—Under a statute giving mandamus for a recount the fact that the board is still canvassing is not ground for delay. People v. Oneida County Bd. of Canvassers, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 444, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 712.

23. Grand County v. People, 16 Colo. App. 215, 64 Pac. 675.

It may be either express or implied,²⁴ and it is not necessary that the word "refuse" or any equivalent to it should be used, but there should be enough to show a distinct determination not to do what is required.²⁵ A refusal may be implied from a delay in acting,²⁶ unless the delay will still permit action within the time fixed by law.²⁷ A refusal which is broader than the demand will operate as excusing any further demand up to the scope of the refusal.²⁸ The imposition of illegal conditions to the payment of a claim may amount to a refusal.²⁹ A demand in the alternative to do one of two, three, or more things will, if the duty enjoined form one of them, and there should have been a general refusal to comply with such demand, be sufficient.³⁰

H. Effect of Pendency of Other Actions or Proceedings — 1. IN GENERAL.

As a general rule the pendency of another suit involving the same question will prevent the issue of a mandamus,³¹ unless it will be ineffective or the other court is without jurisdiction,³² or will not result in a complete adjudication of the questions involved.³³ So where the act to be compelled is involved in a pending appeal,³⁴ or certiorari,³⁵ the writ will be refused. Likewise a court will not be compelled to proceed with a suit pending a motion for a new trial,³⁶ or to enter judgment upon a report of auditors pending a motion to set such report aside,³⁷ and mandamus to proceed in accordance with a decree will not be granted pending a motion to set such decree aside.³⁸ It has been held, however, that mandamus would lie if necessary to secure the right to sell upon execution land in the possession of a receiver, although a proceeding was pending to set the judgment aside, where otherwise the security of the judgment creditor would be destroyed.³⁹

2. INJUNCTION. If the act of performance as sought to be compelled by mandamus has been restrained by injunction, the writ will not issue.⁴⁰ But this rule does not apply in United States courts so as to prevent mandamus to municipal officers to levy taxes to pay judgments rendered in such courts.⁴¹ And the writ may issue when the rights of one not a party to the injunction cannot be otherwise secured.⁴²

3. MANDAMUS. The pendency of one mandamus proceeding is a bar to another, in another court, for the same cause.⁴³ But a proceeding by an individual for a mandamus will not be abated by reason of the fact that another proceeding is pending upon his relation in the name of a public officer.⁴⁴ And likewise the pendency of a mandamus proceeding in the name of the state will not prevent the prosecution of mandamus by an individual for the same relief.⁴⁵ The writ lies to compel a reinstatement of an appeal in an intermediate appellate court from a judgment against a city, although mandamus to enforce the judgment is pending in the lower court.⁴⁶

III. STATUTORY AND CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS.⁴⁷

The writ of mandamus was known to the common law and is of very ancient origin,⁴⁸ and as a general proposition the common-law rules prescribing the occasion on which the writ may issue and the mode of proceeding thereunder are to be applied, except in so far as they have been modified by statute.⁴⁹ In cases relating to municipal corporations and their officers⁵⁰ the rules of proceeding under the writ were essentially modified in England in 1710⁵¹ by the statute known as the statute of Anne.⁵² The statute of Anne did not, however, extend to the mass of the subjects of mandamus which remained to be disposed of according to the course of the common law;⁵³ but by a subsequent English statute⁵⁴ the provisions of the statute of Anne were extended to all cases of mandamus.⁵⁵ While the statute of Anne has furnished the rule of proceeding in some of the courts in this country,⁵⁶ in other jurisdictions the statute has been held never to have been adopted or in force.⁵⁷ But at present in many jurisdictions statutory or constitutional provisions exist regulating generally or in

B. 274, 4 Wkly. Rep. 493, 88 E. C. L. 273], holding that the remedy by mandamus given by section 68 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125) is not confined to cases in which the prerogative writ of mandamus might have been granted.

In Louisiana it has been held that under the articles of the code practice the courts have more extensive powers than those of the common law in issuing the writ. State v. Strong, 32 La. Ann. 579; Hatch v. New Orleans City Bank, 1 Rob. 470.

In North Carolina it was at one time said: "There is no provision in the C. C. P., regulating the proceedings in writs of mandamus, and in such cases 'the practice heretofore in use, may be adopted so far as may be necessary to prevent a failure of justice.' C. C. P., sec. 392. The writ of mandamus is an extraordinary remedy and can only be used by the express order of a court of superior jurisdiction, and is not governed by the rules pre-

at common law.⁵⁹ As a general rule when a statute gives in general terms the power to issue a writ of mandamus, the common law determines when and under what circumstances such writ should be issued.⁶⁰ It has been held, however, that the introduction of the writ of mandamus by name does not necessarily bring with it all the rules of practice regulating the issue of the writ at common law; these rules may be modified not only by the statutes of the state but by the structure and organization of the courts and the principles lying at the foundation of its system of procedure.⁶¹

IV. MANDAMUS TO COURTS AND JUDICIAL OFFICERS.

A. General Rules—1. REVIEW OF DISCRETION. While a writ of mandamus will not as a general rule issue to review an exercise of judicial discretion,⁶² it scribed for the prosecution of ordinary legal remedies. State v. Jones, 23 N. C. 129. It is not embraced in the rule established in Tate v. Powe, 64 N. C. 644, which defines the distinction between civil actions and special proceedings." Lutterloh v. Cumberland County, 65 N. C. 403, 405. But by subsequent legislation, the mode of procedure in some particulars has been expressly prescribed. Rev. (1905) §§ 822-824.

appeal or writ of error being in such case the proper remedy,⁷³ although in some cases it is said that mandamus will be granted even in such an instance if there is no other remedy.⁷⁴ As a general rule also mandamus will lie when an inferior court has refused to entertain jurisdiction upon what may be termed a preliminary objection based upon a matter of law.⁷⁵ Where the lower court has properly decided that it has no jurisdiction it will not be compelled to assume it.⁷⁶

b. In Cases of Assumed Disqualification. When a judge declines jurisdiction on the ground that he is disqualified when he is not, his decision is not final, and mandamus lies to direct him to assume jurisdiction.⁷⁷

3. ENFORCING MINISTERIAL DUTIES. Where a duty is reposed upon a judge or tribunal, and no discretion as to its performance given, performance may be compelled by mandamus.⁷⁸ And where any tribunal in which discretionary power is

On ground of defect of parties.—Where an inferior judge refuses to try a cause at issue between the parties, on the ground that others unknown may be interested and should be made parties, a mandamus will be granted to compel him to proceed. If those who are interested and informed of the proceedings do not appear to protect their rights, they must bear the consequences; and those who are neither parties nor privies to the proceedings cannot be affected by the judgment. State v. Judge Commercial Ct., 4 Rob. (La.) 227.

Missouri.—State v. Reynolds, (1906) 97 S. W. 650, holding that where minors over fourteen years of age were entitled to mandamus to compel the allowance of an appeal from an order refusing to set aside the appointment by the probate court of the public administrator as curator of their estate, in derogation of their right of selection, which right was supported in the probate court by substantial evidence and without any evidence against it, and these facts were admitted in the record, the acts of the probate court were ministerial, and not judicial; and hence mandamus would issue to that court directly to compel the setting aside of the order appointing the public administrator curator and the acceptance of the selection of the minors.

lodged has exercised its discretion so far as the exercise is necessary in a particular case, and has given its conclusions upon the facts before it, what remains to be done to make its conclusion effective is purely ministerial, and mandamus will lie to compel its performance.⁷⁹

4. NECESSITY OF CLEAR CASE. Mandamus being an extraordinary writ, with prerogative features, and not a writ of right, a strong case must be presented to coerce action by a judge, the presumption being that he has done his duty.⁸⁰

5. PRIOR DEMAND AND REFUSAL. There must always be a previous request to act, and a definite, unqualified refusal, before the writ will issue.⁸¹

6. POWER TO ACT. Where an action is no longer pending⁸² or after the court has lost jurisdiction, it cannot be compelled by mandamus to proceed.⁸³ Nor will a judge be compelled to proceed where a writ of prohibition has been granted.⁸⁴

7. PERSONS WHO MAY BRING MANDAMUS. Mandamus will not lie to courts or judges at the instance of strangers to the proceedings. Relator must be either a formal or substantial party.⁸⁵ One who has absconded from the state for the purpose of evading the jurisdiction and orders of its courts cannot maintain mandamus proceedings.⁸⁶ Nor is a petitioner who is in contempt for disobedience to an injunction entitled to mandamus to a court to proceed.⁸⁷

8. CONFLICTING AND CONCURRENT JURISDICTIONS.⁸⁸ It seems that neither federal nor state courts will issue mandamus to the courts or judicial officers of each other.⁸⁹ Appellate courts will as a general rule compel litigants in the first instance to apply for the writ to the inferior court of general jurisdiction, except

Motion to restore.—Where property is seized under the process of a court, as the property of defendant, and a stranger, alleging that the property is his, applies by motion to have it restored to him, which motion the court refuses to hear, mandamus will not lie to such court to hear the motion. Price v. Shelby Cir. Ct., 3 Hard. (Ky.) 254.

in cases affecting the public or of unusual importance.⁹⁰ Mandamus cannot be employed by one court to seize and carry away the records and papers in the custody of another.⁹¹

B. Subjects and Purposes Affected by Mandamus — 1. PARTICULAR COURTS AND JUDICIAL OFFICERS — a. Probate, Surrogate, or Orphans' Courts. Inferior courts of probate jurisdiction will be compelled to establish wills and grant letters when all the facts exist to make the duty purely ministerial,⁹² and they will also be compelled to proceed in the exercise of their jurisdiction,⁹³ to approve bonds⁹⁴ or to transmit a case to another court;⁹⁵ but the writ will not issue to control discretion,⁹⁶

Blanchard*, 98 Cal. 311, 33 Pac. 199, holding that the superior court was not authorized to issue a writ of mandate in aid of the execution of the judgment rendered in the justice's court.

Idaho.—Wright v. Kelley, 4 Ida. 624, 43 Pac. 565, holding that it was no ground for failing to first apply for the writ in the district court that the judge of such court had announced that the writ would not be granted if applied for.

Iowa.—Westbrook v. Wicks, 36 Iowa 382; U. S. v. Dubuque County, Morr. 31.

Kansas.—State v. Breese, 15 Kan. 123, holding that while the power of the supreme court to issue mandamus to an officer of the court of general jurisdiction is unquestioned, the application must usually be first made to that court.

Missouri.—State v. Lesueur, 126 Mo. 413, 29 S. W. 278; State v. Cooper County Ct., 64 Mo. 170, holding that mandamus will issue from the supreme court only in cases of far more than ordinary magnitude or importance.

Nebraska.—Mandamus to a county should be first brought in the district court. State v. Fillmore County, 32 Nebr. 870, 49 N. W. 769. In case of private rights, when there is an accumulation of work in the supreme court, the application should be first made to the district court. State v. Merrell, 38 Nebr. 510, 56 N. Rep. 879, holding, where a petition prayed for a command to the probate judge to proceed with the probating of a certain will and render final order thereon, that under former statutes the probate of a will was a ministerial act, but since the statute of 1849 it has been a judicial act.

Missouri.—State v. Reynolds, (App. 1906) 97 S. W. 650 (holding that the writ lies to compel a judge to set aside the appointment of an administrator and approve a lawful selection of the heirs); State v. Guinotte, 113 Mo. App. 399, 86 S. W. 884 (holding that persons clearly entitled to administration may compel the court to grant it to them and the probate court cannot, by mere denial of relator's right to administer on the estate, convert the proceeding into a judicial inquiry. There must be some foundation for such denial, as the same, by itself, does not raise the issue, unsupported by facts).

b. Justices of the Peace. Mandamus lies to compel a justice to perform ministerial duties.⁹⁸ Such officers may also be compelled to take jurisdiction and proceed to trial,⁹⁹ as in the case of other courts,¹ to issue process,² to change the place of trial,³ transfer a cause upon a showing ousting them of their jurisdic-ary, he having been adjudged incompetent in the first. State v. Norton, 20 Kan. 506.

Michigan.—Mandamus will not lie to compel a probate judge to vacate an order admitting a will to probate. Corby v. Durfee, 96 Mich. 11, 55 N. W. 386. Or to compel him to extend the time allowed for creditors to present their claims. People v. Monroe County Probate Judge, 16 Mich. 204. Or to review a refusal to grant letters of administration on the estate. People v. St. Joseph County Probate Judge, 36 Mich. 500. Where an application was made for administration of the estate of a deceased contestant of a will, which the proponent of the will opposed by a motion to dismiss on the grounds that the right to contest a will does not survive, that the contestant had not diligently prosecuted his appeal, that the contestant had failed to obey an order of the supreme court adjudging costs against him, and that the estate ought to be speedily settled, the motion was in effect a motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, and an order overruling the motion was not reviewable by mandamus. Roberts v. Lenawee Cir. Judge, 140 Mich. 115, 103 N. W. 512.

Missouri.—Mandamus from the circuit court will not lie to compel the county court to approve an administrator's sale. Trainer v. Porter, 45 Mo. 336.

South Carolina.—A mandamus will not lie to an ordinary who has granted administration to one not entitled to it. State v. Mitchell, 2 Treadw. 703.

d. Masters in Chancery. A summary order to act, and not mandamus, is the usual method to compel a master to perform his duty.²³

e. Clerks of Court.²⁴ The duties of clerks of courts are mainly ministerial and mandamus will lie to compel their performance.²⁵ But mandamus will not lie where there is a remedy by an application to the court for an order directing the clerk to act,²⁶ although an appeal is not in all cases an adequate remedy.²⁷ must clearly appear that there had been a demand and a refusal under circumstances making it the legal duty of respondent to act; New York L., etc., Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 291, 8 L. ed. 949 (holding that a judge may be compelled to sign a judgment rendered by his predecessor in office).

Bill of exceptions.—Where a judge has refused to sign a proper bill of exceptions presented in apt time, his successor may be compelled to sign such a bill, although the time limited for its presentation has expired. State v. Slick, 86 Ind. 501. And likewise where a party is entitled to a bill of exceptions and has prepared and served it within a proper time, a judge cannot refuse to settle the bill because his predecessor in office who tried the case has refused to settle it after his term has expired. Leach v. Pierce, 93 Cal. 614, 29 Pac. 235. But in some jurisdictions, where it is the practice of the person before whom the case is tried to settle a bill of exceptions, although his term as judge has expired, a succeeding judge cannot be compelled to settle and sign a bill of exceptions in a case tried before his predecessor in office. Fellows v. Tait, 14 Wis. 156.

A clear case must be presented.—See State v. Lubke, 14 Mo. App. 587, where mandamus was refused to compel the successor of a judge whose term had expired to make a nunc pro tunc entry where the minute entry had been canceled by direction of the judge a few days after it was made.

23. People v. Bowman, 181 Ill. 421, 55 N. E. 148, 72 Am. St. Rep. 265, holding that mandamus is not the proper remedy to compel the execution of a deed by the master under a certificate of sale.

24. Mandamus to restore clerk to office see CLERKS OF COURTS, 7 Cyc. 200, note 30.

25. See cases cited infra, this note.

Depositions.—A clerk may be compelled to file an interrogatory and issue a commission to take depositions. Roney v. Simmons, 97 Ala. 88, 11 So. 740. Contra, McDuffie v. Cook, 65 Ala. 430.

Approval of bond.—In approving a bond a clerk acts in a quasi-judicial capacity, and his action will not be controlled or reviewed by mandamus; but if he refuses to act at all or decides not to approve for an insufficient reason, mandamus will lie to compel him to pass upon the sufficiency of the bond. Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Cleveland, 76 Ala. 321. A clerk may be compelled by mandamus to approve and file an appeal-bond (Daniels v. Miller, 8 Colo. 542, 9 Pac. 18), or to accept a duly recognized surety company as a surety on a garnishment bond (Santee River Co. v. Webster, 23 R. I. 599, 51 Atl. 218).

Filing papers.—On proper allowance and tender of fees a clerk may be compelled to file papers properly delivered to him. Kozminsky v. Williams, 126 Cal. 26, 58 Pac. 310.

Certified copies.—A clerk of court may be compelled to furnish copies of lists of applicants for liquor licenses, the same being public records. Com. v. Bair, 5 Pa. Dist. 488.

Return upon appeal may be compelled. State v. Wallace, 41 Ind. 445.

Payment of fees to the state may be compelled. State v. Stanton, 14 Utah 180, 46 Pac. 1109.

Transcript of appeal.—Where a clerk of the district court fails to prepare a bill of costs in anticipation of a demand for a delivery of a transcript of appeal, and does not have it approved by the judge, and refuses to deliver the record, the appellant may apply to the district, or to the supreme court for mandamus. State v. Wells, 111 La. 463, 35 So. 641.

Certificates of jurors and witnesses.—In the absence of a statute imposing such a duty, a county clerk, ex officio clerk of the superior court, will not be compelled to issue a certificate to a juror, stating his attendance and the amount to which he is entitled therefor. Hilton v. Curry, 124 Cal. 84, 56 Pac. 784. The clerk cannot be compelled to issue a certificate of attendance as a witness to a person whose right thereto is not clear. State v. Greene, 91 Wis. 500, 65 N. W. 181.

26. State v. Moores, 29 Nebr. 122, 45 N. W. 278 (holding that mandamus will not lie to compel a clerk of the district court to issue an order of sale upon a decree of foreclosure of mortgage, where no application has been made to the district court to direct the clerk to issue such order); People v. McGoldrick, 33 N. Y. Suppl. 441, 24 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 292, 1 N. Y. Annot. Cas. 401 (holding that mandamus will not be granted to compel the clerk of the New York city court to deliver papers in his possession to relator).

27. State v. Renick, 157 Mo. 292, 57 S. W. 713, holding that a writ of mandamus may

f. Sheriffs. A sheriff may be compelled by mandamus to execute writs,²⁸ such as writs of attachment²⁹ or execution.³⁰ He may likewise be compelled to execute deeds upon judicial sales.³¹ Mandamus will, however, be refused where there is another adequate remedy,³² or when an antagonistic application is pending elsewhere.³³

g. District and Prosecuting Attorneys. Mandamus will lie to restore a district or prosecuting attorney to his office where he has been wrongfully removed,³⁴ or to secure his lawful and clear right of audience or appearance.³⁵ But a district attorney is not a ministerial officer, and mandamus will not as a general rule issue to compel him to act,³⁶ in any event not unless all lawful conditions are first performed.³⁷ Nor will it lie to approve his accounts where the duty is not clear.³⁸

be awarded against a clerk of court to require him to issue an execution on a judgment, although the relator has a remedy by suit on the clerk's bond, where such remedy is far more dilatory, and less adequate.

A deed contradictory of the sheriff's return of a tax-sale will not be compelled. Hewell v. Lane, 53 Cal. 213.

Where tax-sale is upon invalid assessment deed will not be compelled. Bosworth v. Webster, 64 Cal. 1, 27 Pac. 786.

32. State v. Holliday, 35 Nebr. 327, 53 N. W. 142 (holding, where a sheriff was acting under orders of the district court and was answerable to it for abuse of its powers, application for relief should be made to that court); State v. Chambers, 26 Ohio Cir. Ct. 404.

33. Evans v. Thomas, 32 Kan. 469, 4 Pac. 833, where a writ sought by a justice to compel a sheriff to return a prisoner for trial before him was refused in discretion by reason of a like prosecution in another justice's court. See also supra, II, H.

34. Ex p. Lusk, 82 Ala. 519, 2 So. 140; People v. Hallett, 1 Colo. 352 (where, however, the writ was refused, it appearing that relator was not admitted to practice at the time he was elected district attorney); Howard v. Burns, 14 S. D. 383, 85 N. W. 920 (holding that a mandamus to compel county commissioners to issue a warrant for the county attorney's salary would not be denied for the reason that the order refusing to issue such a warrant was appealable). But see State v. Read, 49 La. Ann. 1533, 22 So. 798, holding that the supreme court, pending a suit in the district court against officers of a parish in which attorneys specially employed by them have been recognized by the district judge who has charge of the case, will not on application of the district attorney compel such judge to recognize him as the representative of the parish and entitled to direct the defense.

35. State v. Brown, 106 La. 437, 31 So. 50; Terrell v. Greene, 88 Tex. 539, 31 S. W. 631, holding that a district judge might be compelled to permit a district attorney to appear for the county in an action which it was his right and duty to prosecute, although the order denying permission to prosecute was appealable, and although the district attorney might recover the commission which would accrue upon his prosecuting the suit, on refusal by the county of his services.

Prosecution under municipal ordinance.—The fact that an ordinance under which offenses likewise punishable by statute are being prosecuted in a city court is invalid is not a ground for mandamus to compel the court to permit the county attorney to take charge of the prosecution, nor is the fact that the legislature had no authority to create a city court. Jackson v. Swayne, 92 Tex. 242, 47 S. W. 711 [reversing (Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 619].

The fact that there is another adequate remedy by filing a complaint in a justice's or a county court will prevent the issuance of a mandamus to a city court to allow a county attorney to take charge of a prosecution for an offense punishable alike by ordinance and by statute. Jackson v. Swayne, 92 Tex. 242, 47 S. W. 711 [reversing (Civ. App. 1898) 45 S. W. 619].

37. Buggeln v. Doe, (Ariz. 1904) 76 Pac. 458.

38. Goldsborough v. Lloyd, 86 Md. 374, 38 Atl. 773, holding that mandamus will not be granted by two of the judges of a judicial circuit to compel a third judge of such circuit to approve the accounts of the district attorney of such circuit, such judge entertaining an opinion variant from that of the other judges as to the amount of fees payable.

and there is no other adequate remedy, a person duly qualified may have mandamus to secure an examination for admission as an attorney;³⁹ the power of admitting an attorney to practice, however, is judicial and will not be controlled by mandamus,⁴⁰ although it has been held that where an attorney has been authorized to practice in a higher court entitling him to practice in inferior courts, his admission into the inferior courts may be compelled,⁴¹ and he may likewise enforce the right of audience in the proper court or tribunal.⁴² Attorneys appointed to defend prisoners may have mandamus to compel a court to fix their compensation.⁴³ And the duty of substitution of attorneys may be thus enforced,⁴⁴ as well as the right of an attorney to prosecute pro se a claim lawfully assigned to him.⁴⁵ Discharged attorneys cannot compel the court to refuse to recognize their substitutes until the fees of relators are paid, since they have an adequate remedy at law.⁴⁶ Nor can an attorney compel an officer to repay a fee illegally exacted, there being an adequate remedy by action.⁴⁷

(II) DISBARMENT AND RESTORATION. In case of a clear duty to proceed a court or public committee may be compelled to hear a disbarment proceeding.⁴⁸ When an attorney has been disbarred for a cause over which the court has no jurisdiction;⁴⁹ where the act of the court in excluding him was wrongful,⁵⁰ or the proceedings are taken without notice and opportunity to be heard;⁵¹ or where the exclusion was an abuse of judicial power, or made for an ulterior purpose, or through prejudice or passion,⁵² mandamus lies to compel restoration or reinstatement. An action for damages is not an adequate remedy.⁵³ Mandamus will not lie, however, from a court which has no supervisory jurisdiction.⁵⁴ Restoration by the state court cannot be compelled by the United States supreme court.⁵⁵

2. MATTERS RELATING TO CIVIL PROCEDURE—a. Interlocutory Proceedings in General. The rule is almost universal that mandamus will not lie to correct or review interlocutory proceedings, even though no immediate appeal is given; such proceedings being reviewable on appeal or error from final judgment or decree. A very great proportion of such proceedings involve judgment and discretion, and could not in any event be corrected by mandamus; and the delay, vexation, and expense attending interference with trial courts in interlocutory matters would be burdensome.⁵⁶

b. Rules of Practice. Courts of general jurisdiction act judicially in making rules of practice, and so long as their acts are in good faith and within the limits of their powers they are not subject to review by mandamus.⁵⁷ But where an inferior court has adopted rules of practice the discretion is departed with so where it was held that applicant was not injured, he having appeared and been heard.

Where the circuit court dismissed an appeal under its own rule, a judgment might have been entered on application of either party, and this could have been reviewed by writ of error; so that, even if no judgment were in fact entered, mandamus to compel the vacation of the order dismissing the appeal was not the proper remedy. *Detroit, etc., R. long as the rules are retained, and rights conferred thereby may be enforced by mandamus.⁵⁸

c. Abatement and Revival. In case of abatement by death or otherwise a clear right of revival will be enforced by mandamus.⁵⁹

d. Consolidation of Actions. The consolidation of actions is usually regarded as discretionary, and will not be controlled by mandamus.⁶⁰

e. Change of Venue. Where there is a clear ministerial duty to award a change of venue, such change may be compelled by mandamus.⁶¹ But where the granting or refusal of a motion for change of venue is within the discretion of the court, the ruling thereon cannot be reviewed by mandamus,⁶² although the court may be compelled by mandamus to exercise its discretion.⁶³ In accordance with the general rule,⁶⁴ mandamus will not lie to compel a change of venue where there is an adequate remedy by appeal or error,⁶⁵ or where the order is regarded as interlocutory.⁶⁶ So likewise certiorari and not mandamus has been held the proper remedy to vacate an order granting a change.⁶⁷ Where a change of venue has been granted without authority, mandamus to proceed may issue.⁶⁸ Where a change of venue has been granted, mandamus lies to compel a transmission of the record.⁶⁹ Where the change has been by consent, a dismissal in the court to which the change has been taken because of irregularities in the change cannot be compelled.⁷⁰

f. Transfer of Cause. Mandamus lies to enforce an absolute right of removal.⁷¹ Where a cause has been regularly removed, and the court from which it has been transferred assumes to treat it as still within its jurisdiction, and vacates the order of removal, mandamus lies to compel it to vacate the latter order.⁷²

g. Parties. Where the court has erroneously declined to make a person a party, upon the ground that it has no jurisdiction to do so, it has been held that mandamus will lie,⁷³ although rulings as to the substitution or bringing in of new parties,⁷⁴ or the granting or refusal of a motion to intervene,⁷⁵ are usually regarded as matters of judicial discretion which will not be controlled.

h. Process. Mandamus lies to compel the issue of process,⁷⁶ and in some jurisdictions it may issue to set aside service,⁷⁷ or to compel the allowance of an amended return to process, as well as to control the action of the court in permitting such an amendment.⁷⁸ Where service has been improperly quashed it has been held that mandamus will issue.⁷⁹ review decisions as to their sufficiency.⁸² The power to grant or refuse amendments to pleadings is largely discretionary as well as interlocutory in its character, and mandamus will not as a general rule be issued to control or review such discretion.⁸³ The same rule applies to a refusal of extended time to answer.⁸⁴

k. Set-Off. The allowance of a set-off by motion is usually discretionary and mandamus will not lie.⁸⁵

l. Stipulations. A disputed stipulation to settle a case cannot be enforced by mandamus to the court.⁸⁶ An order setting aside a stipulation between the attorneys in a suit being judicial will not be reviewed by mandamus.⁸⁷

m. Evidence, Depositions, and Witnesses. The admissibility of evidence is peculiarly within the discretion of the court, and mandamus will not be issued to review or control it.⁸⁸ There being no adequate remedy by writ of error, an order for production of books and papers may in some jurisdictions be reviewed on mandamus to set aside.⁸⁹ The writ will issue to compel the issuance of a commission to take a deposition,⁹⁰ unless the act is discretionary;⁹¹ to compel the allowance of proper interrogatories;⁹² or to compel the examiner to complete the deposition, and punish a witness refusing to testify by contempt proceedings, if necessary;⁹³ but the act of a court suppressing or refusing to suppress a deposition being judicial will not be controlled.⁹⁴ An order for the attachment of a witness cannot be vacated by mandamus where other remedies exist,⁹⁵ although it has been said such attachment may be compelled.⁹⁶ A state court, however, cannot be compelled by mandamus to issue a subpoena for witnesses in a proceeding before a federal officer where the federal government has made no provision for compelling the attendance of witnesses.⁹⁷ Discretion in disallowing witness' fees will not be controlled the rule being the same as is applicable to other discretionary acts.⁹⁸

n. Dismissal and Nonsuit. As a general rule the action of the court with regard to dismissing an action is judicial and not ministerial, and will not be reviewed by mandamus,⁹⁹ particularly where there is an adequate remedy by appeal,¹ or otherwise;² but in case the statute peremptorily requires a dismissal on certain conditions the writ will go to compel it.³ Where there is no remedy by appeal or writ of error, an order erroneously striking a case from the docket may be corrected by mandamus.⁴

o. Reinstatement of Case. The reinstatement of a cause dismissed or disposed of is usually discretionary, not to be controlled by mandamus.⁵

Although the parties agreed to a dismissal, mandamus does not lie to compel it. Ex p. Rowland, 26 Ala. 133.

Rights of third persons.—In case of an improper dismissal the remedy of a third person whose rights are affected thereby is by mandamus, if any remedy whatever exists. Jennings v. Pearce, 99 Ala. 303, 13 So. 605; Brazier v. Tarver, 4 Ala. 569.

Cross bill.—Mandamus will not lie to restore a cross bill erroneously dismissed. Ex p. Woodruff, 123 Ala. 99, 26 So. 509 [overruling Ex p. Thornton, 46 Ala. 384].

The dismissal of an appeal may be discretionary. Taylor County Ct. v. Holt, (W. Va. 1906) 56 S. E. 205.

Wayne Cir. Judges*, 63 Mich. 735, 30 N. W. 590 (holding that mandamus would issue to compel the taking off of a nonsuit, where the party against whom it was ordered was prevented by a misapprehension from being in court when the case was filed, and where his motion for reinstatement was overruled on technical grounds, and because the prosecution of the case was an expense to the county).

Remanded case.—After a cause is transferred and remanded for want of jurisdiction mandamus lies to compel the reinstatement of the case. Ex p. State, 115 Ala. 133, 22 So. 556; Ex p. State, 71 Ala. 363; Ex p. Remson, 31 Ala. 270. But see State v. Eighth Judicial Dist. Ct., 32 Mont. 37, 79 Pac. 546. Where a change of venue has been duly taken, and a transcript of the record filed in the office of the clerk of the circuit court of the county to which the case has been transferred, so that the court has complete jurisdiction thereof, but the court dismisses the cause on its own motion for alleged want of jurisdiction, the supreme court will, by mandamus, require the circuit court to reinstate the case, and to proceed with the trial thereof, but it has not the power to control the judgment and discretion of the circuit court in any particular direction, under Mo. Const. art. 6, § 3, giving the supreme court "a general superintending control" over the circuit courts of the state. State v. Neville, 157 Mo. 386, 57 S. W. 1012, 80 Am. St. Rep. 638, 51 L. R. A. 95.

in granting or refusing a continuance or postponement will not be controlled by mandamus.⁶ But in a clear case of a continuance without right,⁷ or where no showing has been made authorizing the exercise of discretion,⁸ the court may be compelled to proceed; and likewise a clear duty of the court to postpone will be enforced.⁹

q. Stay of Proceedings. Where the grounds urged confer no power or discretion upon a court to grant a stay of proceedings it may be compelled by mandamus to proceed,¹⁰ in case the order is not appealable.¹¹ But where the facts confer a discretion upon the trial court mandamus will not lie unless the discretion is abused in granting or refusing the order.¹²

r. Trial—(1) IN GENERAL. Mandamus will not lie to compel a transfer of a cause from the law to the equity docket;¹³ or to review the decision of a court as to the right to a jury trial where it is judicial.¹⁴ The writ will, however, issue to enforce a peremptory statutory right to such a trial.¹⁵ Mandamus will not in any event enforce a jury trial where such trial has not been duly demanded in accord with a mandatory statute.¹⁶ Severance of a civil trial has been held discretionary.¹⁷ That the trial was irregular is no ground for mandamus, when there is another remedy.¹⁸

Michigan.—Thompson v. Bay Cir. Judge, 138 Mich. 81, 101 N. W. 61, holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the vacation of an order striking a stipulation of discontinuance from the files; plaintiff under such circumstances being required merely to proceed with the cause or pay costs.

(ii) CALENDAR. The control of the trial calendar is purely discretionary, and mandamus will not lie.¹⁹

(iii) ARGUMENTS TO JURY. Mandamus will not issue to control the discretion of the court in limiting arguments to the jury unless the discretion is abused.²⁰

(iv) STENOGRAPHIC REPORTS. Mandamus lies to compel the official reporter to furnish a transcript of his notes.²¹ But mandamus will not lie to review the discretion of the trial judge in refusing an order to the stenographer.²² An official stenographer may compel payment for his statutory services by mandamus to the proper officers.²³

s. Verdict and Findings. The court may be compelled by mandamus to receive a verdict which is in proper form and responsive to the issues.²⁴ A ministerial duty to make findings of fact may be enforced by mandamus,²⁵ but the writ will not lie to correct insufficient or erroneous conclusions.²⁶

Necessity of special findings.—Mandamus will not lie to compel a court to receive a special verdict of a jury until they have found on all the special issues submitted to them, under the Judiciary Act, c. 23, § 7, providing for the submission of such special issues. Rose v. Harvey, 18 R. I. 527, 30 Atl. 459.

Directed verdict.—Where an instruction has been given in the nature of a demurrer to the evidence the judge is alone responsible for the verdict. Mandamus will not lie to compel him to receive a verdict offered against his direction. State v. Thayer, 5 Mo. App. 420.

Where jury has altered verdict.—The writ will not lie to compel the reception of a first verdict where the jury, before discharge, change it and render another. State v. Clementson, 69 Wis. 628, 35 N. W. 56.

But compare Sankey v. Levy, 69 Cal. 244, 10 Pac. 336, holding that mandamus does not lie to correct the error of a superior court in rendering the judgment in a case on appeal from a justice's court, without filing findings of fact.

generally regarded as discretionary and will not be disturbed,²⁸ unless the discretion has been abused,²⁹ or the action has been beyond the power of the court,³⁰ although in some cases where under the practice an order granting a new trial is not appealable it has been held subject to review by mandamus.³¹ Like new trial, the granting or denying of a rehearing in equity is discretionary.³² Where a tribunal in excess of its proper powers revokes an order for a new trial which it had legally granted, mandamus will compel it to proceed with the new trial.³³

Where motion is not pending.—Where, on the day named for hearing defendant's motion for a new trial, there was no appearance for plaintiff, and the hearing was continued to another day, at which neither party appeared, and nothing was thereafter done with reference to the motion, mandamus will not lie to direct the judge to decide the motion, it not having been submitted and not being pending. State v. Judge Stutsman County Dist. Ct., 3 N. D. 43, 53 N. W. 433.

Showing on motion.—Mandamus will not lie to compel a judge to pass upon a motion for a new trial in a cause tried before another judge, who has since died, where no competent evidence of the testimony introduced at the trial is offered upon the motion for new trial, since without such evidence the motion could not properly be decided. People v. McConnell, 146 Ill. 532, 34 N. E. 945.

W. 292, holding that under Const. art. 5, § 6, giving the court of civil appeals such original and appellate jurisdiction as may be prescribed by law; and Acts (1892), organizing such court, and authorizing it (section 9), by mandamus, to compel a judge of the district court to proceed to trial and judgment in a cause agreeably to the principles and usages of law, where a separate verdict was entered on each branch of a suit on two causes of action, one for and the other against defendants, and the trial court entered judgment, only on the verdict against them, and then granted defendants a new trial, but refused a new trial as to the verdict against plaintiff, mandamus will issue to compel it to vacate its order denying plaintiff a new trial, and on retrial, to try anew both causes of action.

Where the maker and indorser of a note were jointly sued, as authorized by Acts (1839), p. 489, and Acts (1835), p. 248, and a general verdict was found for defendants, but the court, on a motion for a new trial, being of the opinion that the verdict was wrong as to the maker, granted a new trial as to both, the supreme court will issue mandamus directing the court to vacate the order as to the indorser, and enter judgment in his favor on the verdict, and allow a new trial against the maker. *People v. Entry of appealable judgment.—Mandamus writ may issue, relators must establish a clear right to the relief.³⁸ There must have been a demand made of the trial court,³⁹ and there must have been a refusal upon the part of the trial court to act.⁴⁰

(II) CORRECTION OR AMENDMENT. The correction or amendment of a judgment is usually regarded as discretionary, and will not be controlled by mandamus.⁴¹

(III) VACATION. Mandamus will not as a general rule issue to compel the vacation of a judgment, this being discretionary, and appeal or error an adequate remedy.⁴² But where the right of appeal is cut off by the unauthorized entry of a final judgment which the trial judge had no jurisdiction or power to order, mandamus may issue to annul and set aside the void entry.⁴³ It has also been will lie to compel the court to enter a final judgment which is necessary to secure the relator a right of appeal. Havens v. Stewart, 7 Ida. 298, 62 Pac. 682.

38. Elder v. Grunsky, 127 Cal. 67, 59 Pac. 300 (holding that a clerk will not be compelled to enter a default judgment where service of process has been set aside); Rugg v. Davis, 68 Vt. 600, 35 Atl. 491; Fairbanks v. Amoskeag Nat. Bank, 32 Fed. 572 (holding that a clerk cannot be compelled by mandamus to enter judgment until there has been a determination of the cause).

Illustrations.—Mandamus will not issue to compel a judge to render a personal judgment against defendants on a finding which is not responsive to the pleadings, and which is, at plaintiff's instance, declared to be advisory only. State v. Dickinson, 59 Nebr. 753, 82 N. W. 16. The supreme court will not grant a mandamus to compel the common pleas to enter judgment on a report of auditors, while a rule is pending in that court to show cause why the report should not be set aside. Berry v. Callet, 6 N. J. L. 179.

Pending a motion for new trial, mandamus to enter a judgment will not be granted where there has been no unreasonable delay in acting upon such motion. Ex p. Bradstreet, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 588, 8 L. ed. 1054.

But see Frederick v. Mecosta County Cir. Judge, 52 Mich. 529, 18 N. W. 343, holding that mandamus would issue where rights of third persons had not intervened to compel the entry of a proper judgment in replevin.

43. State v. Sneed, 105 Tenn. 711, 58 S. W. 1070, holding that mandamus would not be denied for the reason that relator had an adequate remedy by enjoining the collection of the judgment, since he was entitled to an adequate remedy at law, and holding also that the contention that such order was beheld that where a chancery decree has been erroneously set aside on mere motion its restoration may be compelled.⁴⁴ Where a judgment is set aside, not as an act of judicial discretion but wholly upon a stipulation between the parties, it may be reinstated by mandamus in case the stipulation does not justify the act of the court.⁴⁵

(iv) OPENING DEFAULT. The discretion of the trial court as to opening a default will not be interfered with unless such discretion be abused.⁴⁶ But in the absence of any other remedy a void judgment by default may be vacated.⁴⁷

(v) SATISFACTION. Where relator has another remedy mandamus will not issue to vacate a satisfaction of a judgment.⁴⁸

(vi) EXECUTIONS. The issue of execution upon a judgment or decree is a ministerial duty, and the writ lies to compel its performance.⁴⁹ But mandamus

yond the jurisdiction of the supreme court, as canceling a judgment after the expiration of the term was without merit, since it presupposed that a judgment entered without authority was valid.

Motion for new trial.—Where a judgment was entered after the adjournment of court nunc pro tunc as of the last day of the term, it was not necessary to file a motion for a new trial before bringing proceedings by mandamus to compel the trial court to expunge such judgment from the record, since, as the judgment was entered after the term, the relator had no opportunity to file such a motion. State v. Sneed, 105 Tenn. 711, 58 S. W. 1070.

W. 625 (holding that where the court has acted on a motion to set aside a default, and permitted the filing of an amended plea by granting the motion on condition that defendant appear and plead to the merits, mandamus will not lie to compel it to vacate the conditions, as the court's exercise of discretion will not be interfered with, and any error in the decision may be reviewed by allowing the case to go to judgment and raising the question by writ of error or case-made); Ex p. Benson, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 363.

A void order, ultra vires the court, opening a default may be set aside by mandamus. Ex p. Payne, 130 Ala. 189, 29 So. 622.

Burnette*, 58 Kan. 355, 49 Pac. 93 (holding that the clerk of the district court, having custody of the record of a judgment revived against the executors of defendant after his death, may be compelled by mandamus to issue execution thereon, where it appears that an application to the judge of the district court of the county for an order for such execution would be fruitless).

Louisiana.—Cox v. Thomas, 11 La. 366. But see State v. Judge New Orleans Fourth Dist. Ct., 19 La. Ann. 4, holding that where the district judge renders judgment on a rule to show cause why execution should not issue, dismissing a rule, a mandamus will not lie to compel him to order an execution. The decision on the rule is a judgment of the court, which can only be inquired into on appeal.

164, 78 Pac. 796, holding that under Ballinger Annot. Codes & St. § 5755, authorizing the issuance of a writ of mandate to compel the performance of an act which the law especially enjoins as a duty, mandate will lie to compel a judge of the supreme court to issue an execution where he has refused to do so, and has quashed an execution issued by the clerk, after execution has been ordered by the supreme court on appeal; the duty of issuing the execution not being so far solely a ministerial one, within the province of the clerk, as to preclude the direction of the writ of mandamus to the judge.

Mandamus to compel jury trial of right to property.—Under Gen. St. p. 1420, § 33, providing that, if plaintiff in execution shall indemnify the sheriff against the demand of a claimant, the sheriff shall suspend proceedings for the trial of the right of property, the remedy for a person whose property is wrongfully taken is by replevin, trespass, or trover, and mandamus will not lie to compel the court to try such right before a jury. 58. Holtum v. Greif, 144 Cal. 521, 78 Pac. 11 (holding that the remedy by appeal from an order overruling plaintiff's motion for execution is not such a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary court of law, within Code Civ. Proc. § 1086, as will prevent the issuance of a writ of mandamus against the judge of the court to compel the issuance of execution, where the result of a reversal of the order would merely confirm the petitioner's already complete right to execution); Fulton v. Hanna, 40 Cal. 278; Goodwin v. Glazer, 10 Cal. 333; Pickell v. Owen, 66 Iowa 485, 24 N. W. 8; State v. Frank, 52 Nebr. 553, 72 N. W. 857; State v. Pike, 17 Ohio Cir. Ct. 624, 9 Ohio Cir. Dec. 299.

59. State v. Chambers, 26 Ohio Cir. Ct. 404. See Armstrong v. Stansel, 47 Fla. 127, 36 So. 762 (holding that previous to the going into effect of Laws (1901), p. 48, claimant,⁶⁰ or sale,⁶¹ or to confirm a sale,⁶² or to correct or set aside an antedated execution.⁶³ The pendency of an appeal or writ of error from the judgment will prevent mandamus,⁶⁴ as will a stay of execution.⁶⁵ It has been held that the refusal of a court to quash a void execution may be controlled by mandamus.⁶⁶

(vii) JUDICIAL SALES. As a general rule the sheriff or other officer, in making a judicial sale, acts under the direction of the court out of which the order of sale issues, and his acts will not be controlled by mandamus from another court, at least in the absence of an application to the trial court for an order affording the relief sought.⁶⁷ An order affirming a judicial sale being discretionary cannot be compelled by mandamus,⁶⁸ but it has been held that mandamus may issue to compel a postponement of sale.⁶⁹

(viii) IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT. Certiorari, not mandamus, is the proper remedy to review an order to discharge an imprisoned debtor.⁷⁰ But the duty to administer an oath of insolvency and discharge a debtor has been held ministerial and enforceable by mandamus.⁷¹

(ix) SEQUESTRATION. Mandamus will not lie to control the refusal of a judge to allow sequestered property to be bonded.⁷²

c. 4914, authorizing an officer to be compelled by mandamus to execute a levy, mandamus did not lie to compel a sheriff to execute a writ of fieri facias; plaintiff having other adequate remedies; Jones v. McMahan, 30 Tex. 719 (holding that an action against the clerk for refusal to issue an execution is not an adequate remedy, so as to exclude mandamus, when the amount of the execution exceeds that of the clerk's bond).

60. State v. Gillespie, 9 Nebr. 505, 4 N. W. 239.

61. Armstrong v. Stansel, 47 Fla. 127, 36 So. 762; State v. Cone, 40 Fla. 409, 25 So. 279, 74 Am. St. Rep. 150; Wright v. Bond, 127 N. C. 39, 37 S. E. 65, 80 Am. St. Rep. 781, holding that mandamus will not lie to compel a sheriff to sell land liable to execution and sale, and apply the proceeds in satisfaction of a judgment, where the sheriff is solvent or his bond is valid, since the judgment creditor has thereby an adequate remedy at law.

62. State v. Island County Super. Ct., 21 Wash. 631, 59 Pac. 505.

63. Jennings v. Kalamazoo Cir. Judge, 44 Mich. 99, 6 N. W. 203.

64. People v. Adams, 13 Colo. 550, 22 Pac. 826, holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the issue of an execution on the ground that an appeal has not been properly perfected, where the appeal from the judgment has been allowed, and the appeal-bond approved by order of the trial court, as the jurisdiction of the supreme court has thereby attached, and a defect in the appeal can be reached by a motion to strike from the docket and files.

Pendency of appeal as preventing mandamus in general see supra, II, H, 1.

Where a writ of error is informal the remedy is by motion to vacate the writ and not by mandamus to have the judgment carried into execution. Ex p. French, 100 U. S. 1, 25 L. ed. 529.

65. Spradin v. Bratton, 6 Lea (Tenn.) 685. But see Avery v. Contra Costa County Super. Ct., 57 Cal. 247, holding that where the issue of execution is prevented by an unauthorized stay of proceedings, and there is no appeal, mandamus lies to the court to compel its issue.

66. Moore v. Bell, 13 Ala. 469, where the execution issued in the name of a deceased plaintiff. But see State v. Waller, 133 Ala. 199, 32 So. 163, holding that the purchaser of a decree in the chancery court of Montgomery county was not entitled to mandamus from the city court of the city of Montgomery to compel the sheriff to release a levy of execution issued on the decree and to return the execution, the remedy, if the purchaser was entitled to any, being by an application to the chancery court for an order on the sheriff to release the levy, etc.

67. People v. Bowman, 181 Ill. 421, 55 N. E. 148, 72 Am. St. Rep. 265; State v. Wright, 26 Mont. 540, 69 Pac. 101; State v. Holliday, 35 Nebr. 327, 53 N. W. 142.

The execution of a deed to a prior lienor, on redemption from a mortgage foreclosure, may be compelled. San Jose Water Co. v. Lyndon, 124 Cal. 518, 57 Pac. 481.

68. Tabor v. Lorange, 53 Ala. 543.

69. Roberts v. Kalamazoo Cir. Judge, 122 Mich. 560, 81 N. W. 355, holding that where it is apparent that property cannot be sold under foreclosure, to advantage, until certain pending suits are disposed of, a postponement may be compelled.

70. Ricardo v. Passaic Ct. of C. Pl., 38 N. J. L. 182.

71. Harrison v. Emerson, 2 Leigh (Va.) 764.

72. State v. Judge New Orleans Fourth Dist. Ct., 17 La. Ann. 282.

After discontinuance.—Mandamus to a district judge, directing him to fix the amount of a release bond, and to grant an order for the release of certain property sequestered in a suit, will not be granted at the instance of defendant in a suit where the suit has been duly and legally discontinued, and the effect of the discontinuance is to put defendant in possession of the property sequestered. State v. Farrar, 20 La. Ann. 99.

(x) WRIT OF ASSISTANCE. Where there is no other remedy provided for putting a party to the suit or a purchaser under a decree in possession mandamus will issue to compel a writ of assistance.⁷³

(xi) RESTITUTION. Mandamus lies to compel restitution of property pursuant to judgment or decree,⁷⁴ also to restore moneys paid under a reversed judgment or decree,⁷⁵ as well as the possession of land,⁷⁶ and a sheriff may be compelled to execute the writ.⁷⁷ But mandamus will not go when there is another adequate remedy.⁷⁸

v. Record. Where it is merely a ministerial duty mandamus will issue to enforce the making of a court record,⁷⁹ or its correction;⁸⁰ but a judge cannot be compelled to alter his record where the alteration involves a judicial act.⁸¹

w. Review—(i) APPEAL AND ERROR. The use of the writ of mandamus as incidental to proceedings to secure the review of civil actions has been elsewhere

Blanchard*, 98 Cal. 311, 33 Pac. 199, holding that the purchaser at an execution sale in justice's court is not entitled to mandamus from the superior court to compel the delivery of the property by the debtor.

Where there is a remedy by appeal mandamus will be refused. Aldrich v. Wayne Cir. Judge, 111 Mich. 525, 69 N. W. 1108; State v. Burnell, 104 Wis. 246, 80 N. W. 460.

74. Kirk v. Cole, 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 71 (where undertaking for appeal was not filed in time); State v. Fields, 62 Nebr. 520, 87 N. W. 318 (holding that where a defendant in an action of forcible entry had attempted to appeal from an adverse judgment therein and no appeal lay, the district court may be required to enter judgment for plaintiff, although previously refusing on the ground that the appeal lay and superseded his jurisdiction).

Where an order suspending restitution has been granted it is reviewable only by appeal. U. S. v. Marshall, 122 Fed. 428, 58 C. C. A. 410.

75. Ex p. Walter, 89 Ala. 237, 7 So. 400, 18 Am. St. Rep. 103.

77. North Pac. Coast R. Co. v. Gardner, 79 Cal. 213, 21 Pac. 735 (holding that the superior court may issue a writ of mandate to a sheriff, requiring him to execute a writ of restitution issued by a justice of the peace, upon his refusal to do so); Fremont v. Crippen, 10 Cal. 211, 70 Am. Dec. 711 (holding that, although petitioner has a civil action against a sheriff, or a criminal prosecution against him, if he refuses to execute a writ of restitution, yet neither of these can compel the sheriff to execute the writ, and therefore mandamus will be awarded).

Where the occupant is not a party or has not acquired possession under a party or after lis pendens filed the writ will not issue. Fogarty v. Sparks, 22 Cal. 142.

78. Ex p. Williamson, 8 Ark. 424 (where error would lie); Gutierrez v. Hebbard, 106 Cal. 167, 39 Pac. 529 (holding that mandamus will not lie pending an appeal from a decree awarding certain lands to plaintiff in partition, to compel the setting aside of a writ of possession issued under the court's order, and to restore petitioners to the possession of the lands, the remedy being by appeal, if the court erred).

80. Taylor v. Gillette, 52 Conn. 216 (so holding where a probate judge stated in the return on appeal that appellants took the appeal as sisters instead of heirs); State v. Whittett, 61 Wis. 351, 21 N. W. 245 (holding that an entry by a justice of the peace in his docket of an adjournment being only a ministerial duty, mandamus will lie to compel him to correct the same to conform to the facts, but only after notice to the parties whose rights are to be affected by the correction); Reg. v. West Riding of Yorkshire, 3 G. & D. 170, 12 L. J. M. C. 148. But see State v. Van Ells, 69 Wis. 19, 32 N. W. 32, holding that a peremptory writ of mandamus will not lie to compel a justice of the peace to enter in his docket an adjournment which the entry of a judgment in his docket and his own statement tend to show that he never made.

81. Missouri.—Dixon v. Second Judicial Cir. Judge, 4 Mo. 286.

New Jersey.—Mooney v. Edwards, 51 N. J. L. 479, 17 Atl. 973, holding that a writ of mandamus will not issue to compel a justice of the peace who has presided at a trial in the court for the trial of small causes to alter the entry made in his docket of the date at which an appeal-bond was filed and approved by him.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. Hultz, 6 Pa. St. 469.

fully treated.⁸² An appellate court may be compelled by mandamus to certify a cause to a higher appellate court where there is a specific statutory duty to do so.⁸³ The superior court may be compelled by mandamus to proceed with a trial de novo on appeal from the judgment of a justice.⁸⁴

(II) CERTIORARI. An order quashing⁸⁵ or refusing to quash⁸⁶ a writ of certiorari cannot be reviewed by mandamus.

(III) SUPERSEDEAS. Where not otherwise reviewable a wrongful supersedeas may be corrected by mandamus;⁸⁷ but where the order is discretionary it cannot as a general rule be reviewed.⁸⁸ Where there is a clear right to supersedeas on appeal, mandamus will lie to compel the trial court to fix the amount of the bond;⁸⁹ but the right must be absolute; the discretion of the court will not be controlled.⁹⁰

x. Payments Out of Court. A writ of mandamus will not issue to authorize the payment of money from the custody of the court, where the relator's right is not clearly established.⁹¹ It has been held, however, that a wholly unlawful payment out of court may be controlled by mandamus.⁹²

y. Bonds and Undertakings. Where the duty is ministerial a court may be compelled by mandamus to approve or reject a bond,⁹³ or to fix the amount of an Conner*, (Tex. 1907) 100 S. W. 367 (holding that mandamus would be refused where there was no conflict of decision); Herf v. James, 86 Tex. 230, 24 S. W. 396. Suppl. 742 (where, in an application for mandamus to compel a person, as clerk of a magistrate, to exhibit a criminal complaint to defendant's attorney, it appears by the affidavit of the magistrate that respondent was not his clerk, and that he had possession of the complaint only for the purpose of placing it in a vault at the magistrate's request, the application will be denied); Reg. v. Ballard, 28 Ont. 489; Reg. v. Ray, 44 U. C. Q. B. 17 (where the court refused a mandamus to the mayor of a municipality to issue a distress warrant on a conviction made by him under the Temperance Act of 1864, where the by-law and conviction were open to grave objections, which had been taken on the trial before him); Reg. v. McConnell, 6 U. C. Q. B. O. S. 629.

14. Ex p. Clements, 50 Ala. 459 (holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the discharge of a prisoner once acquitted, the remedy being by plea); Com. v. Berry, 92 S. W. 936, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 234; Maynard v. Ingham Cir. Judge, 124 Mich. 465, 83

N. W. 102; Jones v. State, 43 Tex. Cr. 419, 66 S. W. 559 (holding that mandamus will not issue to compel the clerk of a lower court to enter a sentence on the record).

Commission of lunacy.—An application to compel a court to issue a commission to inquire into the sanity of a convict, alleged to have been pronounced insane by nine physicians, since his conviction, was refused. Com. v. Wireback, 192 Pa. St. 150, 44 Atl. 1102.

16. Alabama.—Kerr v. Stanislaus County Super. Ct., 130 Cal. 183, 62 Pac. 479 (where mandamus to compel citation of officer for official neglect was refused); Strong v. Grant, 99 Cal. 100, 33 Pac. 733 (where mandamus to compel a dismissal was refused).

Kentucky.—Monroe v. Berry, 94 S. W. 38, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 602, where it was held that the transfer of a person accused, from one jail to another within the county and within the jurisdiction of the court, was not reviewable.

Montana.—State v. Silver Bow County Second Judicial Dist. Ct., 26 Mont. 275, 67 Pac. 943, holding that the discretion of the court in granting leave to file an information, without a preliminary examination, would not be refused.

New York.—People v. Tracy, 1 Den. 617, whether a warrant should issue for intrusion on Indian lands.

England.—Reg. v. Middlesex, 2 Q. B. D. 516, 46 L. J. M. C. 225, 36 L. T. Rep. N. S. 402, 25 Wkly. Rep. 610.

Canada.—Delaney v. Macnabb, 21 U. C. C. P. 563; Thompson v. Desnoyers, 16 Quebec Super. Ct. 253.

17. Ex p. Cage, 45 Cal. 248.

18. Cribb v. Parker, 119 Ga. 298, 46 S. E. 110, holding that mandamus would not issue to compel a trial judge to suspend sentence in a criminal case, where at the time the judge signs the bill of exceptions he has no jurisdiction over the sentence sought to be suspended.

19. Meacham v. Austin, 5 Day (Conn.) Rep. 234, holding that mandamus will lie on behalf of defendant, in a qui tam prosecution for theft, to compel the court to record an irregular verdict.

20. Com. v. Berry, 92 S. W. 936, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 234, holding that mandamus will lie to set aside an erroneous order directing a stenographer to take evidence before the grand jury.

proceed,²¹ to allow an appeal,²² to compel dismissal of a certiorari granted after the time allowed by law,²³ or to compel the court to restore to prisoners property taken from them by officers.²⁴

b. Bail. The discretion of the trial court in granting or refusing an application for bail will not be controlled,²⁵ but an officer or judge may be compelled to hear and determine an application.²⁶ A reduction of bail will not be compelled where application therefor has not previously been made to the trial court.²⁷

4. PARTICULAR PROCEEDINGS — a. Admiralty. In admiralty, as in other proceedings, mandamus cannot be employed as a writ of error,²⁸ or to control the discretion of a lower court,²⁹ or where the relator has a remedy by appeal.³⁰ The supreme court cannot compel a circuit court to take jurisdiction in a matter of such a character that a final judgment therein cannot be directly reviewed in the supreme court of the United States.³¹

21. California.—People v. Barnes, 66 Cal. 594, 6 Pac. 698.

Idaho.—Hays v. Stewart, 7 Ida. 193, 61 Pac. 591.

Louisiana.—State v. Brunot, 104 La. 237, 28 So. 996, preliminary examination.

Michigan.—Crane v. Saginaw Cir. Judge, 111 Mich. 496, 64 N. W. 721 (where an information was quashed on the ground that the statute upon which it was based was repealed); Grand Rapids v. Braudy, 105 Mich. 670, 64 N. W. 29, 55 Am. St. Rep. 472, 32 L. R. A. 116 (where court refused to proceed to trial and quashed the proceedings because it held an ordinance invalid); Luton v. Newaygo County Cir. Judge, 69 Mich. 610, 37 N. W. 701 (where an indictment was quashed upon the merits); People v. Swift, 59 Mich. 529, 26 N. W. 694 (where an indictment was quashed on the ground that the offense should have been prosecuted in another court).

Washington.—State v. Yahey, (1906) 85 Pac. 990, holding, however, that a judge could not be compelled to leave his own county and go to another for the sole purpose of hearing an application for a warrant.

Entry of judgment.—Mandamus to record a verdict and to proceed to final judgment will not issue when the proceedings are irregular (Meacham v. Austin, 5 Day (Conn.) 233), or where the verdict is an absolute nullity (Moore v. State, 72 Ind. 358).

Rehearing of an appeal cannot be compelled.—Wilson v. San Francisco Super. Ct., (Cal. 1901) 65 Pac. 1027; Reg. v. Grainger, 46 U. C. Q. B. 382.

Where the facts charged do not constitute an offense, mandamus will not lie to compel the trial of an information. Ware v. Branch Cir. Judge, 75 Mich. 488, 42 N. W. 997.

Waiver.—Where a petitioner has acquiesced in the action of a judge in quashing an information, he cannot compel the order to be vacated by mandamus. Louisell v. Benzie Cir. Judge, 139 Mich. 40; 102 N. W. 371.

25. Ex p. Campbell, 20 Ala. 89; U. S. v. Judges U. S. Ct. of App., 85 Fed. 177, 29 C. C. A. 78, holding that a circuit court of appeals has no jurisdiction to require by mandamus a territorial supreme court to admit to bail one convicted of crime, pending an appeal to such supreme court, after the question of his right to bail has been determined adversely to him by such supreme court on habeas corpus.

Mandamus to sheriff will not issue to compel him to bring accused before a certain circuit court commissioner for admission to bail where he has good reason to believe such commissioner disqualified and no issue is made to try the questions and there are other authorities having cognizance of the application. Elder v. Garner, 97 Mich. 617, 55 N. W. 460.

Supersedeas and mandamus.—Although an order from a justice of the supreme court to the court below allows a "writ of error to operate as a supersedeas" but directs the admission to bail, it is not a mere supersedeas but a command to admit to bail, and the supreme court may compel compliance with such order by mandamus, although the judge below is of opinion that said order is unauthorized by law and that the bond would be void. Hudson v. Parker, 156 U. S. 277, 15 S. Ct. 450, 39 L. ed. 424.

26. Ex p. Rhear, 77 Ala. 92; Ex p. Good, 19 Ark. 410.

Jurisdiction of supreme court to issue mandamus in general see COURTS, 11 Cyc. 913.

b. Arbitration and Award. Where the statute requires a controversy or question to be submitted to arbitration by a public officer or body, mandamus lies to compel such submission.³² And the arbitrators will be compelled to proceed in the exercise of their power, to sign their award, assess costs, and file or lodge it as provided by the statute.³³

c. Assignments For Benefit of Creditors. The administration by courts of assignments for creditors is in execution of the trusts declared in the instrument of assignment, mainly involving judicial discretion, not to be interfered with unless the discretion be abused.³⁴

d. Attachment and Garnishment. Mandamus will not issue to control a judicial discretion in attachment proceedings;³⁵ but acts which are purely ministerial may be compelled,³⁶ or a clear statutory right may be enforced.³⁷

32. Cleveland v. Jersey City Bd. of Finance, etc., 38 N. J. L. 259; Norton v. Counties Conservative Permanent Ben. Bldg. Soc., [1895] 1 Q. B. 246, 59 J. P. 149, 64 L. J. Q. B. 214, 71 L. T. Rep. N. S. 790, 14 Reports 59, 43 Wkly. Rep. 178; In re McNairn, 3 U. C. Q. B. 153.

Judgment on award.—The writ will issue to compel a court to enter judgment upon a statutory, but not upon a common-law, award. Ex p. Bell, 80 Ala. 372; Dudley v. Farris, 79 Ala. 187.

Enforcement.—The writ will not lie to enforce an award against a city where the statute under which the arbitration was made is not clear. Cleveland v. Jersey City Bd. of Finance, etc., 39 N. J. L. 629. See also People v. Haws, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 440, 15 Abb. Pr. 115, 24 How. Pr. 148.

33. Chapman v. Ewing, 78 Ala. 403 (holding that mandamus lies to compel an arbitrator to restore or return an award withdrawn from the files, so that judgment can be entered thereon); Reg. v. Biram, 17 Q. B. 969, 16 Jur. 640, 79 E. C. L. 969 (holding that arbitrators will be compelled by mandamus to assess the costs of the proceedings).

Private matter.—Mandamus will not issue to compel arbitrators to act in a purely private matter. People v. Nash, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 542.

34. O'Neill v. Reynolds, 116 Cal. 264, 48 Pac. 57 (holding that mandamus will not issue to set aside an improper appointment of assignee); State v. Millard, 15 Ohio Cir. Ct. 460, 8 Ohio Cir. Dec. 672 (holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the probate court to open an order vacating an assignment for the benefit of creditors and discharging the assignee, for the purpose of allowing an additional account for expenses, the order having been made at the assignee's request, and not having been set aside or appealed from); State v. Johnson, 105 Wis. 164, 83 N. W. 320. See State v. Johnson, 103 Wis. 591, 79 N. W. 1081, 51 L. R. A. 33. But see Ex p. Green, 109 Ala. 660, 20 So. 56, holding that where a bill is filed by an assignee to have the court take jurisdiction of the settlement of his trust under the general assignment, and to cause property in the hands of a constable, under attachments issued subsequent to the assignment, to be restored to the assignee, mandamus will lie to compel the vacation of so much of the order issued in such proceeding as requires the constable, who was not a party thereto, to surrender the property in his possession to the assignee.

35. Ex p. Putnam, 20 Ala. 592 (holding that mandamus would not lie to vacate an amendment allowed to an original attachment); People v. Judges Calhoun Cir. Ct., 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 417 (holding that a sale of the attached property would not be ordered to be set aside).

A motion to quash or dismiss is usually regarded as directed to the discretion of the court and will not be controlled by mandamus (Ex p. McKissack, 107 Ala. 493, 18 So. 140; Ex p. Bottoms, 46 Ala. 312; Ex p. Putnam, 20 Ala. 592; S. K. Martin Lumber Co. v. Menominee Cir. Judge, 116 Mich. 354, 74 N. W. 649; Nederlander v. Wayne Cir. Judge, 55 Mich. 411, 21 N. W. 912; Carr v. Coopwood, 24 Miss. 256. See also Wright County v. Frazer, 109 Mich. 139, 66 N. W. 954; Lansing Lumber Co. v. Ingham Cir. Judge, 108 Mich. 305, 66 N. W. 41; Flint, etc., R. Co. v. Donovan, 108 Mich. 80, 65 N. W. 583. But compare Gee v. Alabama L. Ins., etc., Co., 13 Ala. 579. And see contra, Boraim v. Da Costa, 4 Ala. 393), although it has been held that an interlocutory order quashing an attachment may be vacated (People v. Judge Seventh Cir. Ct., 41 Mich. 326, 2 N. W. 26).

36. See, generally, supra, IV, A, 3.

Compliance with conditions precedent.—Mandamus will not issue to compel a clerk to issue an attachment until statutory conditions, such as a prior order of a justice of the peace, and prepayment of fees, have been complied with. Kozminsky v. Williams, 126 Cal. 26, 58 Pac. 310.

37. Ex p. Nicrosi, 103 Ala. 104, 15 So. 507.

Restoration of property.—Where property has been taken by a claimant under a redelivery bond, in an action of replevin, the sheriff will, in case he seizes the property under a second attachment against the same defendant before the right to possession is determined, be compelled to return possession to the claimant. Coos Bay R., etc., Co. v. Wieder, 26 Oreg. 453, 38 Pac. 338. But mandamus cannot be made to answer the office of the plea to a pending suit, nor of an action at law to recover specific property,

Mandamus will not lie, however, in case there is another adequate remedy.³⁸ It has been held that the duty of a levying officer to set off exemptions is ministerial and that it may be enforced by mandamus,³⁹ although, on the other hand, it has been held that the allowance of exemptions is an act requiring the exercise of judicial discretion;⁴⁰ and in any event mandamus will not issue where it would be nugatory.⁴¹ Where upon an invalid claim of exemption the proceeds of attached goods have been awarded to the attachment defendant, it has been held that the order may be vacated by mandamus.⁴² Under the same rules as apply to attachment discretionary orders in garnishment will not be reviewed,⁴³ nor will the writ issue when there is another remedy.⁴⁴

e. Contempt of Court. As a general rule the question of whether a contempt of court shall be punished, and how it shall be punished, is one resting within the discretion of the court, which will not be controlled by mandamus,⁴⁵ although in some cases it has been intimated that in case of a clear right, and in the absence of any other remedy, mandamus will lie.⁴⁶ Mandamus will, however, lie to compel the court to take jurisdiction and proceed in contempt proceedings,⁴⁷ unless no interest will be subserved by its so doing.⁴⁸ In case there is another adequate nor for the abuse of process, and the writ will not lie to compel the return of goods seized under attachment, on the ground that the statute authorizing the attachment is unconstitutional, or if for other reasons the goods are lawfully withheld. Murphy v. State, 59 Ala. 639.

38. Ex p. McKissack, 107 Ala. 493, 18 So. 140; Murphy v. State, 59 Ala. 639; Ex p. Bottoms, 46 Ala. 312; People v. Judges Branch Cir. Ct., 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 319.

41. State v. Bowden, 18 Fla. 17, holding that mandamus would not lie to compel sheriff to set off attached property as exempt after he had sold it.

42. Ex p. Barnes, 84 Ala. 540, 4 So. 769.

43. State v. Rightor, 49 La. Ann. 696, 22 So. 245 (holding that an order requiring the garnishee to appear and answer in open court would not be compelled); Burt v. Wayne Cir. Judge, 82 Mich. 251, 26 N. W. 380 (holding that where a defendant was garnished in a suit against plaintiff, an order requiring plaintiff to give a bond for the protection of defendant as garnishee will not be set aside by mandamus). And see Jackson v. Harrison County Justices, 1 Va. Cas. 314, holding that the superior court will not grant a mandamus to compel a county court to issue a pluries attachment against the body of a garnishee, who has been taken on the alias, and discharged by a judge of the general court under a habeas corpus.

remedy by appeal, certiorari, or otherwise, mandamus will not issue with reference to contempt proceedings.⁴⁹

f. Distress For Rates. In England mandamus lies to compel the issue of distress warrants to collect poor rates.⁵⁰

g. Divorce. The general rules governing mandamus apply in actions for divorce,⁵¹ including orders with reference to alimony.⁵²

h. Ejectment. Mandamus, it has been held, will lie to correct an erroneous ruling that an action of ejectment is not triable as a summary action.⁵³

i. Eminent Domain. Where in condemnation proceedings the court has a discretion as to whether it will proceed or not, mandamus will not be awarded to compel it to act.⁵⁴ The court will not upon mandamus review the merits of an interlocutory decree before a final decree has been entered.⁵⁵ As in other cases mandamus will not issue where there is an adequate remedy by appeal,⁵⁶ or where it will avail nothing.⁵⁷ In case the duty is ministerial, mandamus will lie to compel the appointment of commissioners or appraisers,⁵⁸ but the rule is otherwise where the act is judicial.⁵⁹ And likewise mandamus will issue to compel a report from the appraisers,⁶⁰ although an appraiser will not be compelled to sign a particular report,⁶¹ to compel the trial court to hear evidence on exceptions to the report,⁶² or to compel the allowance of an appeal.⁶³ But pending an appeal a deposit or payment of the sum awarded will not be compelled,⁶⁴ nor will a writ of assistance issue.⁶⁵ A conditional payment of the award into court is no defense to mandamus to compel its payment.⁶⁶

j. Forcible Entry and Unlawful Detainer. The execution of a judgment of restitution may be compelled by mandamus.⁶⁷ Mandamus will not issue, however, to compel a judgment for treble damages where there is an adequate remedy by appeal,⁶⁸ nor to compel a justice to entertain an application for summary proceedings when his duties do not permit it;⁶⁹ nor will a writ issue to aid an injustice.⁷⁰

k. Habeas Corpus. The issuance of a writ of habeas corpus being discretionary will not be controlled by mandamus,⁷¹ nor for the same reason will mandamus lie to vacate an order of discharge on habeas corpus;⁷² but after the issuance of a writ of habeas corpus the court will be compelled to proceed.⁷³ The writ

Van Buren Cir. Judge*, 118 Mich. 189, 76 N. W. 315 (holding that mandamus will lie to compel a judge to grant an injunction where he, in refusing it, did not exercise his discretion, but said that, if the opinions of the supreme court, which he considered erroneous, were to be followed, the injunction should be granted); Detroit v. Cir. Judge Wayne County, 79 Mich. 384, 44 N. W. 622 (holding that when the granting of an injunction is an abuse of judicial discretion that cannot be justified on legal principles, and the case is urgent, a mandamus will be awarded to dissolve the injunction, although the order which granted it is reviewable on appeal); State v. Graves, 66 Nebr. 17, 92 N. W. 144 (holding that a judge of the district court may by mandamus be compelled to vacate an injunction granted by him without jurisdiction or authority).

Where the case may be heard upon merits.—An abuse of discretion in granting and maintaining a preliminary injunction will not be reviewed on mandamus where, without injury to the rights of defendant, the case can be heard upon its merits. *Central Bitulithic Paving Co. v. 77. See State v. Judge Div. B Civ. Dist. Ct., 52 La. Ann. 1275, 27 So. 697, 51 L. R. A. 71 (holding that mandamus will lie to compel the court to dissolve an injunction upon bond, where it is apparent that no injury will result to plaintiff in injunction and that irreparable injury may result to defendant, and also that a remedy by appeal will be unavailing and the relator is otherwise without remedy); State v. Monroe, 50 La. Ann. 266, 23 So. 839 (holding that where, by an order of court, an injunction has been permitted to be bonded by defendant, and plaintiff has been refused a suspensive appeal from such order, plaintiff may test the correctness of the court's ruling on the character and results of the act enjoined by application to the supreme court for a mandamus to compel the judge to grant the appeal asked for); State v. Judge Civ. Dist. Ct., 37 La. Ann. 400 (holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the granting of an injunction where it might conflict with an injunction already granted by another court in the same matter and between the same parties); Mactavish v. Kent Cir. Judge, 122 Mich. 242, 80 N. W. 1086 (holding that instances are rare where appellate courts will compel lower courts to issue injunctions, and they will seldom compel a dissolution unless injunction has been issued or dissolution refused in contravention of law); Barnum Wire, etc., Works v. Speed, 59 Mich. 272, 26 N. W. 802, 805 (holding that a court cannot interfere by injunction to restrain proceedings commenced and pending in another court of coordinate jurisdiction; and, where a court does assume so to act, a writ of mandamus will be granted by the supreme court to compel such court to vacate and set aside its orders and decrees in the matter); Van Norman v. Jackson Cir. Judge, 45 Mich. 204, 7 N. W. 796 (holding that mandamus would lie to dissolve an injunction where the bill upon which it was founded was devoid of substance and insufficient).

Mandamus will not issue to interfere with an injunction when it would be useless or unnecessary,⁷⁸ nor in any event while there is another adequate remedy,⁷⁹ nor

Where the question in dispute is one of law merely, it has been held that mandamus will lie. Central Bitulithic Paving Co. v. Manistee Cir. Judge, 132 Mich. 126, 92 N. W. 938; Bogert v. Jackson Cir. Judge, 118 Mich. 457, 76 N. W. 983; Ionis, etc., Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Ionia Cir. Judge, 100 Mich. 606, 59 N. W. 250, 32 L. R. A. 481 (refusal to dissolve a preliminary injunction).

In case of a clear right it has been held that mandamus may issue to compel the trial judge to grant an injunction. State v. King, 49 La. Ann. 881, 21 So. 585 (holding that mandamus would be granted to compel an injunction against the enforcement of foreclosure proceedings based upon an unconstitutional statute); State v. Judge Eleventh Dist. Ct., 40 La. Ann. 206, 3 So. 561; State v. Young, 38 La. Ann. 923 (holding that mandamus will lie to compel the granting of an injunction against the collection of a tax until the constitutionality of the statute upon which the tax is based may be determined); State v. Lazarus, 36 La. Ann. 578.

Where no right of appeal is given from orders granting or dissolving injunctions, mandamus lies to control the action of the court. Ex p. Feckheimer, 103 Ala. 154, 15 So. 647 (holding that mandamus lies to vacate an order improperly dissolving an injunction); Ex p. Sayre, 95 Ala. 288, 11 So. 378.

78. People v. Butler, 24 Colo. 401, 51 Pac. 510 (holding that a writ will not lie to compel the trial court to proceed with the hearing on a motion for a temporary injunction, where certain facts, already manifest to him, which the complainant refuses to rebut by evidence, are sufficient to have warranted a denial of the motion if a full hearing was had); State v. St. Paul, 104 La. 280, 29 So. 112 (holding that mandamus will not lie to compel a court of the first instance to grant a special order of injunction without bond after the sale sought to be enjoined has been made and the deed recorded, as mandamus cannot issue to compel an officer to do an act after the matter has become an accomplished fact); State v. Land, 52 La. Ann. 309, 27 So. 434; Mills v. Wayne Cir. Judge, 77 Mich. 210, 47 N. W. 128 (holding that mandamus will not issue to a judge to compel the dissolution of a preliminary injunction which, whether right or wrong, has spent its principal force; but defendant in the injunction proceeding will be left to his appeal from the action of the judge on the final hearing, when the entire merits will come before the supreme court).

79. State v. Allen, 51 La. Ann. 1889, 26 So. 610 (holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the granting of an injunction to restrain the release of a seizure under sequestration proceedings, on the ground that the appeal-bond for costs was sufficient as a suspensive appeal, since the remedy was a direct proceeding to have the order of appeal modified); Mactavish v. Kent Cir. Judge, 122 Mich. 242, 80 N. W. 1086 (holding that mandamus to compel the dissolution of an injunction upon the ground that the court had no jurisdiction of the bill because it failed to allege that complainant had not an adequate remedy at law would not lie, since the objection should have been taken by demurrer to the bill); Detroit etc., R. Co. v. Newton, 61 Mich. 33, 27 N. W. 876 (holding that mandamus would not issue to compel dissolution of an injunction to prevent a railroad company from interfering with a crossing, since the company had its legal remedy in case the complainants had no right to the injunction and judicial proceedings will be interfered with only when prompt action is necessary to prevent mischief); State v. Fillmore County, 32 Nebr. 870, 49 N. W. 769 (holding that where relator had obtained a decree enjoining a county and county board from discharging surface water upon his land, peremptory mandamus would not issue to enforce the duty imposed upon the county and county board where it did not appear that the duty could not be enforced by the district court in due course of law).

The remedy must be adequate.—Where there is danger that the administration of justice may suffer by delay, mandamus may issue to compel the district judge to grant an injunction in limine, although the party had other but slower means of relief. State v. Lazarus, 36 La. Ann. 578.

In case there is a remedy by appeal mandamus will not lie. Fremont v. Merced Min. Co., 9 Cal. 18 (modification of an original where application for relief has not first been made to the court to which the writ is sought,⁸⁰ or to compel the granting of an injunction where the application for the injunction does not show a prima facie right.⁸¹

p. Reference. The appointment of referees to take evidence or to hear and determine is discretionary and will not be controlled by mandamus,⁸⁶ nor will the action of the court in setting aside a reference,⁸⁷ or on the report be reviewed.⁸⁸ A referee may be compelled to proceed.⁸⁹ But a stipulation of the parties that the referee's report shall be signed by the judge does not render the duty to sign such report an official one which may be coerced by mandamus.⁹⁰

q. Replevin. The existence of a remedy by appeal will prevent mandamus to compel the vacation of an order quashing replevin.⁹¹ It has been held that mandamus will lie to compel a levying officer to receive a claim and bond for the trial of the right of property.⁹² After dismissal of a replevin suit it has been held that mandamus will lie to compel an assessment of damages.⁹³

V. MANDAMUS AGAINST STATE OR GOVERNMENT OR EXECUTIVE OR LEGISLATIVE OFFICERS.

A. In General. In the absence of statute mandamus does not issue to the state or government itself.⁹⁴ And the rule that the state or government cannot be sued without its consent prevents the issue of mandamus against an executive officer, the effect of which would be to enforce a contract against the state or government without its consent,⁹⁵ or to compel him to perform acts unauthorized or forbidden by law.⁹⁶ As a general rule, however, the writ may be issued against an executive officer of the state or government to compel him to perform

This rule has been applied to ministerial duties of a board of equalization in assessing franchises (State Bd. of Equalization v. People, 191 Ill. 528, 61 N. E. 339, 58 L. R. A. 513, holding that the duty to assess franchises is mandatory under statute and will be ordered by the writ, and if the board has adjourned they may be ordered to reconvene and assess the property omitted); a funding board (State v. Funding Bd., 34 La. Ann. 197); the warden of a state prison in drawing a warrant for fuel purchased for the prison by his predecessor (Patton v. State, 117 Ind. 585, 19 N. E. 303), or in permitting the sheriff to enter the penitentiary and execute a writ of replevin (Hopkins v. State, 64 Nebr. 10, 89 N. W. 401); collector of a port in granting a clearance (Gilchrist v. Charleston, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,420, Brunn. Col. Cas. 249, 5 Hughes 1); cabinet ministers (Hackfeld v. King, 11 Hawaii 5; Grieve v. Gulick, 5 Hawaii 73; Castle v. Kapena, 5 Hawaii 27); a superintendent of public works in issuing a building permit to one clearly entitled thereto (Matter of Akwai, 13 Hawaii 239); canal commissioners neglecting or refusing to pay an award ordered by the legislature (Johnson v. Kelly, Wright (Ohio) 353), or refusing to let a contract to the lowest bidder (People v. Contracting Bd., 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 254); the auditor-general of canals in drawing warrants (People v. Schoonmaker, 13 N. Y. 238), or officers of a state hospital for the insane in receiving patients from the district in which it is situated (People v. Manhattan State Hospital, 5 N. Y. App. Div. 249, 39 N. Y. Suppl. 158).

In Louisiana the rule is laid down that whenever by the constitution and laws of the state officers of the executive branch of the government are vested with discretionary functions in the performance of civil duties, or political powers and responsibilities are devolved upon them, they are not answerable to the process of mandamus, but their acts are only examinable politically. State v. Board of Liquidation, 42 La. Ann. 647, 7 So. 706, 8 So. 577. But it is held that mandamus will go to state officers for the performance of purely ministerial functions. State v. Funding Bd., 34 La. Ann. 197; State v. Clinton, 27 La. Ann. 429.

In Minnesota it is held that where a duty is imposed upon an executive officer of the state as such officer, and not upon him as a private person, the judicial department will not interfere to compel the performance of such duty. Secombe v. Kittelson, 29 Minn. 555, 12 N. W. 519; State v. Dike, 20 Minn. 363; Rice v. Austin, 19 Minn. 103, 18 Am. Rep. 330.

In Pennsylvania it has been held that the courts have no jurisdiction to issue mandamus to state officers. Com. v. Wickersham, 90 Pa. St. 311; Com. v. Wickersham, 66 Pa. St. 134. Compare Com. v. Jones, 192 Pa. St. 472, 43 Atl. 1089; Com. v. Stenger, 1 Dauph. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 160.

In Texas it was at one time held that mandamus did not lie to any member of the executive department, save in the exceptional case of the land commissioner. Bledsoe v. International R. Co., 40 Tex. 537; Houston Tap, etc., Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317. But under statute mandamus may issue against any officer of the state government except the governor. Turner v. B. Executive Officers of State — 1. GOVERNOR — a. In General. While it is generally agreed that the courts have no right or power to interfere by mandamus with the governor upon questions involving his judgment and discretion,² yet they differ widely as to the power to interfere with his ministerial action.³ In some jurisdictions it is held that mandamus will lie to compel the governor to perform a purely ministerial duty, such as might have been imposed upon any other officer.⁴ On the other hand in many jurisdictions it is held that mandamus

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 129.

This rule has been applied with respect to the issuance of a commission to one elected or appointed to public office (Traynor v. Beckham, 116 Ky. 13, 74 S. W. 1105, 76 S. W. 844, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 283, 981, police judge; Groome v. Gwinn, 43 Md. 572, attorney-general; Magruder v. Swann, 25 Md. 173, circuit judge certified to have received a majority of votes); but not to the issuance of a commission after one has been issued to another for the same office (Brown v. Bragunier, 79 Md. 234, 29 Atl. 7, holding that there was an adequate remedy at law by contest). So the writ has been awarded to compel the signing of a patent to public lands (Middleton v. Low, 30 Cal. 596; Greenwood Cemetery Land Co. v. Routt, 17 Colo. 156, 28 Pac. 1125, 31 Am. St. Rep. 284, 15 L. R. A. 369; State v. Blasdel, 4 Nev. 241); the appointment of commissioners to hold an election to organize a municipality (Elliott v. Pardee, (Cal. 1906) 86 Pac. 1087); the filling of a vacancy in the office of lieutenant-governor (State v. Nash, 66 Ohio St. 612, 64 N. E. 558); the issuance of a proclamation, on the application for the charter of a banking company (State v. Chase, 5 Ohio St. 528); or the issuance of a warrant for a public loan in aid of a railroad (Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Moore 36 Ala. 371).

The right must be clear and the duty imperative. State v. Humphrey, 47 Kan. 561, 28 Pac. 722 (writ held not to lie to compel governor to execute contract for compensation of state agent in absence of specific appropriation); In re Cunningham, 14

Kan. 416 (holding that where no "receipt of the state treasurer for full payment" for land sold under the act of 1866 has been presented to the governor, nor even issued, a writ of mandamus will not be issued against the governor to compel him to issue a patent to land sold under the act); Wilson v. Bradley, 105 Ky. 52, 48 S. W. 166, 1088, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1118 (holding that the fact that the claim for mileage of the agent of the state for the extradition of a fugitive embraces an illegal charge is sufficient reason for refusing a writ of mandamus to compel the governor to approve the claim, even if mandamus would otherwise lie).

5. Arizona.—Territorial Insane Asylum v. Wolfey, (1889) 22 Pac. 383, holding that mandamus will not lie to the governor of a territory to compel him to sign a warrant on the treasurer for funds for a territorial asylum at the instance of the directors of the asylum.

Arkansas.—Hawkins v. Governor, 1 Ark. 570, 33 Am. Dec. 346.

Florida.—State v. Drew, 17 Fla. 67, holding that the writ will not issue to compel the governor to sign a certificate of election, although a mere ministerial duty.

Georgia.—See State v. Towns, 8 Ga. 360 [distinguishing Bonner v. State, 7 Ga. 473], holding that where the relator applying for a mandamus nisi against the governor to issue to him a commission as clerk of the county court of ordinary had failed to establish his title to the office by the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, the court had no jurisdiction to award the mandamus.

Illinois.—People v. Cullom, 100 Ill. 472 (holding that the supreme court cannot compel the governor to call an election); People v. Yates, 40 Ill. 126; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9; People v. Bissell, 19 Ill. 229, 68 Am. Dec. 591.

Indiana.—Hovey v. State, 127 Ind. 588, 27 N. E. 175, 22 Am. St. Rep. 663, 11 L. R. A. 763 [distinguishing Gray v. State, 72 Ind. 567; Baker v. Kirk, 33 Ind. 517; Governor v. Nelson, 6 Ind. 496], holding that the governor of a state will not be compelled by mandamus to issue a commission to a duly elected auditor of a county, where it appears that prior to the election an affidavit was filed with the governor, stating that theretofore the person so elected had been treasurer of said county, and had failed to account for money that came into his hands.

Maine.—In re Dennett, 32 Me. 508, 54 Am. Dec. 602.

Michigan.—People v. State, 29 Mich. 320, 18 Am. Rep. 89, holding that the courts have if performance had been by law intrusted to them.⁶ And this rule is held to extend to action by the governor as an ex-officio member of a board of public officers.⁷ Moreover, it has been held that the courts will not assume jurisdiction in such case, although the governor voluntarily submits himself thereto.⁸

b. Compelling Exercise of Powers of Governor by Substitute. On the principle that when an executive officer refuses to act in a case at all mandamus will lie to compel him to do so, it is held that the writ will lie to determine whether there is a vacancy in the office of governor during which it is the duty of the president of the senate to exercise the powers of governor.⁹

2. SECRETARY OF STATE. The secretary of state is very generally held not to be entitled to the immunity conceded by some of the cases to the governor,¹⁰ and no jurisdiction to compel the governor to comply with the acts of congress requiring him to certify that a certain ship canal had been constructed according to the acts of congress, when he is satisfied that such is the fact.

Minnesota.—State v. Dike, 20 Minn. 363; Rice v. Austin, 19 Minn. 103, 18 Am. United States.—Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66, 16 L. ed. 717, holding that mandamus does not lie from a federal court to the governor of a state to compel him to deliver a fugitive from justice demanded by the governor of another state, although the act of congress provides that "it shall be the duty" of the executive to do so.

W. 319, holding that where a statute creates a board of inspectors of election consisting of the governor, secretary of state, and attorney-general, and makes no provision that a majority of the board may act, no action can be taken without the participation of the entire board; and the inability of the courts to coerce the governor by mandamus to act in connection with the boards precludes the issuance of a mandamus to compel the other members of the board to act. But see Gray v. State, 72 Ind. 567.

In Louisiana the rule is laid down that whenever by the constitution and laws of the state, officers of the executive branch of the government are vested with discretionary functions in the performance of civil duties, or political powers and responsibilities are devolved upon them, they are not answerable to judicial process but their acts are only examinable politically, and that when such duties and powers devolve upon the executive branch or department of the state government as a whole the members of the board thus constituted are likewise exempt from their judicial control, and this notwithstanding that some of the officers respectively are subject to judicial control and can be coerced by mandamus to act and to perform their ordinary official duties. State v. Board of Liquidation, 42 La. Ann. 647, 7 So. 706, 8 So. 577, where the governor, lieutenant-governor, auditor, treasurer, secretary of the state, and the speaker of the house of representatives composed the board of liquidation.

Washington.—State v. Nichols, 38 Wash. 309, 80 Pac. 462; State v. Jenkins, 21 Wash. 364, 53 Pac. 217 (holding that a writ of mandate will not issue to compel the secretary of state to fill out and present to the governor, for his signature, a commission to a person entitled to be commissioned a notary public, as there is no provision, either in the constitution or statute, making this the duty of the secretary); State v. Young, 18 Wash. 21, 50 Pac. 786.

West Virginia.—Powell v. Dawson, 45 W. Va. 780, 32 S. E. 214, issuance of charter to corporation in violation of constitution.

Wisconsin.—State v. Harvey, 11 Wis. 33, holding that the secretary of state has no authority to issue patents for school lands, and therefore mandamus does not lie to compel him to do it.

Certifying bill.—The secretary of state will not be compelled by mandamus to certify a bill, or an enrolled act, to be a law, which is not among the archives of his office and legally placed there as a law. People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9.

Furnishing copy of void constitutional provision.—Mandamus will not lie to compel the secretary of state to furnish a certified copy of an amendment to the state constitution, as such, where the supreme court has adjudged that such amendment was not legally adopted, although Code (1873), § 3706, provides that every public officer having the custody of a public record shall give any person, on demand, a certified copy thereof, on payment of the fees. Harvey v. McFarland, 89 Iowa 703, 57 N. W. 410.

Alteration of legislative records.—The writ will not issue to expunge matters from legislative records for the reason that this would be an interference with legislative powers. State v. Wilson, 123 Ala. 259, 26 So. 482, 45 L. R. A. 772. Mandamus will not lie to compel the production and correction in accordance with allegations of the petition, of documents filed with the secretary of a territory, purporting to be a record of the proceedings of a session of the territorial legislature, in a case not involving private rights. Clough v. Curtis, 134 U. S. 361, 10 S. Ct. 573, 33 L. ed. 945 [affirming 2 Ida. (Hasb.) 523, 22 Pac. 81].

32. People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 9; Harvey v. McFarland, 89 Iowa 703, 57 N. W. 410.

License of corporation under name used by another.—The writ will not issue to compel the secretary to license a corporation under a name the use of which by the corporation may be enjoined by an existing concern. People v. Rose, 219 Ill. 46, 76 N. E. 42.

Change of corporate name.—Where the secretary of state has refused to receive and file a certificate of a vote of the stockholders of a corporation, changing its name, for the reason that the proposed name has been previously assumed by another corporation, mandamus will not lie to compel him to file such certificate. Illinois Watch Case Co. v. Pearson, 140 Ill. 423, 31 N. E. 400, 16 L. R. A. 429.

Recount of election.—The secretary of state cannot be compelled to recount or recanvass an election, after the governor's certificate has been issued. Myers v. Chalmers, 60 Miss. 772; State v. Rodman, 43 Mo. 256, holding that mandamus will not issue to compel the secretary of state to count up votes, where the office in question is already filled by a person holding by color of right by virtue of a commission issued to him under the election.

may resort to another adequate legal remedy for the enforcement or protection of his right.³³

3. STATE TREASURER. The state treasurer may be compelled to perform a ministerial duty,³⁴ as for instance to pay state warrants,³⁵ or to indorse a warrant "not paid for want of funds," in accordance with the fact;³⁶ to transfer money from one fund to another;³⁷ to redeem state bank-bills when so required by law;³⁸ to redeliver to a municipality railroad aid bonds deposited with him under a statute held unconstitutional;³⁹ or to surrender in pursuance of statute a fund deposited with him by a life insurance company.⁴⁰ But this rule extends to ministerial duties only and the writ cannot be invoked to enable a creditor of the state to exercise a supervisory control over the state treasurer in matters in which he is vested with discretion.⁴¹ Moreover the writ will not lie in a case where the treasurer is under no unquestioned and legally defined duty,⁴² or where it would

Filing articles of incorporation under abrogated statute.—Mandamus will not issue to compel the secretary of state to file corporate articles where the right has been taken away by statute. Preferred Tontine Mercantile Co. v. Secretary of State, 133 Mich. 395, 95 N. W. 417.

L. 115, 36 Atl. 773 (holding that mandamus will lie to compel the state treasurer to pay over to a railroad company, upon completion of its road, a deposit made by it under the act, March 4, 1879, the duty of making such payment being ministerial); State v. Bates, 38 S. C. 326, 17 S. E. 28.

Furnishing evidence.—Mandamus lies to compel the state treasurer to deliver out, upon good security, a mortgage of land to the state, to be used as evidence on a trial between two citizens, concerning the same land, which one claims under a sale made by virtue of such mortgage in behalf of the state. De Oyley's Case, 1 Brev. (S. C.) 238.

35. Mulnix v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co., 23 Colo. 81, 46 Pac. 127 (holding that it is proper to grant a peremptory writ to the treasurer to pay a state warrant regular and valid on its face; there being nothing before the court, by way of proof or admissions in the pleadings, to overcome the presumption that the warrant was lawfully issued for a valid indebtedness of the state); Raleigh, etc., Co. v. Jenkins, 68 N. C. 499; Bayne v. Jenkins, 66 N. C. 356; Com. v. Butler, 99 Pa. St. 535 (warrants for salaries of members of house of representatives); State v. Hastings, 15 Wis. 75; State v. 42. California.—Camron v. Weil, 57 Cal. 547 (holding that money received by the state treasurer, although collected and specially appropriated under an invalid act, should not be paid into the general fund, and therefore that mandamus should not issue to compel the state treasurer to pay into the general fund money collected under the Drainage Act); Smith v. Kenfield, 57 Cal. 138 (holding that the writ will not issue to compel allowance to plaintiff of a greater sum as salary than the amount fixed by the constitution).

Florida.—State v. Knott, 48 Fla. 188, 37 So. 307, where a writ to compel the treasurer to pay a requisition not bearing the governor's signature was denied.

Georgia.—Fletcher v. Renfroe, 56 Ga. 674, holding that mandamus does not lie to compel the treasurer to pay a warrant perfectly valid and outstanding in the face of a joint resolution of the houses of the legislature approved by the governor directing him not to do so.

Kansas.—Topeka First Nat. Bank v. Heflebower, 58 Kan. 792, 51 Pac. 225, holding that the state treasurer will not be compelled by mandamus to register and pay orders drawn on the permanent school fund by the state school fund commissioners to pay for bonds purchased by them when it appears that the price agreed to be paid is more than the actual market price, even though the excess above the market price be so small that the purchase cannot be declared an improvident one, the statute providing that the commissioners should not pay more than the actual market price.

in effect amount to a suit against the state without its consent.⁴³ Thus it is held that mandamus does not lie to compel a state treasurer to pay a debt due by a state, unless it appears that a legal appropriation for the purpose has been made and that there are moneys in the treasury applicable to the claim.⁴⁴

4. AUDITOR. The auditor may be compelled to perform a ministerial duty imposed upon him by law.⁴⁵ Thus it has been held that the writ may be awarded to coerce the auditor to issue warrants for salaries of officers,⁴⁶ for an excess of Louisiana.—State v. State Treasurer, 32 La. Ann. 177 (holding that where there is a sum to the credit of the general fund which is inadequate to pay the warrants presented to, or on file with, the state treasurer for payment, the treasurer cannot by mandamus be ordered to pay the whole fund to one creditor, to the exclusion of the others); State v. Dubuclet, 28 La. Ann. 85; State v. Dubuclet, 26 La. Ann. 127; State v. Dubuclet, 24 La. Ann. 16 (holding that mandamus cannot be invoked by a creditor of the state to compel the state treasurer to make a certain distribution of funds, not yet in his hands, as they may be received by him).

Michigan.—Bresler v. Butler, 60 Mich. 40, 26 N. W. 825, holding that where a person makes application for a mandamus to compel the state treasurer to pay a balance claimed to be due on the bills of the government stock bank without an adjudication determining that the amount claimed is owing from the state, such application will be refused.

Missouri.—State v. Bishop, 42 Mo. 504, holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the state treasurer to pay over the principal and interest of state bonds, without a special act of legislature authorizing and commanding him to pay.

North Carolina.—Garner v. Worth, 122 N. C. 250, 29 S. E. 364, holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the state treasurer to pay a warrant issued by the auditor, where the treasurer claims that the amount of indebtedness is incorrect, and that the claim was not duly audited by such auditor, the question raised by such claims being for the legislature and not for the courts to determine.

In Michigan the supreme court has no jurisdiction by mandamus to coerce or direct the action of the board of state auditors in respect to their constitutional duties as they are made an independent tribunal by the constitution of the state. People v. State Auditors, 32 Mich. 191. One who is engaged in publishing law books and is ready to give security to bid for the publication of the state reports is a proper relator in mandamus proceedings to compel the board of state auditors to advertise for proposals under the statutes. The board as to duties imposed on it by the legislature outside of its constitutional duties is subject to mandamus. People v. State Auditors, 42 Mich. 422, 4 N. W. 274. Appropriation for salary.—Mandamus lies to compel an auditor to draw a warrant for an officer's pay, where there is an appropriation for it. Black v. State Auditor, 26 Ark. 237; Byrd v. Conway, 5 Ark. 436; Ex p. Tully, 4 Ark. 220, 38 Am. Dec. 33. But it is held that the writ will not lie where no appropriation has been made (State v. Johnson, 28 La. Ann. 932); or where the appropriation for the purpose has been ex-taxes paid by mistake,⁴⁷ or for just claims generally against the state for the payment of which provision is made by law,⁴⁸ to execute and deliver tax deeds,⁴⁹ to allow inspection of records,⁵⁰ to issue notes to a bank,⁵¹ or to transfer bonds as required by statute.⁵² Where there is a specific appropriation by the legislature of a sum certain to be paid in satisfaction of a claim,⁵³ where the claim has been duly hausted (Hager v. Shuck, 87 S. W. 300, 27 Ky. L. Rep. 957). Compare Bryan v. Cattell, 15 Iowa 538. On the other hand in Reynolds v. Taylor, 43 Ala. 420, it was held that if the salary of a public officer is fixed, and the times of payment prescribed by law, no special annual appropriation is necessary to authorize the auditor to issue his warrant for its payment. On an application for mandamus to compel the issuance of a warrant for the salary of a member of the code commission, which had been refused for want of an appropriation, it was held that the designation in the act authorizing the appointment of the commission of a designated sum as compensation for the commissioners constituted an appropriation. State v. Kenney, 10 Mont. 485, 26 Pac. 197.

Where title to office is in dispute.—It has been held that the auditor of public accounts cannot be required by mandamus to issue a warrant to the relator for the salary of an office while another person holds the commission; that it is no part of the duty of the auditor to determine the right to the office, and it cannot be determined as a collateral matter in such a proceeding. Winston v. Moseley, 35 Mo. 146. On the other hand it has been held that mandamus is maintainable to compel a state auditor to issue a warrant on the treasurer for relator's salary as superintendent of a water division, after relator's alleged improper removal from such office and the appointment of his successor, although relator's title to the office was incidentally involved in such proceeding to which relator's successor was not a party. State v. Grant, 14 Wyo. 41, 81 Pac. 795, 82 Pac. 2, 1 L. R. A. N. S. 588. On an application by a member of the legislature for a writ of mandate to compel the state auditor to audit and settle his account for mileage and attendance, it has been held that an allegation merely that a controversy has arisen as to his election is immaterial. State v. Kenney, 9 Mont. 223, 23 Pac. 733.

Inquest claims of justice of the peace see Lachance v. Auditor-Gen., 77 Mich. 563, 43 N. W. 1005, mandamus against auditor-general.

47. German Security Bank v. Coulter, 112 Ky. 577, 66 S. W. 425, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1888 (holding that the state auditor may be required by mandamus to draw his warrant on the treasury in favor of a bank for an excess of taxes paid by it into the treasury by reason of a mistake as to the rate of taxation upon the amount assessed, but not for an excess of taxes paid by reason of an erroneous assessment, the auditor having no power to correct erroneous assessments); Bank of Commerce v. Stone, 108 Ky. 427, 56 S. W. 683, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 70; Louisville City Nat. Bank v. Coulter, 66 S. W. 427, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1883; Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Stone, 58 S. W. 983, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 831.

Where taxes on township school lands, the title of which is held under a certificate of purchase from the county auditor, have been wrongfully assessed and paid, and the purchaser has presented to the auditor a properly authenticated certificate of the board of county commissioners of the county wherein such land is situated that he has been illegally assessed, and has illegally paid taxes on the land, for state, school, and sinking fund purposes, to a certain amount, which has been duly paid to the treasurer of the state and received into the state treasury, and has requested the auditor to audit such claim, and issue a warrant to the treasurer of state for the payment thereof, and the auditor has refused to comply with such request, he may be required to do so, by a writ of mandate. Henderson v. State, 53 Ind. 60.

Y. 189 (reimbursement of person for advancing money for public improvement).

Warrant for sum appropriated for lunatic asylum.—State v. State Auditor, 46 Mo. 326.

In Nebraska it has been held that the constitutional provision requiring claims upon the state treasury to be examined and adjusted by the auditor applied to all claims, whether there had been a specific appropriation by the purpose of paying the claims or not, for that mandamus will not lie to compel the auditing of a claim in favor of the relator where an appropriation has been made therefor. State v. Babcock, 22 Nebr. 38, 33 N. W. 711. But in a later case it was held allowed by the legislature,⁵⁴ or where, although not fixed by statute, the amount of the claim has been determined by a duly authorized official or is not in dispute,⁵⁵ or where the claim has been litigated and its validity determined by a court of competent jurisdiction,⁵⁶ the writ will lie. Where a state auditor in the discharge of his duties has a discretion to exercise,⁵⁷ as for instance in the allowance or rejection of a claim against the state, his decision cannot be controlled by mandamus,⁵⁸ especially after the auditor has already acted upon the matter.⁵⁹ Nor will his discretion as to the amount of the claim to be allowed be interfered with by mandamus.⁶⁰ But if he refuses to act upon a claim properly presented to him, the court will compel him to do so.⁶¹ Where there is another adequate remedy,⁶² as for instance, where the right of appeal is given to a claimant whose claim has been disallowed in whole or in part by the auditor,⁶³ the writ will not that this rule should be restricted to such claims and demands as the state is under a legal obligation to pay, and not extended to appropriations of specific sums of money made by the legislature, as a donation, gift, reward, or charity. Sayre v. Moore, 40 Nebr. 854, 59 N. W. 755, claim for reimbursement of county for expenses of murder trial.

Necessity for appropriation.—In order to compel the state auditor by mandamus to issue his warrant for an appropriation it has been held that it must clearly appear either that there were, at the date of the appropriation, funds in the treasury, not otherwise appropriated, sufficient to pay the same, or that the general assembly making such appropriation did, within constitutional limits, provide for levying a sufficient tax to pay such appropriation within the proper fiscal years. Henderson v. People, 17 Colo. 587, 31 Pac. 334. So in State v. Porter, 89 Ind. 260, it was held that the auditor cannot be compelled by mandamus to issue his warrant in payment of a claim unless there be money actually in the treasury specifically appropriated by law to the purpose for which such warrant is drawn. See also Dodd v. Miller, 14 Ind. 433, holding that under statute claims for work done for the commissioners of swamp lands are only payable out of the swamp land fund, and an answer by the state auditor to an alternative writ of mandamus to compel him to issue a warrant for the payment of such a claim that there is no money in the fund on which the warrant is to be drawn is sufficient. So it is held that the writ will not be awarded to compel the auditor-general to issue a warrant for a bounty when the fund has been exhausted. Smith v. Auditor-Gen., 80 Mich. 205, 45 N. W. 136. On the other hand it has been held that the auditor may be compelled to draw warrants under state contracts, although there is no money in the treasury to pay them. People v. Lippincott, 72 Ill. 578.

54. Fordyce v. Godman, 20 Ohio St. 1, 13.

55. Fisk v. Cuthbert, 2 Mont. 593, holding that under Cod. St. c. 64, authorizing the general recorder to have published at the public expense a list of certain brands and marks, mandamus will lie to compel the territorial auditor to issue a warrant in payment of the services of one who published such list under a contract with the general recorder, although the law does not fix a certain compensation for such services, and the auditor defends on the grounds that he has no power to fix the same.

56. State v. Weston, 69 Nebr. 695, 96 N. W. 668, 5 Nebr. (Unoff.) 576, 99 N. W. 520.

Where an inquest of damages from the construction of a levee on plaintiff's land has been had, the auditor cannot be heard to deny that plaintiff is the owner of the land on which the levee was located, in proceedings to compel him to issue his warrant for the payment of the damages, since it will be presumed that this fact was properly found by the jury. Auditor v. Crise, 20 Ark. 540; Crise v. Auditor, 17 Ark. 572.

57. Holliday v. Henderson, 67 Ind. 103, holding that the auditor's discretion in the selection of a newspaper in which a publication is to be made cannot be controlled by mandamus.

Colorado.—People v. Colorado Terr. Auditor, 2 Colo. 97.

Louisiana.—State v. Jumel, McGloin 144.

Missouri.—State v. Thompson, 41 Mo. 13, holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the state auditor to audit and settle a bill of costs, duly certified by the judge and the circuit attorney, as required by law.

South Dakota.—Sawyer v. Mayhew, 10 S. D. 18, 71 N. W. 141.

Washington.—State v. Cheetham, 20 Wash. 64, 54 Pac. 772.

61. People v. State, 2 Colo. 97; State v. Cornell, 56 Nebr. 143, 76 N. W. 459, holding that if the state auditor refuses to examine or pass upon a claim against the state, the supreme court will not examine into the merits of the claim as a means of determining whether action would be available to the claimant, but will compel action, and leave the merits to be examined in the manner approved by him.

lie. Where it is not shown to be within the authority and duty of the auditor to perform the act in question,⁶⁴ or where the proceeding is in effect a suit against the state without its consent,⁶⁵ the writ will not be awarded.

5. CONTROLLER. Mandamus lies against a state controller to enforce duties wholly ministerial,⁶⁶ and has been awarded to compel him to draw warrants for

64. Alabama.—State v. Brewer, 62 Ala. 215, where the writ was denied to compel the payment of a sheriff's fees on the ground that he was a defaulter.

Illinois.—Swigert v. Hamilton County, 130 Ill. 538, 22 N. E. 609, issuance of a warrant for an unliquidated amount.

Louisiana.—State v. Graham, 24 La. Ann. 429, holding that where a statute authorizing a public improvement specified that the contractor who did the work was to be paid in bonds, issued in instalments, on the certificate of the commissioners in charge of the improvement that a section had been completed, mandamus will not lie to the state auditor to compel him to issue certificates of indebtedness to the contractor, the certificate of the commissioners not having been issued.

Michigan.—People v. Auditor-Gen., 36 Mich. 271 (receiving returns of delinquent lands made after the prescribed time); People v. Auditor-Gen., 17 Mich. 161 (where it was not satisfactorily shown that all conditions as to the location of a school of medicine at a place other than Ann Arbor had been complied with).

Missouri.—State v. Allen, 180 Mo. 27, 79 S. W. 164, holding that since the statute authorizes the governor to ascertain the fees to be allowed a messenger for bringing back a fugitive from justice the auditor cannot be made to pay those fees until the governor has determined how much shall be allowed.

Nebraska.—State v. Moore, 48 Nebr. 870, 67 N. W. 876, holding that a company which has exceeded its authority by accepting a note in payment of membership fees required to be paid in advance, although it did so in good faith in reliance on the opinion of the attorney-general, cannot maintain mandamus against the auditor to compel the issuance of a license to it.

Ohio.—Fordyce v. Godman, 20 Ohio St. 1, where a claim had not been duly authorized by the legislature.

Issuance of certificate in opposition to injunction.—In Livingston v. McCarthy, 41 Kan. 20, 20 Pac. 478, it was held that mandamus will not issue against the auditor to compel him to issue a certificate for loss sustained by the burning of a town by guerrillas, where it is shown that another person claims an interest in the certificate adverse to plaintiff, and in an action brought against defendant and plaintiff by the third person the delivery of such certificate to plaintiff has been enjoined.

Failure of approval within proper time as ground for refusal of warrant.—When the state auditor refused to issue a warrant for payment of a claim, on the ground that the time had expired in which it should have been approved, mandamus will lie to compel him to issue the warrant, where the claim had been presented in time, but the auditor and secretary of state had postponed the approval thereof until after the expiration of the time required by law in which the approval should have been made, as the duty to approve the claim was a continuing one. State v. Cornell, 60 Nebr. 694, 84 N. W. 87.

Payment of greater compensation than fixed by law.—Where the compensation for services of officers, employees, etc., of the general assembly is fixed by law, the auditor cannot be compelled by mandamus to audit and pay any increased compensation attempted to be given by separate resolutions of each house, or by the general appropriation bill providing therefor in pursuance of such resolutions. People v. Spruance, 8 Colo. 307, 6 Pac. 831.

Writ to compel pursuance of particular methods.—A mere creditor of the state, who has the auditor's warrants for his claim, cannot maintain mandamus against that officer to compel him to pursue certain methods in the settlement of accounts with the tax-collectors, so that relator may get his money sooner. State v. Dubuclet, 28 La. Ann. 85.

65. State v. Jumel, McGloin (La.) 144 (holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the state auditor in violation of an express provision of law making a different disposition of the funds in the public treasury to draw his warrant on the treasurer for the payment of vouchers issued to the relator by the committee on contingent expenses of the house of representatives, as the proceeding, while nominally against the auditor, is in reality against the state, which, as a sovereign, is beyond judicial control); Ottawa County v. Alpin, 69 Mich. 1, 36 N. W. 702 (holding that an application by a board of county supervisors for mandamus to compel the auditor-general to pay over certain taxes received to the county treasurer is in effect a suit against the state and cannot be maintained without its consent); Sanilac County v. Aplin, 68 Mich. 659, 36 N. W. 794; People v. Auditor-Gen., 38 Mich. 746 (holding that where money has gone into the state treasury, as part of the general balance rightfully received, and not as a separate and independent item wrongfully received, mandamus will not lie to require its repayment, nor can any suit be maintained for it unless voluntarily allowed within the authority of some proper officer).

66. California.—People v. Bell, 4 Cal. 177. Connecticut.—State v. Staub, 61 Conn. 553, 23 Atl. 924, holding that mandamus will lie to compel the state controller to distribute the money which the general assembly has salaries of public officers,⁶⁷ or for money due on a state contract,⁶⁸ to direct the levy of a state tax to pay the public debt,⁶⁹ or to allow the district attorney to inspect records in his office.⁷⁰ But the writ will not lie where its effect would be to interfere with the controller in matters requiring the exercise of judgment and discretion on his part.⁷¹ Thus it is held that a state controller cannot be compelled to audit claims against the state in any particular way or for any particular amount.⁷² In the same way where the duty of the controller to perform the act in question is not clear,⁷³ or where there is another adequate remedy at law,⁷⁴ the writ will not lie.

6. ATTORNEY-GENERAL. The general rule that mandamus cannot be resorted to granted to the several towns of the state in aid of common schools, and which Gen. St. § 2228, orders him to distribute.

Nevada.—State v. Hobart, 12 Nev. 408.

New Jersey.—Compton v. Comptroller, 52 N. J. L. 150, 18 Atl. 584 (holding that when the facts upon which an appropriation of money by a state falls due are conceded, and the controller refuses to issue his warrant for the payment merely because he has taken a different view of the law from that entertained by the court, a mandamus will lie to compel him to issue the warrant); Angle v. Runyon, 38 N. J. L. 403 (holding that where an act of the legislature directed the treasurer of the state to pay a certain sum of money to A for alleged military services, and an application was made for mandamus to compel the controller to certify the claim for payment, a return showing facts recited in the preamble to the act as grounds on which the gift was made to be untrue, and that the legislature was imposed upon in passing the act, was insufficient as an answer to the writ and should be stricken out).

Texas.—Hart v. Stephens, (1907) 100 S. W. 135.

67. Nichols v. Comptroller, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 154; People v. Whitman, 6 Cal. 659; Fowler v. Peirce, 2 Cal. 165; State v. Gamble, 13 Fla. 9; Pickle v. McCall, 86 Tex. 212, 24 S. W. 265.

Absence of statute fixing salary or making appropriation.—Where there is no permanent, continuing statute, or constitutional provision fixing the salary of a circuit judge, and no appropriation has been made therefor, mandamus will not issue to compel the controller-general to issue a warrant for a salary, and the state treasurer to pay it, since the proceeding would be against the state, in which case the court would have no jurisdiction. State v. Jennings, 68 S. C. 411, 47 S. E. 683.

fees); Wailes v. Smith, 76 Md. 469, 25 Atl. 922; Lewright v. Love, 95 Tex. 157, 65 S. W. 1089 (holding that under Rev. St. art. 5049, subd. 42, providing that the operators of railroads within the state shall pay a tax on the gross receipts from passenger travel, which receipts shall be returned under oath to the controller, and the tax be collected by him under such regulations as may be prescribed, the controller cannot be compelled by mandamus to institute such suit, although it were his duty to do so).

Maryland.—Green v. Purnell, 12 Md. 329.

Nevada.—State v. Hallock, 20 Nev. 326, 22 Pac. 123, holding that mandamus will not lie against the state controller to compel him to issue a warrant in any greater amount than audited and allowed by the board of examiners.

New Jersey.—Rutgers College v. Morgan, 71 N. J. L. 663, 60 Atl. 205 [affirming 70 N. J. L. 460, 57 Atl. 250], where by statute the state controller was authorized to withhold his warrant on the state treasurer for a sum appropriated to a college, until a certain act had been judicially determined to be constitutional.

Tennessee.—State v. Nolan, 8 Lea 663, holding that the state controller will not be compelled by mandamus to issue his warrant for the payment of a judgment against the state for costs, where it is apparent that the judgment was irregular and not authorized by law.

Necessity for appropriation for claims sought to be enforced.—It has been held that it is a conclusive answer to an application for a peremptory mandamus to compel the controller to draw his warrant upon the treasurer for the payment of a claim upon the treasury that no appropriation has ever been made by law for the payment of the claim, as required by the constitution. People v. Burrows, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 89, 16 How. Pr. 27 [affirmed in 17 N. Y. 235]. See also State v. La Grave, 23 Nev. 25, 41 Pac. 1075, 62 Am. St. Rep. 764; Nichols v. Comptroller, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 154.

to control the exercise of official discretion has been applied where it was sought to compel the state attorney-general to institute quo warranto proceedings,⁷⁵ or to issue a corporation certificate,⁷⁶ or to approve a contract for legal services rendered to a receiver.⁷⁷ With respect to discretionary duties it is only where it clearly appears that the attorney-general is not in the discharge of his duty in refusing to exercise his discretion at all, or is acting in utter disregard of the legal right of others, that the writ will lie.⁷⁸ But mandamus will lie to compel the attorney-general to perform a ministerial duty,⁷⁹ as, for instance, to compel the payment into the treasury of moneys paid to him under stipulations and judgments in actions by the state for taxes.⁸⁰

7. INSURANCE COMMISSIONER. Mandamus lies to compel a state commissioner or superintendent of insurance to perform a ministerial duty,⁸¹ but not to compel the performance of an act not falling within his duties⁸² or an act involving the exer-

W. 812, where it was intimated that, if the prosecuting attorney of the county declines to act, an elector and taxpayer may apply to the attorney-general, and, on his refusal, may institute proceedings in the supreme court to compel him to file an information in the nature of a quo warranto to determine the right of a person to the office of sheriff.

Certifying costs.—In New York under Code Civ. Proc. § 3241, providing that costs awarded against the people shall be paid on the production of an exemplified copy of the judgment, and a certificate of the attorney-general that the action was brought pursuant to law, the granting of such certificate is merely ministerial, and may be enforced by mandamus. People v. Rosendale, 76 Hun (N. Y.) 112, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 825 [affirmed in 142 N. Y. 670, 37 N. E. 571]. Where an alternative mandamus was directed to the attorney-general to compel him to certify that certain suits for penalties under the metropolitan police law were duly instituted, in which suits costs were adjudged against the people of the state, and the attorney-general in his return stated that no appropriation had been made by the legislature for the payment of these costs, and this allegation was admitted by the demurrer, a peremptory mandamus was refused. *People v. Where the superintendent of insurance refuses to file the declaration and statement on reincorporation on the ground that the name of the petitioner is similar to that of an association already recognized by the insurance department, he may be compelled so to do by mandamus. People v. Payn, 28 Misc. (N. Y.) 275, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 851 [affirmed in 60 N. Y. Suppl. 1146 (affirmed in 161 N. Y. 229, 65 N. E. 849)].

cise of judgment and discretion.⁸³ The state insurance commissioner may be compelled by mandamus to issue a license to a foreign insurance company to do business within the state upon its compliance with all conditions precedent, where his duty in the premises is ministerial merely.⁸⁴ But in a number of jurisdictions it is held that the determination of the commissioner or superintendent of insurance in granting or refusing⁸⁵ or revoking⁸⁶ licenses authorizing foreign insurance companies to transact business within the state involves the exercise of official judgment and discretion on his part which cannot be controlled or directed by mandamus. Where the relator company has not fully complied with all the legal requirements it will not be entitled to the writ against the superintendent or commissioner.⁸⁷ Mandamus is held not to be the proper proceeding by which to test the question of the amount of taxes to be paid to the superintendent of insurance

Upson*, 79 Conn. 154, 64 Atl. 2 (holding that the insurance commissioner cannot be compelled to determine what sum is to be refunded to insurance companies for illegal taxes paid, under a legislative resolution so directing); Provident Sav. L. Assur. Soc. v. Cutting, 181 Mass. 261, 63 N. E. 433, 92 Am. St. Rep. 415 (discretion in the valuation of the policies or assets of a life insurance company).

In Kansas it was at one time held that mandamus did not lie to compel the issue of licenses to foreign insurance companies. Dwelling-House Ins. Co. v. Wilder, 40 Kan. 561, 20 Pac. 265. It has been held otherwise, however, under a statute taking away the discretion of the commissioner. Kansas Home Ins. Co. v. Wilder, 43 Kan. 731, 23 Pac. 1061.

In Ohio it has been held that under the various acts making it the duty of the superintendent of insurance "to see to the execution and enforcement of all laws relating to insurance," and to revoke the license of any foreign company when it satisfactorily appears to him to be in an "unsound condition," he has such discretion as to originally issuing a license that mandamus for his refusal will not lie. State v. Moore, 42 Ohio St. 103. But a different rule has been laid down with respect to foreign fraternal beneficiary associations. State v. Vorys, 69 Ohio St. 56, 68 N. E. 580.

In Illinois it is held that mandamus to compel the revocation of the license of a foreign company because of the removal of a cause of action against it to the federal court may be made on behalf of one not a citizen of the state. People v. Pavey, 151 Ill. 101, 37 N. E. 691.

In Michigan it is held that the revocation of a license of a foreign company is a ministerial duty and that mandamus does not lie to vacate an order revoking the license where the company had not conformed to the law. Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Raymond, 70 Mich. 485, 38 N. W. 474.

87. Employers' Liability Assur. Co. v. Insurance Com'rs, 64 Mich. 614, 31 N. W. 542; Mutual F. Ins. Co. v. House, 89 Tenn. 438, 14 S. W. 927; State v. Fricke, 102 Wis. 107, 77 N. W. 732, 78 N. W. 455, holding that mandamus will not issue to compel the issue of a license to a company which has failed to pay taxes, although the statute of limitations would bar the recovery thereof.

Licensing foreign unincorporated insurance association.—Under statute in Alabama it has been held that mandamus does not lie to compel the issuance of a license to a foreign unincorporated insurance association. Hoadley v. Purifoy, 107 Ala. 276, 18 So. 220, 30 L. R. A. 351.

Licensing agents of foreign corporations.—It has been held that a non-resident cannot by mandamus compel the issuance of a license to transact insurance business in Vermont as the agent of a foreign insurance company. Cook v. Howland, 74 Vt. 393, 52 Atl. 973, 93 Am. St. Rep. 912; Bankers' L. Ins. Co. v. Howland, 73 Vt. 1, 48 Atl. 435, 57 L. R. A. 374. But it has been held in Kansas that the license of an authorized resident insurance agent cannot be revoked by the superintendent of insurance for the reason that he divided commissions with a non-resident agent who placed with the Kansas agent in-by a foreign insurance company, and to prevent the superintendent of insurance from revoking the license of such company, injunction being the proper remedy.⁸⁸

8. MEDICAL, DENTAL, OR PHARMACY BOARDS. Where a state medical⁸⁹ or dental board⁹⁰ is vested with discretion in granting or issuing licenses or certificates to applicants for leave to practice medicine or dentistry, mandamus will not lie to compel the exercise of such discretion unless the applicant has passed the prescribed examination, and is clearly entitled to a certificate.⁹¹ Nor will the writ be granted against such examiners where another adequate remedy is provided by law.⁹² But it is held that where a pharmacy board has no discretion in entering registered pharmacists, as where it is required by law to enter a "graduate in pharmacy," mandamus will lie to compel the board to perform its duty.⁹³ And under a statute requiring an examination of railroad employees engaged in certain capacities and a certificate showing fitness in certain respects, and imposing the payment of the necessary fees upon the railroad company, the examining officer cannot impose, as a condition to his performance of his duties, the payment of the fees by the applicant.⁹⁴

9. BOARDS OF PUBLIC PRINTING. Where a state board of public printing or other executive board authorized to let state printing contracts is vested with discretion in letting bids, the writ does not lie to compel them to contract with a particular party.⁹⁵ Nor will the writ be granted where the effect of its issuance would be

Rule applied to state board of health.—State v. State Bd. of Health, 103 Mo. 22, 15 S. W. 322; State v. Gregory, 83 Mo. 123, 53 Am. Rep. 565.

In Illinois under statute providing that the board of dental examiners shall at all times issue a license to any regular graduate of any reputable dental college, it has been held that it is in the discretion of the court to decide when a college is reputable and that mandamus will not lie to control this discretion. Illinois State Bd. of Dental Examiners v. People, 123 Ill. 227, 13 N. E. 201; People v. Illinois State Bd. of Dental Examiners, 110 Ill. 180. But if this discretion is abused from personal or selfish motives to bar the graduates of a particular college from practice, mandamus will lie to compel the issuance of a license. Illinois State Bd. of Dental Examiners v. People, supra. Where the board has prescribed a rule that "it will recognize as reputable only such colleges as require" a certain requisite for graduation, it has exercised its judicial power, and so long as the rule is in force only the ministerial act of licensing the graduates of such colleges as comply with that rule remains to be done and the performance of such ministerial act can be enforced by mandamus. Illinois State Bd. of Dental Examiners v. People, 20 Ill. App. 457 [affirmed in 123 Ill. 227, 13 N. E. 201].

10. ELECTION CANVASSING BOARDS.⁹⁷ The view has been advanced that a state board of canvassers, composed of state executive officers, in the exercise of its power in canvassing election returns discharges duties purely political and governmental in their character, and hence its action cannot be controlled or enforced by mandamus.⁹⁸ In other jurisdictions mandamus has been held to lie to compel a state board of canvassers, as well as a county board, to perform its ministerial duties,⁹⁹ but not to control the exercise of their discretionary powers.¹ The writ does not lie until there has been an actual default in the performance of the duties of the board.²

11. COMMISSIONERS TO ORGANIZE CORPORATIONS.³ Mandamus lies to compel commissioners appointed by law to organize a corporation to proceed to perform their duties.⁴

The duty of approving a state printing contract is judicial, involving consideration of the pecuniary responsibility, judgment, skill, capacity, and integrity of the bidder, and mandamus will not lie. State v. Smith, 23 Mont. 44, 57 Pac. 449.

Enforcing claim for public printing.—The Pennsylvania act of May 1, 1876, § 20 (Pamphl. Laws 68), provides that no printing shall be done by the public printer, who is a mere contractor, except on the written order of the superintendent of public printing, or on a written order signed by the executive or the head of the department for which it is done. The legislature passed an act permitting certain pamphlets to be published by the state veterinarian and the economic zoölogist of the agricultural department. The authors sent an order to the public printer, which he refused to obey, and sent to the superintendent of printing. The latter, without authority from the secretary of agriculture, issued an order to the public printer in the regular form, directing him to publish the pamphlets. It was held that these facts raised no imputation of knowledge by the public printer of the irregularity, and he was entitled to a writ of mandamus to compel the payment of the cost of printing by the superintendent of printing. Com. v. Jones, 192 Pa. St. 472, 43 Atl. 1089.

Baker*, 92 Tex. 58, 45 S. W. 1004. So where under a statute providing that a county surveyor shall keep his field-notes, etc., in a fire-proof vault, to be designated by the board of supervisors, except when they are in use in the field by the surveyor in making surveys, and that the field-notes shall be accessible to the public at any time, subject to the regulations provided by the board of supervisors, etc., an order is made by the board of supervisors consistently with the statute designating a place of deposit for such field-notes, mandamus will lie to compel obedience to such order. *Grand Traverse County v. Repayment of purchase-price on failure of title.—In People v. Land Office, 149 N. Y. 26, 43 N. E. 418 [reversing 90 Hun 525, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 29], it is held that under the statute providing that when the title to land granted by the state shall fail and a legal claim for compensation on account of such failure shall be proved by any person entitled thereto, it shall be the duty of the land commissioners to direct repayment of the original purchase-money paid to the state, etc., the action of the commissioners is judicial and the performance of the duty in any particular manner will not be enforced by mandamus. So in Sullivan v. Shanklin, 63 Cal. 247, it was held that under an act providing for a certificate from the register showing the amount paid and the class of land on which the payment was made in exchange for the certificate of purchase or patent where the land sold was not the property of the state, upon which registers certified the amount specified should be paid out of the swamp and overflow land fund, etc., where the validity of the patent under which title passed through the medium of the state from the United States has never been determined mandamus would not lie to compel the issue of the register's certificate

The right must be clear and not in doubt. Milliner v. Harrison, 32 Gratt. (Va.) 482. And it is held that the writ will not lie to compel a sale to one who has been adjudged to have the preference right of purchase, where there is pending before another court a motion to vacate the judgment upon which the application for the writ is based. *State v. of interest on audit certificates,²³ or the payment of claims audited by the court of claims and for which an appropriation has been made,²⁴ but not to control the exercise of his judicial discretion.²⁵ So the writ will not lie where the law does not both authorize²⁶ and require him to do what he is asked in the petition to be made to do²⁷ or where the writ would in effect amount to a suit against the government.²⁸

4. POSTMASTER-GENERAL. The postmaster-general may be compelled by mandamus to perform a ministerial duty, as to credit an award made by the solicitor of the treasury,²⁹ or admit matter to the mails in clear cases,³⁰ or to reestablish a post-office discontinued without lawful authority;³¹ but not an executive act requiring the exercise of judgment.³²

5. SECRETARY OF THE NAVY. The discretion of the secretary of the navy in matters committed to his care in the ordinary discharge of his official duties cannot be controlled by mandamus.³³

6. SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR AND SUBORDINATE OFFICIALS. the ground of its failure to comply with the requirement of a postal regulation that it must "consist of current news"; that characteristic of second-class matter not being required by Act Cong., March 3, 1879, c. 180 (20 U. D. State Legislatures or Legislative Officers. The courts will not interfere by mandamus proceedings with the legislative department of the government in the legitimate exercise of its powers,⁵¹ except to enforce mere ministerial acts required by law to be performed by some officer thereof.⁵² The writ will not be employed against a legislative officer in respect to a matter arising in the regular course of legislation and requiring the exercise of judgment and discretion.⁵³ Since the writ of mandamus does not confer authority upon the officer to whom it is directed, it will not lie to compel a legislative officer whose duties are purely clerical to perform a duty imposed upon the legislative body.⁵⁴ In the same way the writ will not lie to compel a legislative officer to perform a duty required to be performed under the supervision and control of the legislative body.⁵⁵ The courts by means of writs of mandamus operating upon the officers of legislative bodies may not supervise the making up of the records of the proceedings of those bodies or cause alterations to be made in such records as prepared by the officer whose duty it was to prepare them;⁵⁶ nor may they, in a case not involving the private interests of parties, determine whether a particular body of persons

Expulsion of member of legislature.—The courts cannot interfere by mandamus with the exercise by the legislature of its power to expel members. French v. State Senate, 146 Cal. 604, 80 Pac. 1031, 69 L. R. A. 556; State v. Bersch, 83 Mo. App. 657.

Determining title to office of governor.—When neither the speaker of the house of delegates, nor the joint assembly of both houses of the legislature, convened under section 3, article 7, of the constitution for the purpose of opening and publishing the returns of the election for the office of governor, does in fact open and publish the returns in respect to said office, or declare any person elected to that office, it has been held that the supreme court cannot by mandamus adjudge the person who appears from the returns certified to the speaker of the house to have received the highest number of votes for that office to be the governor, and compel the person who was the governor, during the preceding term, to deliver the office and its insignia to him. *Goff v. Suppl. 760], where it was intimated that mandamus will lie against the lieutenant-governor and speaker of the assembly as a member of an appointing board, during the legislative recess, while their exemption from arrest does not exist.

Mandamus will not lie to compel a stenographer to furnish a transcript of the report of a legislative investigation before a legislative committee, he being a mere clerk or servant, and not an officer. Bailey v. Oviatt, 46 Vt. 627.

53. Ex p. Echols, 39 Ala. 698, 88 Am. assuming to exercise legislative functions constitutes in fact a lawful legislative assembly.⁵⁷

VI. MANDAMUS TO MUNICIPAL AND OTHER PUBLIC CORPORATIONS AND OFFICERS.

A. Establishment of Corporation in General — 1. BOUNDARIES. Duties with relation to a change of municipal boundaries may be enforced by mandamus where no discretion is vested in the body or officers charged with their performance.⁵⁸ But mandamus will not issue to compel the appointment of an agent to settle the boundaries between districts, where the duty is not mandatory.⁵⁹ A commission appointed to settle the boundary may be compelled to make a return, the duty being ministerial.⁶⁰

2. LOCATION OF COUNTY-SEAT. The proceedings by which the location or relocation of a county-seat are to be effected are usually fully prescribed by statute;⁶¹ and where the provisions of such statutes have been complied with, the duty of the proper officer or officers to act is generally regarded as ministerial and may be enforced by mandamus.⁶² Where, however, a discretion is vested in such officers, mandamus will not issue to control their actions,⁶³ unless they have refused to exercise their discretion,⁶⁴ or have abused it.⁶⁵ In any event there must be no other adequate remedy.⁶⁶ There must have been an actual default⁶⁷ or refusal⁶⁸ and all conditions precedent must have been complied with.⁶⁹ Persons who have

Dubuque County*, Morr. (Iowa) 31 (holding that a board of county commissioners might be compelled to enter upon its minutes the result of the election).

Calling election.—A plain statutory duty to call an election for the relocation of a county-seat may be compelled by mandamus. Barry v. State, 57 Nebr. 464, 77 N. W. 1096; State v. Crabtree, 35 Nebr. 106, 52 N. W. 842, where a petition, after deducting the names of all unqualified signers, contained a sufficient number of signatures.

C. 257 (holding that the discretion of commissioners appointed to determine the site for the county-seat will not be interfered with, although they may be compelled to proceed). But see State v. Marshall County Judge, 7 Iowa 186, holding that where the canvassers reject returns that should be counted, mandamus in a proper legal sense is a command not to re-canvass, but to canvass the returns of the election.

65. State v. Geib, 66 Minn. 266, 68 N. Polk County*, 88 Wis. 355, 60 N. W. 266 (where a county board was compelled to compare signatures upon a petition with the poll lists, and also to act upon a second petition).

Other adequate remedy as preventing mandamus in general see supra, II, D.

67. State v. Ramsey, 8 Nebr. 286, holding that a board of supervisors would not be compelled to reject certain votes cast at an election, and call a new election, where it was not their duty to canvass the vote.

68. Double v. McQueen, 96 Mich. 39, 55 N. W. 564, holding that mandamus to compel the canvass of the votes would not lie where there had been no refusal.

69. Condit v. Newton County, 25 Ind. 422 (so holding where a bond to convey a site been guilty of fraud with regard to a county-seat election are not entitled to mandamus to enforce its result.⁷⁰ The application for mandamus to compel the submission of the question of removal is of such local interest that it will not ordinarily permit an appellate court to take original jurisdiction.⁷¹

3. PLATS AND ADDITIONS. Where the provisions of existing statutes and ordinances with relation thereto have been fully complied with in surveying and platting an addition to a municipality, the duty of the council or other officer with power to act under the circumstances to approve the plat becomes ministerial and may be enforced by mandamus.⁷²

4. CHANGES IN GRADE OF MUNICIPALITY. A legal duty to reorganize a city of a certain grade, as a city of a higher grade, may be enforced by mandamus.⁷³

B. Governing Bodies — 1. COUNCILS OR OTHER CITY LEGISLATIVE BODIES. Where a clear and imperative duty is imposed by law upon a municipal council, mandamus will lie to compel its performance.⁷⁴ Under this rule a city council may be compelled by mandamus to organize,⁷⁵ or to meet,⁷⁶ or two branches of a council may be compelled to meet together for the purpose of joint action;⁷⁷ and also it has been held the passage of ordinances may be compelled.⁷⁸ But mandamus is not a proper remedy to control the act of a municipal body when acting within the scope of its legal powers.⁷⁹

2. BOARDS OF SUPERVISORS. Mandamus will issue to compel a board of county commissioners or supervisors to perform a plain duty prescribed by law,⁸⁰ but matters as to which they are vested with discretion will not be controlled.⁸¹ Where a board of supervisors have neglected to perform any duty required of them at their annual meeting they may be compelled by mandamus to meet again and perform it.⁸² Or they may be compelled to reconvene and correct an

3. RECORD OF PROCEEDINGS. A public board or city council may be compelled to make a record of its proceedings,⁸⁵ or to correct such records;⁸⁶ and likewise an officer charged with the duty of keeping such records may be compelled to make and amend them;⁸⁷ but mandamus will not go against an officer who does not have control of the record,⁸⁸ or where there is another adequate remedy.⁸⁹

C. Title, Possession, and Incidents of Public Office⁹⁰ —1. APPOINTMENT —

a. In General. Where the proper officer refuses to make an appointment, he may be compelled by mandamus to perform his duty by appointing some person,⁹¹ although the writ will not lie to compel the appointment of a particular person, where the appointing power, as is usually the case, is vested with discretion in this regard,⁹² unless such discretion is abused or exercised with manifest injus-

Where the statute conferring the power of appointment is directory merely, as where other provision is made by statute in case of the failure of the appointing power to make the appointment, the writ will not lie to compel an appointment. Davison v. Solano County, 70 Cal. 612, 11 Pac. 680. See also Johnston v. Mitchell, 120 Mich. 589, 79 N. W. 812.

Mandamus to compel the filling of a vacancy will not lie, where the cause relied upon as creating a vacancy, as for instance the failure of a person elected to take the oath of office, furnishes a cause of forfeiture merely, and a vacancy can be created only by a direct proceeding for that purpose. People v. Mt. Vernon, 59 Hun (N. Y.) 204, 13 N. Y. Suppl. 447.

Nomination to office.—No exception lies to a refusal to grant a writ of mandamus to the mayor of a city to compel him to make a nomination to the board of aldermen for the office of chief of police, while a person is holding that office de facto, and no one but the incumbent is claiming it; and while an information, in the nature of a quo warranto, is pending to try his title to the office. Atty.-Gen. v. New Bedford, 128 Mass. 312.

tice.⁹³ But a contrary rule obtains where the duty of appointment is ministerial merely, as for instance where the power of selection is vested in another officer.⁹⁴

b. Issuance of Commission. Where the issuance of a commission to an applicant for office is a mere ministerial duty, mandamus lies to compel it.⁹⁵

2. ADMINISTERING OATH OF OFFICE. Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the proper official to administer the oath of office to⁹⁶ or to qualify the person entitled to the office.⁹⁷ But the writ has been refused for this purpose where the effect of its issuance would be to control the discretion vested in defendant;⁹⁸ where it appeared on the petition of the applicant that he was constitutionally ineligible to the office to which he had been elected;⁹⁹ where in consequence of the failure of the applicant to take the oath or affirmation within the time required by law, defendants had appointed another person to fill the office;¹ or where a judgment of ouster had been entered against relator in proceedings in the nature of quo warranto.²

3. APPROVAL OF OFFICIAL BONDS. The approval of official bonds is said by some of the authorities to be a judicial duty,³ and by others to be a ministerial duty,⁴ or partly judicial and partly ministerial.⁵ The exercise of the discretion of the proper authorities in determining the sufficiency of a bond and the sureties thereon will not be interfered with by mandamus proceedings⁶ in the absence of proof of an abuse of discretion.⁷ But the proper authorities may be compelled to consider a bond presented to them and to accept or reject it as it may or may not be satisfactory to them and in the form required by law.⁸ Moreover it is held that mandamus will lie to compel approval, where the sufficiency of the bond and its sureties is not in dispute and there is prima facie evidence of the relator's title to office, it being held that in such case all inquiry as to relator's title is barred and that a refusal to approve based on relator's lack of title will be no defense.⁹

4. ENFORCEMENT OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS¹⁰—a. In General. Under civil service laws it has been held that mandamus lies to compel civil service commissioners to entertain and consider the application of the relator for a position in the service,¹¹ to submit to the appointing officer the proper certificates as to the eligibility of candidates,¹² or to replace on the eligible list a name which they have unlawfully approved by the city counselor, mandamus lies to compel approval. State v. Shannon, 133 Mo. 139, 33 S. W. 1137. See also Com. v. Chittenden, 2 Pa. Dist. 804, 13 Pa. Co. Ct. 362.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," §§ 147, 148.

Cancellation of bonds.—In State v. Judge Orleans Parish Civ. Dist. Ct., 34 La. Ann. 74, it was held that mandamus lies to compel the district judge to proceed with the trial of oppositions to applications made to the governor for the cancellation of bonds of public officials.

Discretion of tribunal as to time for assembling.—The commissioners' court, after it has canvassed the returns and declared the election of a county officer, and the county judge has issued to him a certificate of his election, cannot be compelled by mandamus to act at the same term on his bond, instead of at a subsequent day which it has fixed upon for assembling and considering the bonds of all the county officers, although there may be no reason for the delay, since the statute fixes no time in which the bonds shall be approved, and the court has a discretion as to when it shall meet and perform its duties. *Luckey v. Where in contest proceedings a sheriff has been found not to have been elected, it was held that the writ would not lie to compel the approval of his bond. Lewis v. Marion County Com'rs, 14 Ohio St. 515.

Failure to file bond within required time.—In some of the decisions it is held that mandamus will not lie to compel the proper authorities to approve a bond where the ground of their refusal is that the bond was not filed within the time provided by statute and therefore that the office is vacant. Ex p. Harris, 52 Ala. 87, 23 Am. Rep. 559; Knox County v. Johnson, 124 Ind. 145, 24 N. E. 148, 19 Am. St. Rep. 88, 7 L. R. A. 684 [distinguishing Boone County v. State, 61 Ind. 379]; *Lowe v. Suppl. 298, holding, however, that the duty of the commissioners is performed when they certify that the relator is qualified by both merit and fitness to be placed upon the eligible list, and that they cannot be compelled to certify that the relator is entitled to be appointed to the position for which he was examined.

removed therefrom.¹³ So it has been held that the writ will lie to compel the proper official to notify the commissioners of any vacancies in the service,¹⁴ or to call for a list of names eligible for appointment.¹⁵

b. Classifications by Civil Service Commissioners. The authorities are not harmonious on the question whether mandamus will lie to review the decisions of civil service commissioners in making classifications in the service, although the tendency of the later decisions is to the effect that the action of civil service commissioners in making classifications is subject to at least a limited and qualified control to be exercised by mandamus.¹⁶

c. Enforcement of Preference Rights. Mandamus has been held not to be the proper remedy to enforce a preference required by statute to be given to honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, etc., in appointments to public office or employment in the public service.¹⁷

5. ACCEPTING OFFICE AND ASSUMING DUTIES. Mandamus will lie to compel the acceptance of a municipal office by one who, possessing the requisite qualifica-

Certification from list illegally made up.—In People v. Syracuse, 26 Misc. (N. Y.) 522, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 617, it was held that mandamus would not lie to compel a certification where the list from which the relator seeks to have his name certified for appointment was improperly and illegally made up by the civil service board.

13. People v. Cobb, 13 N. Y. App. Div. 56, 43 N. Y. Suppl. 120.

14. People v. Kiple, 171 Ill. 44, 49 N. E. 229, 41 L. R. A. 775.

15. People v. Syracuse, 26 Misc. (N. Y.) 522, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 617, where, however, the writ was denied on the ground that there had been no prior demand for such action.

16. See cases cited infra, this note.

In Illinois the rule has been broadly stated that a writ of mandamus will lie to compel civil service commissioners to make a classification which may be judicially determined to be correct. People v. Kraus, 171 Ill. 130, 48 N. E. 1052.

In New York there are several decisions to the effect that the decisions of civil service commissioners in making classifications in the civil service involve the exercise of judgment and discretion and cannot be controlled by mandamus. People v. Collier, 175 N. Y. 196, 67 N. E. 309 [reversing 78 N. Y. App. Div. 620, 79 N. Y. Suppl. 671, and distinguishing Chittendon v. Wurster, 152 N. Y. 345, 46 N. E. 857, 37 L. R. A. 809]; Dill v. Wheeler, 100 N. Y. App. Div. 155, 91 N. Y. Suppl. 686; People v. Hamilton, 98 N. Y. App. Div. 59, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 547 [affirming 44 Misc. 577, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 97]. Thus it has been held that the authority of the state civil service commission to change with the approval of the governor a position in the service from the competitive to the non-competitive class or vice versa cannot be reviewed collaterally by mandamus. People v. Collier, supra [distinguishing Chittendon v. Wurster, supra]; People v. Hamilton, supra. But in the later case of People v. McWilliams, 185 N. Y. 92, 99, 77 N. Y. Suppl. 785, where it was held that the action of the civil service commissioners was not a subject to review by certiorari, the court said: "It does not at all follow that the action of the civil service commission is not in any case subject to judicial control; but that such control is a limited and qualified one to be exercised by mandamus. If the position is clearly one properly subject to competitive examination, the commissioners may be compelled to so classify it. On the other hand, if the position be by statute or from its nature exempt from examination and the action of the commission be palpably illegal, the commission may be compelled to strike the position from the competitive or examination class, though in such case redress by mandamus would often be unnecessary, as a valid appointment could be made notwithstanding the classification. But where the position is one, as to the proper mode of filling which there is fair and reasonable ground for difference of opinion among intelligent and conscientious officials, the action of the commission should stand, even though the courts may differ from the commission as to the wisdom of the classification."

17. State v. Copeland, 74 Minn. 371, 77 N. W. 221; State v. Wayne County, 57 Ohio St. 86, 48 N. E. 130.

In New York by express statutory provision for a refusal to allow the preference provided for by statute an honorably discharged soldier, etc., of the United States in the late Civil war has a remedy by mandamus for righting the wrong. People v. Scannell, 63 N. Y. App. Div. 243, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 383. But the applicant must affirmatively show that the position he seeks is not one of those excepted from the preference to be given to veterans. Matter of Ostrander, 12 Misc. 476, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 295 [affirmed in 146 N. Y. 404, 42 N. E. 543]. See also Brown v. Duane, 60 Hun 98, 14 N. Y. Suppl. 450. It is held that the writ will be denied to compel the appointment of a veteran, where on the application for a peremptory writ the answering affidavits state that respondents consider relator incompetent to discharge the duties of the office thereby presenting a question of fact which is not within the purpose of a proceeding by mandamus (People v. Keating, 49 N. Y. App. Div. 123, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 71; People v. Ballston Spa, 19 Misc. 671, 44 N. Y. Suppl.:

tions, has been duly appointed or elected to the same.¹⁸ So it has been held that where the office of governor is vacant and the president of the state senate refuses to assume the duties of the office as required by law, mandamus will lie to compel him to do so.¹⁹

6. REMOVAL FROM OFFICE. Mandamus lies to compel the proper authorities to take action on a complaint or charge made against a public officer,²⁰ but not to control their judgment or discretion as to the sufficiency of the complaint as a ground for removal.²¹ Mandamus has been held to lie to officials exercising an appointing power to compel the removal of an officer appointed without legal authority,²² or with manifest abuse of discretion.²³ On the other hand it has been held that mandamus is not the proper remedy to compel the appointing power to remove an officer on the ground of his ineligibility to office.²⁴

7. TITLE TO AND POSSESSION OF OFFICE OR EMPLOYMENT — a. In General. Although there are authorities to the contrary,²⁵ it is the general rule that title to Cohocton*, 17 Misc. 652, 41 N. Y. Suppl. 449 [distinguishing People v. Brooklyn, 149 N. Y. 215, 43 N. E. 554]. Compare People v. Scannell, 63 N. Y. App. Div. 243, 246, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 383, where it is said: "Where a veteran is deprived of any right to preference in appointment or promotion the statute now gives him a remedy by mandamus, and it is no longer an answer to show that his position has been filled by the appointment of another." Where an eligible person claims, upon a motion for a peremptory writ of mandamus, that he should have been certified in May as eligible to and entitled to fill a vacancy, and it appears that there was a sufficient number of other veterans entitled to a preference over him to prevent his having been so certified in May, he cannot change his position and claim that some of these other veterans had not passed the civil service examination, or had been appointed to other positions, so that he would have been certified upon a subsequent requisition made in June, had the board adopted the proper rule. People v. New York City Civil Service Bd., 13 N. Y. App. Div. 309, 43 N. Y. Suppl. 191. In Massachusetts it is held that while the use of mandamus to try the title to office is unusual, it may be so used where it affords the speediest and best method of settling the dispute of two rival claimants of a municipal office. Keough v. Holyoke, 156 Mass. 403, 31 N. E. 387; Luce v. Dukes County, 153 Mass. 108, 26 N. E. 419; Putnam v. Langley, 133 Mass. 204; Conlin v. Aldrich, 98 Mass. 557; Ellis v. Bristol, 2 Gray 370; In re Strong, 20 Pick. 484. But where the question was not which of two persons was rightfully entitled to a public office, but upon which of several public officers rests the duty of performing a certain public function, the rule acted upon in this commonwealth in cases where the sole question is which of two men is lawfully entitled to an office has not been applied. Fowler v. Brooks, 188 Mass.

a public office cannot be adjudicated on an application for mandamus.²⁶ Accordingly it may be stated as a general rule that where an office is already filled by an actual incumbent, exercising its functions, even though he is an officer de facto under color of right only, mandamus is not available to compel the admission of another claimant of the office, at least where the latter has never been an

64, 65, 74 N. E. 291, where the court said: "In view of the fact that the principle involved in our practice in such cases is opposed to the great weight of authority, we are not inclined to extend it beyond the limits to which it already has been carried."

Effect of prior conclusive determination of dispute.—In Shober v. Cochrane, 53 Md. 544, it was held that mandamus would not lie to compel defendant not to interfere with or prevent the petitioner from discharging the duties of an office and to yield up the office to the petitioner on the ground that the decision of the state board of education in the matter was final and conclusive.

finally established by a competent tribunal.³³ Thus after a judgment in quo warranto ousting an incumbent it has been held that mandamus will lie against the proper authorities to compel them to admit or recognize the person entitled to the office.³⁴ On the other hand it is held that the applicant for a writ of mandamus to compel the proper officials to admit or recognize him as an officer must establish a clear, specific right to the office, and hence that the writ will be denied if it appears that the election or appointment relied upon to establish his claim was invalid,³⁵ or where it appears on the face of the pleadings that he is disqualified from holding office.³⁶ So the writ will not issue when it appears that the term for which the petitioner was elected has already expired.³⁷

W. 660, where it is said: "It is, however, also well settled that where the relator holds an uncontested title to a public office, or his title has been adjudicated and finally established by a competent tribunal, and he is in possession of the office, that mandamus will lie to compel the delivery to him of the books and papers belonging to his office by his predecessor in office, who has refused his demand therefor." Rule applied where relator's title has been established by final judgment in election contest.—Mannix v. State, 115 Ind. 245, 17 N. E. 565.

Existence of statutory remedy as ground for denying writ see People v. Stevens, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 616.

Where books have been delivered to another holding office under color of title.—In People v. Lieb, 85 Ill. 484, it was held that mandamus will not issue to compel a county clerk who has delivered the assessor's books to one appointed to the office of assessor, and clothed with the proper evidence of his appointment, to deliver those books to another claiming the same office by election.

Recovery from de facto incumbent.—Where relator has been illegally removed or suspended from office and a successor has been appointed it has been held that mandamus being the proper remedy to restore the relator to office it may also issue to compel the restoration of the records and insignia of office. Metsker v. Neally, 41 Kan. 122, 21 Pac. 206, 13 Am. St. Rep. 269. Compare Ewing v. Turner, 2 Okla. 94, 35 Pac. 951.

Restoration of control of jail.—If jail built by authority of law is placed in the possession and under the control of another than the sheriff, by the county court, or the mayor and aldermen of a town or city and the sheriff of the county is virtually refused all legal authority and control over it, he may be restored to his right by a writ of mandamus. Felts v. Memphis, 2 Head (Tenn. 650). Mandamus lies to restore a jailer his control of the county jail which is withheld by defendant, a former deputy jailer who had been removed from office by the applicant. Burr v. Norton, 25 Conn. 103. So it has been held that mandamus will lie to compel a person who has been made jailer by the county board of chosen freeholders under an illegal contract to surrender the possession of the jail to the chosen freeholders. State v. Layton, 28 N. J. L. 244.

Where accounts of predecessor are unsettled.—The writ will not lie to compel an officer holding over to turn over to his successor in office the books and papers of the relator has a prima facie title to the office or not;⁴¹ and it is held that a person holding a certificate of election or a commission from an officer or tribunal authorized to issue the same, and who qualifies and properly demands possession, has the prima facie right of possession as against a recalcitrating incumbent, who holds over after his term expires;⁴² and such prima facie title cannot be defeated in mandamus by an incumbent who is merely holding over after the expiration of his term, by alleging facts which do not tend to defeat the prima facie rights of the relator, but do tend to show that the relator's title will be ultimately defeated if the state at its election shall institute a proper proceeding to oust the relator,⁴³ the incumbent of the office under such circumstances not being a de facto officer holding under color of right.⁴⁴ A formal demand for possession is unnecessary where facts appear amounting substantially to a refusal,⁴⁵ or when it can be conclusively implied from the conduct of him against whom the writ is sought that there would be a refusal to comply.⁴⁶ Mandamus will not lie against a mere private person, not acting in any official capacity, to deliver books, records, etc., to the officer entitled to them.⁴⁷

c. Restoration to Office or Employment — (i) IN GENERAL. Mandamus is a proper remedy to restore a party to the possession of an office from which he has been illegally removed or suspended, as where he has been dismissed without sufficient cause or without the proper notice, hearing, and investigation, or in some other arbitrary manner.⁴⁸ So mandamus lies to reinstate an officer or office where the accounts of the old incumbent have not been settled and there has been no unreasonable delay on his part or to compel him to turn over moneys in his possession where a suit therefor is pending in which he has been summoned as trustee. Bates v. Keith, 66 Vt. 163, 28 Atl. 865.

Texas.—Johnson v. Galveston, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 469, 33 S. W. 150.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 167.

Removal of military officer approved by governor.—In People v. Roe, 51 N. Y. App. Div. 494, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 642, it was held that a writ of mandamus requiring the commanding officer of the national guard of the state of New York to restore to duty an officer whom he has relieved from duty therein will not be issued, where the governor has approved the order relieving the officer from duty and has denied his application for reinstatement.

Removal by persons acting without authority.—The rule of the text has been applied where the petitioner was removed from a board of which he was a member, where the board had no authority in the premises.

Akerman v. Cartersville, 118 Ga. 334, 45 S. E. 312, where the writ was allowed to compel the board of school commissioners to give recognition to the rights of a member thereof whom his associates had without legal authority attempted to remove from office. See also State v. Jersey City, 25 N. J. L. 536. And the same rule has been applied where it was attempted to oust the relator by the appointment of a city treasurer, made by the board of aldermen not having a majority of its members present as required by law. State v. Paterson, 35 N. J. L. 190. On the other hand it has been held that the writ will not lie against an officer who has no power of removal or reinstatement, although his unauthorized act of removal will be treated as null and void. People v. Dalton, 158 N. Y. 204, 52 N. E. 1119 [affirming 34 N. Y. App. Div. 6, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 1060].

Refusal of representation by counsel.—In State v. Courtenay, 23 S. C. 180, it was held that in investigating a charge against a pilot for negligence in grounding a steamship the fact that the privilege of being represented by counsel was refused him will not entitle him to the writ of mandamus to compel his restoration to office from which he was removed on account of such negligence.

Reinstatement on condition of waiver of claim for back salary.—In People v. Ahearn, 100 N. Y. Suppl. 716, it was held that where in mandamus to compel the reinstatement of relator in a municipal office his petition entitled him to an alternative writ, the court did not have power to attach a condition that he should waive all claims for back salary in case of ultimate success.

Mandamus to compel common council to proceed with hearing of charges.—In Good-fellow v. Detroit, 102 Mich. 343, 60 N. W. 760, where mandamus was applied for to compel the common council to proceed with the hearing of charges preferred against a member of the board of fire commissioners it was held that while the relator was entitled to a hearing upon the charges made at the time fixed or to have a time fixed when such hearing should be had, the indefinite action of the common council was equivalent to a dismissal of the charges pending and that the issuance of the writ was unnecessary.

49. Thompson v. Troup, 74 Conn. 121, 49 Atl. 907 (where a clerk in the department of public works was discharged without any opportunity being afforded him for a hearing as to the sufficiency of the cause); Hill v. Fitzgerald, (Mass. 1907) 79 N. E. 825; Ransom v. Boston, (Mass. 1907) 79 N. E. 823 (holding that the writ may be awarded in favor of a veteran in the public employment, although not a public officer, where he has been dismissed in violation of a statute requiring that he shall have the opportunity of a full hearing and that a veteran employed in the lie to compel the restoration to office of the person removed.⁵⁰ But when the power of removal rests by law in the discretion of any person or depends upon the exercise of personal judgment as to whether the cause for removal be sufficiently good, mandamus will not lie to control such judgment or discretion.⁵¹ So where the office or employment is held at the pleasure or will of the appointing labor service of a city pursuant to the civil service statutes and rules of the civil service commission, who was wrongfully discharged from his employment, does not lose his right to mandamus to compel his reinstatement by the fact that he had previously brought an action for wages lost while excluded from his employment); Lewis v. Jersey City, 51 N. J. L. 240, 17 Atl. 112 (where the act relating to the dismissal from office or position of honorably discharged soldiers or sailors was held to refer to positions analogous to offices as distinguished from mere employment); People v. Scannell, 172 N. Y. 316, 65 N. E. 165 [affirming 69 N. Y. App. Div. 400, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 122]; People v. Kearny, 161 N. Y. 684, 57 N. E. 1121 [affirming 44 N. Y. App. Div. 449, 61 N. Y. Suppl. 41]; People v. Hayes, 106 N. Y. App. Div. 563, 94 N. Y. Suppl. 754; People v. Cram, 29 Misc. (N. Y.) 359, 61 N. Y. Suppl. 838 [affirmed in 50 N. Y. App. Div. 380, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 158].

In New York by express statute a veteran improperly removed may have "a remedy by mandamus for righting the wrong." People v. Dalton, 158 N. Y. 204, 52 N. E. 1119 [affirming 34 N. Y. App. Div. 6, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 1060, and distinguishing People v. Goetting, 133 N. Y. 569, 30 N. E. 968]; Matter of Sullivan, 5 Hun 285, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 401; People v. Ballston Spa, 19 Misc. 671, 44 N. Y. Suppl. 471. See also People v. Bardin, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 123. Mandamus will not lie under the veterans' act commanding the reinstatement of the applicant, where no duty in the premises rests upon defendants in the first instance, they being required to act only after the initiative has been taken by another officer. Matter of Broderick, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 534, 56 N. Y. Suppl. 99.

Abolition of office or position.—In People v. Chicago, 104 Ill. App. 250, it was held that where a municipal office filled by a civil service employee is in good faith abolished, such employee may be discharged without a hearing and cannot complain of any arrangement made by the city for the performance by others already in the classified service of the duties of such abolished office. So in People v. Bermel, 51 Misc. (N. Y.) 75, 100 N. Y. Suppl. 728, it was held that on an application for a peremptory writ of mandamus to restore the relator to a position in the board of highways in a borough which he had formerly held and from which he had been suspended, the writ must be denied where the answer shows a bona fide abolition of the office.

Certifying for reinstatement by civil service commissioners.—Mandamus will not lie to compel municipal civil service commissioners to certify to the appointing power for reinstatement to a corresponding position an officer whose office has been abolished, where it is only when there is need for the services of a suspended officer that he is entitled to reinstatement, and the request by the appointing power to the commissioners for the name of a person to be appointed has not been made as required by law. Morrison v. Cantor, 75 N. Y. App. Div. 480, 78 N. Y. Suppl. 385 [affirmed in 173 N. Y. 646, 66 N. E. 1112]. So the determination of the commission as to whether or not newly created positions are similar to those which have been abolished involves the exercise of discretion which is not reviewable in a mandamus proceeding to compel relator's name to be certified. Donovan v. Cantor, 89 N. Y. App. Div. 50, 85 N. Y. Suppl. 406. In Civil Service Commission v. Kenyon, 86 Ill. App. 547, it was held that where a person in the employ of the city of Chicago as an assistant engineer of the waterworks was discharged, mandamus would not lie against the civil service commission to compel the commission "forthwith to place petitioner in the position of the fifth grade mechanical engineer of the Chicago avenue water works . . . and to certify petitioner to such position," since the civil service commission was not authorized to direct that a person named shall be employed in any particular place designated by the commission.

Transfer of veteran on abolition of position.—In re Breckenridge, 160 N. Y. 103, 54 N. E. 670, it was held that the provision of the act of 1898 that in cities of the first class if a position held by a veteran shall become unnecessary or be abolished for reasons of economy, he shall not be discharged, but shall be "transferred to any branch of the public service for duty in such position as he may be fitted to fill, receiving the same compensation therefor," contemplates for its operation the existence of a vacancy in such a position and not that a vacancy be created for the veteran, and in the absence of such vacancy mandamus will not lie to enforce a transfer. See also People v. Keating, 49 N. Y. App. Div. 123, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 71.

power,⁵² where the relator is dismissed from membership in a body having the final and conclusive power to determine the election and qualifications of its members,⁵³ where there is a legal cause for the removal or suspension,⁵⁴ or where an officer voluntarily abandons the office⁵⁵ the writ does not lie to compel restoration. Where a plaintiff in mandamus seeks to be restored to his seat, it is not sufficient to show that he is an officer de facto merely; he must show a legal right to that which he demands and upon his failure to do so an award of the writ will be erroneous.⁵⁶ So the writ will not be awarded where defendant has no duty or authority in the premises,⁵⁷ where the relator has not previously made a proper demand for restoration⁵⁸ or has not exhausted his legal remedies, as by

53. People v. Fitz Gerald, 41 Mich. 2, 2 N. W. 179 (holding that where the action of a tribunal in dismissing an officer is by statute final and conclusive the writ of mandamus will not lie to compel the reinstatement of the officer, although he was dismissed without a proper hearing); *Com. v. 55. See Eastman v. Householder, 54 Kan. 63, 37 Pac. 989, holding, however, that there is no necessity for a forcible collision between plaintiff and defendant over the office or possession of the office room, books, etc., before the writ can be awarded.

56. Swartz v. Large, 47 Kan. 304, 27 Pac. 993 (holding that mandamus will not lie to compel one of the members of a board of county commissioners and the county clerk to recognize a person as county commissioner who has had a judgment rendered against him in a contest proceeding instituted by another claimant, an appeal from which was pending, and who has also been ousted from office by a judgment of the district court in proceedings in quo warranto, it appearing also that both claimants had received certificates of election, and had duly qualified); Jefferson County v. Clark, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 82; Allen v. Robinson, 17 Minn. 113 (holding that where a person against whom judgment has been rendered in an election contest is wrongfully in possession of the office pending an appeal, and yields possession thereof to his opponent, in obedience to a writ issued on the judgment, the fact that such writ was irregular will not entitle him to reinstatement by mandamus); *People v. 58. People v. Welde, 61 N. Y. App. Div. 580, 70 N. Y. Suppl. 869, holding that where the relator had begun no action to enforce his reinstatement until after the death of the removing officer, mandamus would not lie applying for a new trial to defendant board,⁵⁹ or where the relator's term of office has expired or will expire before the writ can become effective.⁶⁰ The granting of the writ to reinstate an officer being discretionary, the remedy is barred if the petitioner has unreasonably neglected to enforce his right.⁶¹ No precise definition can be formulated as to what is sufficient to constitute such want of diligence, but at law upon a petition for mandamus, as well as upon an appeal for equitable relief, this question must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case.⁶²

(ii) WHERE OFFICE IS SUBSEQUENTLY FILLED BY ANOTHER. According to the prevailing rule the doctrine allowing the writ of mandamus to compel the restoration of an officer illegally removed applies, although the office is subsequently filled by another, where the office has been filled by proceedings palpably without legal warrant or where the facts before the court or within its judicial knowledge show clearly that the relator who was removed was in office de jure et de facto, and that defendant while claiming to be in de facto can make no claim to be in de jure,⁶³ and especially where it is res judicata that the relator's until a demand had been made upon his successor.

removal from office was illegal.⁶⁴ On the other hand it has been held that mandamus is not the proper remedy to restore an officer to his office which has already been filled under color of law, when the question of title turns upon a construction of statutory provisions which are not entirely clear or unambiguous.⁶⁵

d. Effect of Pendency of Appeal in Quo Warranto or Contest Proceedings. Mandamus has been held not to lie to induct one into office, during the pendency of an appeal in quo warranto or contest proceedings between the relator and the incumbent of the office whether the judgment from which the appeal was taken was rendered against the relator⁶⁶ or in his favor.⁶⁷

e. Decision of Body Upon Its Own Membership. Where by statute a municipal body is made the final judge of the election and qualification of its members its decision upon such question cannot be reviewed by mandamus.⁶⁸ If, however, a municipal body refuses to exercise its duty in this regard, mandamus will lie to compel it to act.⁶⁹

Mo. 117, 45 Am. Dec. 355; Ewing v. Turner, 2 Okla. 94, 35 Pac. 951 (holding that where an incumbent of office is removed by the governor and a successor is thereupon appointed and commissioned and duly qualified as required by law, mandamus will not issue in aid of the original incumbent by going behind the certificate or commission of defendant to inquire into the question whether the governor had exercised the power of removal without authority of law); South Milwaukee Bd. of Education v. State, 100 Wis. 455, 76 N. W. 351.

In New York the rule has been laid down that mandamus is not the proper remedy to restore an officer to an office which has already been filled under color of law when the question of title turns upon a construction of statutory provisions which are not entirely clear or unambiguous. People v. Goetting, 133 N. Y. 569, 30 N. E. 968; Matter of Hardy, 17 Misc. 667, 41 N. Y. Suppl. 469. See also People v. Brush, 146 N. Y. 60, 40 N. E. 502; People v. Lane, 55 N. Y. 217; People v. Rupp, 90 Hun (N. Y.) 145, 35 N. Y. Suppl. 349, 749. And in a later case the rule has been more broadly stated that the writ of mandamus does not lie to restore a person to an office from which he has been illegally dismissed where another person is in the actual possession of the office under color of right, and this, although there is no serious question as to the title of the office. People v. Yonkers Bd. of Police Com'rs, 174 N. Y. 450, 67 N. E. 78, 95 Am. St. Rep. 596. But it has been held that the rule that courts will not at the instance of a person out of the possession of an office try the title thereto by mandamus, but will leave the party to his remedy by writ of quo warranto, has reference to public offices created by law and is not applicable to clerks or employees unlawfully removed from their positions by superior authority. People v. Kearny, 161 N. Y. 648, 57 N. E. 1121 [affirming 44 N. Y. App. Div. 449, 61 N. Y. Suppl. 41]; People v. Hayes, 106 N. Y. App. Div. 563, 94 N. Y. Suppl. 754; People v. McAdoo, 98 N. Y. App. Div. 312, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 689; People v. Hamilton, 98 N. Y. App. Div. 59, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 547 [affirming 44 Misc. 577, 90 N. Y. Suppl.

97]; People v. Sutton, 88 Hun (N. Y.) 173, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 487. Moreover, it has been intimated that under an express statute an honorably discharged soldier or sailor of the United States in the late Civil war who has been improperly removed from office may have a remedy by mandamus for his restoration, although the office has been subsequently filled. People v. Dalton, 158 N. Y. 204, 52 N. E. 1119 [affirming 34 N. Y. App. Div. 6, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 1060, and distinguishing People v. Goetting, 133 N. Y. 569, 30 N. E. 968]. But it has been held that this remedy by mandamus for wrongful removal has not been extended to exempt firemen. People v. Tracy, 35 N. Y. App. Div. 265, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 1070; Matter of Torney, 11 Misc. (N. Y.) 291, 32 N. Y. Suppl. 277 [affirming 7 Misc. 260, 27 N. Y. Suppl. 913, 23 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 333].

8. RESTRAINING PERSON FROM EXERCISING FUNCTIONS OF OFFICE. It is not the proper office of a writ of mandamus to restrain a party claiming to be a public officer from exercising his office, or to enjoin one claiming to have been elected or appointed to an office from qualifying.⁷⁰

9. PREVENTING REMOVAL OR INTERFERENCE WITH DISCHARGE OF OFFICIAL DUTIES. On the principle that the office of a mandamus is not to redress an anticipated evil or wrong, but can be invoked to remedy a wrong which has been suffered, it has been intimated that where no official action has been taken with respect to the abolition of an office or the removal of an incumbent, mandamus will not lie at the instance of the holder of the office to prevent a threatened removal from office.⁷¹ In the same way where a petitioner is in office exercising all the duties and functions thereof, the writ will not lie to prevent an apprehended interference on the part of defendants with the exercise of his official duties, it appearing that there has been no such interference at the time of the issuance of the writ.⁷²

10. SALARIES AND CLAIMS⁷³—a. In General. Mandamus lies to compel the proper authorities to perform their ministerial duties in paying salaries or claims for official services or issuing or signing warrants or orders therefor where the right is clear⁷⁴ and no other adequate remedy is provided by law.⁷⁵ Mandamus

Right held not to be clear.—In the following cases the right was held not to be clear:

California.—Burke v. Edgar, 67 Cal. 182, 7 Pac. 488; Smith v. Kenfield, 57 Cal. 138, where the writ was to compel the drawing of a warrant for a salary larger than allowed by the constitution.

North Dakota.—State v. Albright, 11 N. D. 22, 88 N. W. 729, holding that mandamus will not lie to compel a county auditor to issue a warrant for the salary of a county superintendent of schools where the facts create a well-founded doubt as to the validity of the demand for the salary.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. Lancaster, 5 Watts 152.

Canada.—Rex v. Justices Niagara Dist., Taylor (U. C.) 394.

Issuing separate certificate to employee.—In People v. Hopey, 50 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 380, it was held that the keeper of the state capitol cannot be compelled by mandamus to give a separate certificate to an employee for services in cleaning a portion of the capitol where he has given a general certificate to all the employees, the applicant included, to the state treasurer.

Payment out of specific fund.—Where the statute creates, the conditions occurring, a specific right of an officer to be paid out of a specific fund set apart for the purpose, mandamus lies for the purpose of compelling such payment. Sessions v. Boykin, 78 Ala. 328; Pulaski County v. De Lacy, 114 Ga. 583, 40 S. E. 741.

Where suit is pending before a competent court to determine the amount of salary due to relator, mandamus will not lie to compel the payment of the salary until the sum to be allowed has been adjudicated. Adams v. Hampden County Com'rs, 16 Gray (Mass.) 41.

Where defendant has no authority to draw warrants, the writ will not lie to compel action on his part. Respublica v. Philadelphia County Com'rs, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 181.

Certifying performance of work.—Mandamus lies to compel the secretary of state to perform his ministerial duties in certifying that certain work has been performed by the register of lands for the purpose of determining his compensation. State v. Secretary of State, 33 Mo. 293.

75. Reynolds v. Taylor, 43 Ala. 420.

is the proper remedy to compel payment⁷⁶ or the issuance of a salary warrant⁷⁷ where the salary is fixed by law and the officer charged with the performance of such duties refuses to perform the same. So upon the presentation of a conclusive certificate, warrant, or order, of the proper authority,⁷⁸ or a copy of a resolution equivalent to a warrant,⁷⁹ mandamus lies to compel payment. So where an officer's claim has been allowed and certified by the proper authorities the ministerial duty of issuing or signing a warrant therefor may be enforced by mandamus.⁸⁰ An officer or board whose duty it is to audit and allow claims may be compelled by mandamus to take some action in the premises.⁸¹ But where an officer or board is vested with discretionary powers or final authority in fixing salaries or in auditing or allowing fees or claims for official services or expenses, mandamus will not lie to control the exercise thereof;⁸² and this rule has been applied not only with respect to the determination of the amounts to be allowed on claims but to the rejection of claims or particular items thereof on the ground of the illegality of the charges,⁸³ unless the claims or items were made by statute or some rule of law legal charges, which the auditing power was bound to allow in whole or part.⁸⁴ The writ has been denied for the purpose of compelling the auditing and allowance of an officer's claim where there was another plain, speedy, adequate, or exclusive remedy furnished by law,⁸⁵ or where the auditing power was expressly prohibited from allowing any greater sum than was actually due and the issuance of the mandamus would have the effect of compelling the doing of an unauthorized or forbidden act,⁸⁶ or where the respondent had no authority or duty imposed on him by law to perform the act which it was sought to compel.⁸⁷

b. Effect of Prior Payment to De Facto Incumbent. The rule is laid down that mandamus will not lie to compel the payment of a salary to relator, where payment has already been made to another exercising the functions of the office as a de facto incumbent.⁸⁸ But a different rule has been applied where the appropriation has been exhausted by payment to a person claiming the office de facto but out of possession at the time.⁸⁹

c. Necessity For Appropriation. It has been held that mandamus will not lie to compel the payment of the salary or claim of an officer where no appropriation has been made therefor.⁹⁰ On the other hand it has been held that where there is a general law fixing the amount of a salary and prescribing its payment at particular periods, it is not necessary that there should be a special annual appropriation.⁹¹

d. Where Title to Office Is in Question. The right to an office cannot be determined in a proceeding by mandamus to compel the payment of salary to a person claiming such office,⁹² and hence the writ will not issue to compel the payment of an officer's salary, where at the time the office in question is filled by a de facto incumbent holding under color of right.⁹³ So it is held that until the title of a removed officer has been legally tried and determined, he cannot compel by mandamus the payment of the salary attached to the office,⁹⁴ at least where the office is occupied by a de facto incumbent.⁹⁵ So it is held that to entitle the relator to the writ he must establish his title by proof of an appointment or election as required by law, and the mere fact that he is exercising the functions of the office is not sufficient.⁹⁶ On the other hand the proposition has been laid down

In Michigan it has been held that where a street commissioner was removed from office by a common council having the power to do so, the courts will not review the regularity of the proceedings on application for mandamus to compel the city to pay his salary, and that on such application the court will not presume that there was not some person performing the duties of the office against whom quo warranto proceedings might have been instituted. Hartwig v. Manistee, 134 Mich. 615, 96 N. W. 1067.

Salary of employee illegally discharged.—

The writ of mandamus cannot be used to compel a municipality to pay damages for its illegal discharge of an employee, especially where during the interval of his discharge the salary was paid to a de facto incumbent of the office. McDonald v. Newark, 58 N. J. L. 12, 32 Atl. 384.

Where one's unfitness for an official position from which he has been summarily removed is conceded, he cannot invoke the aid of the discretionary writ of mandamus to exact payment of salary for a period succeeding his discharge, even though his removal may have been illegal because without opportunity for hearing and defense. McQueen v. Detroit, 116 Mich. 90, 14 N. W. 387.

96. Burke v. Edgar, 67 Cal. 182, 7 Pac. 488.

that the rule that quo warranto is the proper remedy to try title to an office will not prevent resort to a proceeding by mandamus to compel payment of an officer's salary in which his right to the office is incidentally involved, where there is no other claimant or occupant of the office whom it is necessary to oust.⁹⁷

11. PENSIONS. Where a pension board or other proper tribunal which hears and determines applications for pensions for municipal officers, such as policemen or firemen, performs not merely a ministerial but a quasi-judicial duty, or where its decision on such applications is final and conclusive, mandamus lies to compel it to take some action upon an application;⁹⁸ but not to control the exercise of its discretionary powers,⁹⁹ and in no case will the writ be granted where it is not shown that the relator was clearly entitled to the pension.¹

12. PLACE OF HOLDING OFFICE. Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel a public officer to maintain his office at the place prescribed by law.² Upon a change in the location of a county-seat, it would seem that the removal of the officers to the new county-seat may be compelled by mandamus.³ In answer to mandamus to compel the removal of his office, a county officer may assert that there has not been a legal removal of the county-seat.⁴

D. Elections and Proceedings Relating Thereto⁵—1. IN GENERAL. Officers charged with the conduct of elections and with the ascertainment and promulgation of the results thereof may be compelled by mandamus proceedings to perform specific ministerial duties imposed upon them by law.⁶ The same rule has been applied for the purpose of compelling the proper officials of nominating

In California it has been held under statute that a person holding a certificate of election or commission of office and discharging the duties of the office is entitled to mandamus to compel payment of his salary, although a contest for the office is pending. *Wilson v. Fixing amount of compensation.—In Ramsay v. Hayes, 187 N. Y. 367, 80 N. E. 193, it was intimated that mandamus will lie to compel a fire commissioner, who has erred in the first instance in making a determination as to the amount of compensation to which a retired fireman was entitled, to make a right determination.

2. APPORTIONMENT OR DIVISION OF ELECTION DISTRICTS. Where the proper authorities have made an apportionment or division of assembly or election districts, requiring the exercise of judgment and discretion, they cannot be required by mandamus to make another apportionment or division,¹⁰ unless the apportionment or division as made so far disregards the law as prescribed by constitutional or statutory provisions as to warrant the court in saying that it is no apportionment and should be treated as a nullity.¹¹

3. REGISTRATION OF VOTERS. There is some conflict of authority on the question whether mandamus will lie to compel registration officers to place the names of qualified voters on the election lists, it being held in some jurisdictions that the writ will be awarded where it is clear that the petitioners were duly qualified and all the formalities prescribed for a proper application have been complied with,¹² while in other jurisdictions the writ has been denied on the ground that its issuance would interfere with the discretion and judgment vested in the registration officers.¹³ The writ will not be granted where there has been no default on the part of the proper officer, as where there has been no prior application and refusal,¹⁴ where the application for the writ is made by an individual not in his Calling a special election to fill a vacancy may, it has been held, be compelled by mandamus. Hanna v. Rahway, 33 N. J. L. 110; People v. Brooklyn, 77 N. Y. 503, 33 Am. Rep. 659; People v. Whitestone, 71 Hun (N. Y.) 188, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 532. Compare People v. Santa Barbara County, 14 Cal. 102.

A writ for a new election lies when the person who has been chosen at the original election is ineligible (Reg. v. Pembroke, 8 Dowl. P. C. 302, 4 Jur. 317; Rex v. Bedford, 1 East 79), or where the original election was merely colorable and clearly void (Rex v. Salford, Burr. S. Cas. 516). But where a de facto incumbent is in possession of the office under an election which is not clearly void, the writ will not lie to compel the calling of a new election, until a vacancy is first established by quo warranto. Rex v. Bankes, 3 Burr. 1452, W. Bl. 445; Reg. v. Cornwall, 25 U. C. Q. B. 293.

Compelling restoration of names to petition.—Where a board of county commissioners illegally strikes from the petition for the removal of a county-seat the names of electors, so that the number remaining is reduced below the minimum required for a valid petition, mandamus will lie to compel a restoration of the names to the petition. State v. Geib, 66 Minn. 266, 68 N. W. 1081. Compare State v. Nemaha County, 10 Nebr. 32, 4 N. W. 373.

The fixing of the time for holding an election requires the exercise of discretion and is therefore an act not reviewable by the court on a petition for mandamus, unless there has been an abuse of discretion. State v. Pawtucket, 18 R. I. 350, 27 Atl. 449.

be submitted to electors.²⁵ Indeed mandamus has been awarded to compel municipal authorities to refrain from submitting a question to electors in pursuance of an unconstitutional statute.²⁶

6. ANNOUNCEMENT OF CANDIDACY. A chairman of a county committee of a regularly organized political party has been held to be an officer so that mandamus may lie directing him to perform the ministerial duty of announcing the name of a candidate for nomination for office.²⁷

7. CERTIFYING NOMINATIONS. While the issuance of a certificate of nomination by a canvassing board is a ministerial act when the fact of nomination has been ascertained yet the ascertainment of the fact of nomination is an exercise of judicial duty which will not be controlled by mandamus.²⁸ Where the chairman and secretary of a nominating convention are the proper officers to execute certificates of nomination, such execution may be compelled by mandamus.²⁹

8. FILING TICKETS AND MAKING UP BALLOTS. Mandamus will lie to compel the proper officer to perform the clear ministerial duty of filing a ticket regularly nominated by an organized party,³⁰ or placing upon the official ballot the names of persons regularly nominated,³¹ evidenced by a certificate of nomination in due form.³² So the writ will lie to compel the arrangement of the party names on the ballot in accordance with the requirements of law,³³ unless a discretion in this respect is conferred by law upon the officer charged with the preparation of the

In West Virginia it has been held upon an application for mandamus to compel the ballot commissioners to place the petitioner on the ballot, thus reversing the action of the commissioners, that section 89, chapter 3 of the code, as reenacted in chapter 25, acts of 1893, in cases involving duties of ballot commissioners, gives the writ of mandamus more scope than at common law, rendering it a process to control them as to all actions ministerial or judicial. Marcum v. Lincoln County, etc., Ballot Com'rs, 42 W. Va. 263, 26 S. E. 281, 36 L. R. A. 296. See also Harmison v. Ballot Com'rs, 45 W. Va. 179, 31 S. E. 394, 41 L. R. A. 591.

In passing upon the sufficiency of a certificate of nomination it is held that the board of supervisors does not exercise a clear ministerial function but makes inquiry into and passes judgment upon questions of law and fact, and this discretion cannot be controlled by mandamus. Duvall v. Swann, 94 Md. 608, 51 Atl. 617.

33. Baker v. Wayne County Bd. of Election Com'rs, 110 Mich. 635, 68 N. W. 752, holding, however, that in order that the writ may lie to assign a certain position on the ballot official ballot.³⁴ So the writ has been granted to compel the omission of the names of certain candidates in preparing ballots.³⁵ But where the petitioner is not clearly entitled to have his name placed upon the ballot,³⁶ or where, as for instance after the election has taken place, the writ would be fruitless and nugatory,³⁷ the writ will not be awarded.

9. APPOINTMENT OF ELECTION OFFICERS.³⁸ Mandamus will lie to compel the proper officials to meet and appoint election officers in accordance with the requirements of law.³⁹ But when the duty of appointing election officers involves the exercise of judgment and discretion, mandamus will not lie to control this discretion,⁴⁰ unless such discretion has been abused.⁴¹

10. COUNTING BALLOTS AND MAKING RETURNS. Mandamus lies to compel inspectors or judges of election to convene and perform their duties in counting ballots⁴² and making returns⁴³ in accordance with statute. On the other hand it has been held that after the ballots have been counted, sealed up, and delivered to the proper custodian and the election inspectors or judges have thus become functus officio, they cannot be compelled by mandamus to reassemble and count ballots rejected by them.⁴⁴ So where in counting ballots the inspectors are vested with to a party ticket, it must clearly appear that the party ticket is entitled to this position.

In New York by section 114 of the Election Law provision is made for a judicial investigation by mandamus proceedings of ballots which according to the statements of the inspectors were objected to as marked for identification or which were rejected by the inspectors as void. Hearst v. Woelper, 183 N. Y. 274, 76 N. E. 28. But it has been held that section 114 of the Election Law has reference only to an investigation of the ballots which have not been placed in sealed boxes, and that section 84 to the effect that in canvassing the vote on election day the sum of the votes appearing on the tally sheet must equal the number of ballots shown by the ballots subsequently returned; "and if it does not there has been a mistake in the count and the ballots must be recounted for said office," neither expressly nor impliedly authorizes the court, subsequent to an election, to compel by mandamus the opening of the boxes and a recount of the votes. Hearst v. Woelper, 183 N. Y. 274, 284, 76 N. E. 28 [reversing 110 N. Y. App. Div. 346, 96 N. Y. Suppl. 341, distinguishing Matter of Stewart, 155 N. Y. 545, 50 N. E. 51, and overruling Matter of Stiles, 69 N. Y. App. Div. 589, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 278] (where it was said: "Some finality of action on the part of the election board was intended and the power to review appears to be confined to the decision upon ballots rejected as void, or as marked for identification, (sec. 114), leaving any further examination of the ballots, which have been counted without objection and sealed up, to be made in the proceeding instituted by a defeated candidate to try the title of his successful opponent to the office"); *People v. Where there has been a failure of a town-clerk to post and publish notice that the local option question would be submitted to the electors as required by statute, mandamus will not issue requiring the board of inspectors to reconvene and reject all ballots received a discretion mandamus will not lie to control this discretion by compelling them to correct an alleged miscount.⁴⁵

11. DECIDING TIE BY LOT. Mandamus lies to compel the proper election officers to determine a tie vote by casting lots when this duty is imposed upon them by statute.⁴⁶

12. CANVASS OF RETURNS. Mandamus will lie to compel the board of canvassers or other proper officials to discharge their ministerial duties in canvassing votes or returns.⁴⁷ And it has been held that the canvassers cannot set up as a defense irregularities or frauds in the conduct of the election however gross or monstrous in their character.⁴⁸ On the other hand it is held that the writ will not lie where by them for or against the question. Matter of O'Hara, 63 N. Y. App. Div. 512, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 613. It has been held that mandamus will not lie under this statute to compel the board of inspectors of a town meeting to reassemble and recount ballots cast for supervisors at a town-meeting in the manner prescribed by the General Election Law, since the General Election Law is not applicable to town meeting unless specially made so by the town law. In re Larkin, 163 N. Y. 201, 57 N. E. 404 [reversing 46 N. Y. App. Div. 366, 61 N. Y. Suppl. 597].

will the writ be granted where its issuance would be useless and the position of the petitioner would not be affected thereby.⁵³

13. RECANVASS. Although there is authority to the contrary⁵⁴ the prevailing rule seems to be that after canvassers have made one canvass, declared the result, and adjourned, they may be compelled by mandamus to reassemble and make a correct canvass of the returns where it appears that upon the first canvass they neglected or refused fully to perform their duty.⁵⁵ But the writ will not issue in a case where its effect would be to control the exercise of discretion vested in the board,⁵⁶ or to compel the performance of an act not authorized and enjoined by law;⁵⁷ where quo warranto⁵⁸ or a statutory writ of contest or other proceeding at law affords a specific adequate remedy;⁵⁹ or where the result would not be changed by the recount and the writ would be ineffectual to give petitioner any relief,⁶⁰ or the term of office to which the petitioner claims election has expired;⁶¹ or, it has been held, where a commission has been issued to the person declared elected⁶² or he has qualified and entered upon the duties of his office.⁶³ So the writ has been denied where the canvassers have not refused to canvass the votes but propose to make a canvass on a day to which they have adjourned,⁶⁴ or where the object of the application for the writ was to compel a second canvass on the ground that the original canvass was not made by the officers authorized by law.⁶⁵

14. DECLARING RESULTS AND CERTIFYING ELECTION. It is very generally held that certifying or declaring the results of an election is a ministerial duty which may be compelled by mandamus,⁶⁶ and this, it has been held, although the refusal to act was on the grounds of fraudulent voting.⁶⁷ As a general rule mandamus will lie to compel canvassing boards or other proper authorities to perform the ministerial duty of issuing certificates of election to persons having the greatest number of votes as shown by the returns;⁶⁸ and in a number of cases where the certificate was arbitrarily withheld on account of alleged facts which the canvassers had no jurisdiction to investigate, the courts have compelled the certifying officer or officers to issue a certificate to an individual by name;⁶⁹ and it has been held to be no defense that a certificate has already been issued to another Validity of election as condition precedent.—In State v. Malheur County Ct., 46 Oreg.

519, 81 Pac. 368, it was held that mandamus would not be awarded to compel the county court to declare the result of a local option election where proper preliminary proceedings sufficient to constitute a valid election were not shown.

Preventing record of vote.—In Gayle v. Owen County Ct., 83 Ky. 61, it was held that mandamus is the proper remedy to prevent the clerk and judge of the county court from recording the vote upon a "local option" law, if the law is unconstitutional.

Mandamus will not lie to compel a canvasser to assent to and certify the result of a recount of ballots as found by another canvasser, although both were present at it, if they disagree as to such result, and the unwilling one says it is not an adequate, correct, true recount. *Dent v. Prohibition of declaration of result.—In State v. Coahoma County, (Miss. 1887) 3 So. 143, upon an application for a writ of prohibition and mandamus to prohibit a board of supervisors from declaring the result of an election for the removal of a county-seat, because of alleged frauds and irregularities and that the board might be commanded to order a legal election on the subject, it was held that it was not allowable in such proceeding to inquire into the qualification of electors and the legality of the election, as affected by matters not apparent on the face of the returns.

68. See ELECTIONS, 15 Cyc. 386, text and note 13.

Where two men are returned as elected, to county commissioners, and they are required to select one of them, mandamus will not lie to direct who shall be selected and receive the precept, if it is doubtful who is elected. Com. v. Philadelphia Com'rs, 2 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 220.

69. See ELECTIONS, 15 Cyc. 387, text and note 15.

person,⁷⁰ although the latter proposition has been denied.⁷¹ On the other hand it is held that the writ will not be granted upon the application of an individual ineligible to hold office,⁷² or claiming to be elected under an unconstitutional law,⁷³ or where the election to fill the office was without authority of law,⁷⁴ although the board of canvassers act ministerially and have no power to institute an inquiry as to the eligibility of candidates or the validity of the election. So the writ will not lie to compel the issuance of a certificate of election unless it appears that the applicant received the highest number of votes.⁷⁵ Nor will the writ lie against an officer not required by law to issue a certificate of election,⁷⁶ or where defendant is vested with a discretion in the premises.⁷⁷ It has been held that the writ will not be granted without a previous application to the canvassers,⁷⁸ unless the court is convinced that such application would not be availing.⁷⁹

15. ELECTION CONTESTS. Mandamus lies to compel municipal officers to proceed with the trial of a municipal election contest and to perform the ministerial duties devolving upon them in such contest.⁸⁰ Persons selected to take evidence in an election contest may be compelled by mandamus to proceed.⁸¹

16. INSPECTION OF ELECTION RECORDS. Mandamus lies to compel the inspection of the lists of registered voters and other public election records,⁸² unless it appears that the granting of the writ will be fruitless, nugatory, and serve no useful legal purpose.⁸³ But so much of the records as relate to the preparation and printing of the official ballots prescribed by law, the certification of the same, and their distribution to the judges of election has been held not to be a public record open to the inspection of the ordinary citizen or voter and hence its inspection cannot be compelled by mandamus.⁸⁴

E. Duties of Particular Officers — 1. IN GENERAL. Mandamus will not ordinarily be used to interfere with the details of municipal administration,⁸⁵ or to conduct or operate as a general supervision over municipal officers.⁸⁶ As has already been noted it will lie only to enforce a duty which results from an office, trust, or station,⁸⁷ and is prescribed by law,⁸⁸ and it will not lie against an individual,⁸⁹ nor, in general, against an officer who has ceased to be such.⁹⁰ Nor will it issue where it would be to no purpose.⁹¹

2. MAYOR OR OTHER CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER. A ministerial duty of the mayor or other chief executive officer of a municipal corporation may be enforced by mandamus.⁹² Thus where he has no discretion or veto power he may be compelled to sign an ordinance.⁹³ Where a discretion is reposed in the mayor of a municipality, the manner in which it shall be exercised cannot be controlled by mandamus;⁹⁴ and the council cannot by its action make mandatory a duty which, under the statute imposing it, is discretionary.⁹⁵

3. OFFICERS OF COMMON COUNCILS. Performance of ministerial duties by the officers of a common council may be enforced by mandamus.⁹⁶ So the president of a city council may be compelled to sign an ordinance where such duty is mandatory.⁹⁷ But mandamus will not issue to compel a village clerk to attend meetings of the village council.⁹⁸ An official stenographer may be compelled to furnish a transcript of the evidence had at a hearing before a council.⁹⁹

4. POLICE OFFICERS. Mandamus will not issue to compel performance of a duty by police officers when there is another adequate remedy,¹ as by removal of the officer.² Where, however, there is no other adequate remedy mandamus will school authorities, the writ will not lie to control the exercise thereof. Moreover, in the absence of any showing of right on the part of township school authorities to build a school-house on land not belonging to the township, the writ will not be granted to compel its location on such land notwithstanding that the county examiner on appeal had rendered a decision to that effect.¹⁴ The writ will not lie to compel a township trustee to furnish school facilities at a particular place where there is an adequate remedy by appeal to the county superintendent of schools.¹⁵

3. REMOVAL OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS. Mandamus will not lie to compel school authorities to remove a school to another location where the effect of the issuance of the writ would be to control the exercise of their discretionary powers;¹⁶ but the duty of school authorities to remove a school building¹⁷ or to restore it to its original location after removal,¹⁸ in obedience to the decision of the superintendent of public instruction, may be enforced by mandamus.

4. CHANGE OF BOUNDARIES. Mandamus lies to compel the proper authorities to perform not only purely ministerial duties in respect to changing the boundaries of school-districts;¹⁹ but in accordance with the general rules to compel them to Centralization of schools.—In State v. Chester Tp., 25 Ohio Cir. Ct. 424, it was held that where a board of education has proceeded in good faith to centralize schools of the township, its discretion with respect to the manner of doing it cannot be controlled by mandamus, although its judgment may be faulty. In State v. Colebrook Tp. Bd. of Education, 24 Ohio Cir. Ct. 383, it was held that a writ of mandamus will not be issued to compel the board of education to proceed to centralize schools, when it is not shown that there are sufficient funds in the treasury to provide the necessary building or buildings to accommodate the centralized schools.

Temporary removal of school.—Where a school-district voted to have a school kept all the ensuing season in a room furnished for the purpose half a mile from the school-house which would accommodate a large portion of the children and the district had the school so kept, although the required majority did not vote in favor of the proposition, it was held that a writ of mandamus would be denied to compel the school to be kept at the original school-house, where it did not appear there was an attempt to make a permanent change from the place of keeping the school and it was not shown how many of the petitioners had children to send to the school or that those who were taxpayers were in danger of having their taxes increased, and where at the time of the application for the writ the term of the school had half expired and had nearly expired at the time of the hearing. Colt v. Roberts, 28 Conn. 330.

Effect of ordering election on question of removal pending proceedings.—Where the school property and equipment of a school was removed three years prior to the commencement of an action to compel the trustees by mandamus to restore the school to the original district school-house, and the judge continued the case and ordered an election which resulted in approval of the action of the trustees in removing the school, it was held that mandamus should be denied, although the judge had no authority to order such election and the same was irregular; it being held that in this way the same result is reached as if the court had by mandamus required the trustees to move the school back to the same place and then an election had been held and it had been decided to move to a new site. State v. Marshall, 13 Mont. 136, 32 Pac. 648.

Renting school-house.—Where school directors are vested with discretion in causing a school to be taught in a rented house instead of a public school building, their action in so doing cannot be reviewed by mandamus. Scripture v. Burns, 59 Iowa 70, 12 N. W. 760.

Filing resolution accepting provision of act for separate school-district.—In Com. v. James, 135 Pa. St. 480, 19 Atl. 950, it was held that the writ lies to a clerk of court to compel the filing of resolutions of boards of school directors accepting the provisions of an act constituting certain cities separate school-districts.

The recording of the description of the boundaries of a school-district as defined by the election in a book kept by the county superintendent of schools is held to be a ministerial duty, which may be enforced by mandamus. People v. Vanhorn, (Colo. App. 1904) 77 Pac. 978.

exercise,²⁰ although not to control,²¹ their discretion in the premises. The writ will not lie for this purpose where there is an adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law.²²

5. EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS AND ISSUANCE OF CERTIFICATES. While mandamus will lie to compel school superintendents or proper authorities to examine teachers and to act upon an application for a teacher's certificate,²³ it will not lie to control the discretionary powers of such officers in granting or withholding certificates,²⁴ unless they act arbitrarily and in abuse of their discretion.²⁵ Nor will the writ lie where another adequate remedy is provided by law.²⁶ Where, after grading a teacher, a board of examiners have no further discretion, it may be compelled by mandamus to issue a certificate of the grade to which the petitioner is entitled, although they could not by mandamus have been compelled to give the teacher any particular grade.²⁷

6. APPOINTMENT OF TEACHERS. The discretion vested by law in school authorities as to the persons whom they shall employ as teachers cannot be controlled by mandamus.²⁸ And where a discretion is vested in school authorities to approve or disapprove the appointment of a teacher to a position in a public school, it cannot be controlled by mandamus.²⁹ But where the duty of approving and filing the contract is purely ministerial, it is enforceable by mandamus.³⁰ So where the right of a person under a contract to teach in the public schools has been determined on appeal by the state superintendent of instruction, mandamus lies to compel an inferior school-board to recognize the contract.³¹

7. REINSTATEMENT OF TEACHERS. The rule has been laid down by several authorities that mandamus lies to restore a teacher to a position in a public school from which he had been unlawfully removed;³² and since the position of teacher

But where the board of education is authorized by law to "establish the text-books to be used" in the schools, its action in that behalf cannot be controlled by mandamus.⁴⁵

10. PROHIBITING SECTARIAN INSTRUCTION. The writ of mandamus has been awarded to compel the proper school authorities to prohibit the giving of sectarian instruction in the public schools in violation of the constitution.⁴⁶ On the other hand, the writ has been denied on the ground that its issuance would be ineffectual,⁴⁷ or that it did not appear that the petitioner had demanded of the authorities the performance of a duty sought to be enforced.⁴⁸

11. FISCAL MATTERS RELATING TO SCHOOLS—a. Meeting of directors of old and new districts to agree upon division of assets.—In Case v. Blood, 68 Iowa 486, 27 N. W. 470, it was held that mandamus will not lie to compel the directors of an old school-district and a new one carved out of it to meet together to effect a division of funds, when the evidence shows that they had met repeatedly as required by statute, but were unable to agree. But mandamus will lie to compel the appointment of arbitrators in such case. Case v. Blood, 71 Iowa 632, 33 N. W. 144.

Where a school-district organization was legally dissolved by the acts of the voters in pursuance of statute, such fact may be alleged in the return to a writ of mandamus as a defense or bar to the claim of right, on the part of the pretended or de facto school-district treasurer of such district to draw school money from the county treasury. *State v. damus does not lie to control this discretion. Where it does not appear that the conditions precedent for the making of a legal apportionment have been performed, as for instance that defendant has received the statistical report as to the number of children of school age residing in the school-districts,⁵⁶ or where there is another adequate remedy at law,⁵⁷ the writ will not lie to compel an apportionment. So the writ will not lie to compel an appropriation for school purposes unless the authorities having the power to make requisition therefor do so in the proper manner and at the proper time.⁵⁸ Nor will the writ lie to compel the setting aside by an officer of any moneys for school purposes until he has collected them.⁵⁹

b. Allowance and Payment of Claims—(i) IN GENERAL. Where the school authorities vested with discretion in the allowance of claims refuse to consider or act upon a claim either by allowing or disallowing it, mandamus lies to compel them to act upon the claim,⁶⁰ but not to compel an allowance of the claim or the issuance of an order therefor or otherwise to control their discretion in the premises,⁶¹ unless the action of the school authorities in refusing is arbitrary and capricious.⁶² So the writ will not lie where there is another adequate remedy at law.⁶³ Nor will it be awarded to compel the payment of a claim where its amount has not been determined by the proper officer as required by law.⁶⁴

(ii) PAYMENT OF TEACHERS' SALARIES. The proposition has been laid down that mandamus is the proper remedy by which a public school-teacher to whom compensation for his services is due may obtain payment thereof out of the funds provided by law for that purpose.⁶⁵ The writ has been allowed to compel the payment of a teacher's salary in obedience to an order drawn by the proper officials directing its payment,⁶⁶ or where the claim has been submitted to and recognized as valid by a tribunal lawfully authorized to pass upon it.⁶⁷ So it has been held that the ministerial duty of issuing or countersigning a warrant for a

Application of tuition fees.—In State v. Coopridge, 96 Ind. 279, it was held that the duty of the trustee of a school township to apply the tuition funds of the township, when received, to the payment of its indebtedness for tuition may be enforced by the writ of mandate.

Compelling collection of money to pay salary.—In State v. Davis, 17 Minn. 429, it was held that mandamus will not lie in favor of a teacher to compel the treasurer of a school-district to demand and receive from the county treasurer the moneys in his hands due the district, when the only demand upon such treasurer of the school-district was to pay an order by the trustees on such treasurer.

Cincinnati Bd. of Police Com'rs*, 7 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 326, 2 Cinc. L. Bul. 114 (where a teacher's salary,⁶⁸ or issuing a requisition upon a warrant,⁶⁹ may be compelled by the writ. On the other hand, in several cases the writ has been denied to compel the payment of the salaries of teachers on the ground that there was another adequate remedy provided by law,⁷⁰ that the duty was discretionary,⁷¹ that there was no duty on the part of defendant in the premises,⁷² or that there was no demand made upon the school authorities for the salary prior to the application for the writ.⁷³

c. Assessment and Levy of School Taxes. Where a discretion is vested in a board of education on the question of levying or determining and certifying the amount to be levied this discretion cannot be controlled by mandamus.⁷⁴ So where the school authorities are authorized merely to give notice of the amount required for school purposes to the proper authorities who are vested with a discretion in determining what amount of taxes is necessary to be levied, the writ will not lie to compel the making of a levy sufficient to raise the amount reported by the school authorities.⁷⁵ But where the municipal or other proper authorities are required to raise by taxation for school purposes such sums as shall be deemed needful by the board of education, the duty of the levying body is ministerial and may be compelled by mandamus.⁷⁶ The writ will not lie where its issuance would work injustice or introduce confusion and disorder,⁷⁷ where the time for making a levy has passed and the writ would be unavailing,⁷⁸ where the school judgment in a court of law had been obtained against the township board of education, but a levy upon school property was forbidden by statute); Harkness v. Hutcherson, 90 Tex. 383, 38 S. W. 1120 (mandamus to enforce collection of judgment).

Approval of vouchers.—In Singleton v. Austin, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 44, 65 S. W. 686, it was held that where a school-teacher was employed under a statute authorizing school trustees to employ teachers, an action to compel the approval of vouchers issued in payment, brought on the theory that the teacher was prevented from teaching by the action of the trustees themselves could be maintained against the county superintendent of schools without alleging that the teacher appealed to the trustees from the action of the superintendent in refusing to permit the petitioner to teach. But in Plummer v. Gholson, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 44 S. W. 1, it was held that a writ of mandamus should not issue to compel a county superintendent of schools to approve a voucher for the salary of a teacher who has not first exhausted all remedies provided by the school law by appealing to the state superintendent.

H. Official Newspapers. An official may be compelled to exercise his discretion with regard to the selection of an official newspaper⁸⁸ or to perform ministerial duties with reference to such selection;⁸⁹ but the exercise of a discretion intrusted to him cannot be controlled.⁹⁰ Mandamus will not lie to compel an officer to publish his official advertisements in a particular paper unless he is so required by law;⁹¹ but where such a duty is imposed by law it may be so enforced,⁹² and an official newspaper may compel the proper officer to publish an advertisement as required by law,⁹³ and may also enforce payment therefor.⁹⁴

I. Franchises. A corporation having a clear legal right to a franchise may, it seems, enforce such right by mandamus;⁹⁵ but where a lawful discretion is vested in a municipal council to grant or to withhold a franchise, such discretion cannot be directly or indirectly destroyed or limited by a writ of mandamus.⁹⁶

discretion vested in the municipal authorities must not be arbitrarily exercised,⁹⁹ nor may such officers impose conditions not imposed by law.¹ In case they refuse to exercise their discretion they may be compelled by mandamus.² The duty of officers to grant licenses under some statutes, however, has been held merely ministerial and enforceable by mandamus when the relator has shown a clear right.³ In mandamus to procure the issuance of a license, where the relator has paid the fee demanded and taken the license, he is not entitled to a writ to the officer to whom payment is made for the return of such portion of the fee as is in excess of the legal amount, although the payment was made under an order of court, there being no legal authority for such an order.⁴

2. MARRIAGE LICENSES. The issue of a marriage license cannot be compelled unless all statutory conditions are complied with.⁵

3. REVOCATION OF LICENSE. A revocation of a license will not be compelled by mandamus except in a case of clear duty.⁶

K. Building Permits. While it has been held that the duty of the proper officer to issue a building permit, where the requirements of the statutes or municipal ordinances have been complied with, is ministerial and that mandamus will issue to enforce it,⁷ it would seem that where the officer must determine the propriety of the issuance of such a permit, his duty is rather to be regarded as discretionary, and hence will not be controlled;⁸ and in any event the writ will not issue unless the relator establishes a clear legal right,⁹ or in a case where his right depends upon the decision of controverted facts demanding the exercise of a judicial discretion.¹⁰

L. Fisheries. The general rules governing mandamus control the issuance of the writ to enforce duties with regard to fisheries.¹¹ So a discretion vested in particular officers as to the licensing¹² or location¹³ of oyster-beds cannot be controlled, but the performance of ministerial acts with relation thereto may be compelled.¹⁴

as to the relief of a pauper cannot be controlled by mandamus,¹⁵ nor will the writ issue to interfere with a discretion reposed in commissioners of the poor unless such discretion has been abused,¹⁶ although such officers may be compelled to perform ministerial duties.¹⁷ Mandamus may be properly employed to compel overseers of the poor to obey an order of relief¹⁸ or to enforce an order of removal.¹⁹ Where an officer has expended money without authority of law he cannot compel reimbursement.²⁰

N. Public Contracts — 1. IN GENERAL. A purely ministerial duty imposed upon public officers with regard to municipal contracts may be enforced by mandamus;²¹ but where a discretion is vested, the execution of an agreement or the taking of steps toward the consummation thereof will not be compelled,²² and where a discretion with regard to a public contract has been exercised it will not be reviewed.²³ So a contractor cannot by mandamus compel the execution of a contract which a city has declined to proceed with.²⁴ In any event mandamus will not lie to compel the making of a public contract in the absence of a clear duty;²⁵ and where there is no duty on the part of an officer to enter into a contract he cannot be compelled to execute evidence of such contract.²⁶ Where a street improvement contract has been repudiated by the city the contractor has no right to enforce the performance by the municipal officers of acts preliminary to the execution of the contract.²⁷

3. BONDS, DEPOSITS, AND OTHER CONDITIONS PRECEDENT. A bidder cannot compel the letting of a contract to him where he has not complied with conditions precedent³⁸ or where conditions precedent to the valid letting of the contract have not been performed.³⁹ Where an unlawful condition has been required in a contractor's bond he may by mandamus compel the acceptance of a bond omitting such condition.⁴⁰ Where a contractor has made a deposit as security for the performance of a contract he cannot by mandamus compel a return of such deposit in case the result would be to control the discretion of an officer as to the fact of satisfactory performance.⁴¹

4. ENFORCEMENT — a. In General. Mandamus is not a proper remedy to compel municipal or public corporations to perform specifically their ordinary business contracts,⁴² or to enforce an illegal contract.⁴³

b. Payment of Contract Price.⁴⁴ Where a municipal corporation has legally contracted for certain work to be done, and to be paid for in a certain specified way, the corporation may, on the completion of the work, be compelled by mandamus to carry out the stipulations as to payment contained in the contract.⁴⁵ Mandamus for this purpose will not issue, however, where there is another adequate remedy;⁴⁶ a clear legal right must exist,⁴⁷ and the contractor must have complied with the contract.⁴⁸ Under these rules, where an officer refuses to perform a ministerial duty essential to the compensation of a contractor, he may be com-

with the duty of performing several acts involving expenditures, and there are no funds available sufficient to permit the performance of all, courts will not ordinarily by mandamus direct the board which act to perform and which to leave unperformed.⁶⁴

2. BRIDGES.⁶⁵ Where the authorities having supervision and control of public bridges are vested with a discretion as to the erection of such bridges, the exercise of their discretion will not be controlled by mandamus.⁶⁶ Mandamus will, however, lie to enforce a specific duty with regard to the erection of a bridge, where it is imposed by law and no discretion is vested.⁶⁷ In a similar case a tax to raise a sum necessary to pay for a bridge may be enforced,⁶⁸ or a writ will lie to compel compliance with a statute requiring a municipality to acquire a toll-bridge and make it free,⁶⁹ or to compel a county to contribute to the expenses incurred by a town in building a bridge,⁷⁰ or conversely to compel a city to contribute to a county.⁷¹ A county cannot, however, be compelled to build a bridge

b. Opening Highways. Where the construction of a highway has been determined upon, ministerial duties thereafter relating thereto may be enforced by mandamus.⁸⁸ So where a highway has been legally established, mandamus will lie to compel the proper authorities to open it,⁸⁹ although not where the location is indefinite,⁹⁰ or there is a question as to its legality,⁹¹ or the highway has been discontinued,⁹² or the officers would be subjected to an action of damages,⁹³ or the officer has no means with which to act.⁹⁴ Where the commissioners are given a discretion they may be compelled to exercise it, although their discretion will not be controlled.⁹⁵ The judgment of the commissioners as to the sufficiency of the construction of the road cannot be reviewed by mandamus.⁹⁶ Where a second road has been laid out between the same termini by the construction of which the public convenience and necessity will be fully satisfied, mandamus will not issue to compel the construction of a road previously laid out.⁹⁷ A specific statutory duty to make alterations in a highway may be enforced by mandamus.⁹⁸ reasonable time after it is laid out.⁹⁹ A mandatory duty to grade¹ or widen² a street imposed by statute may be enforced by mandamus. But as a general rule the improvement³ or the grade⁴ of the street is a matter resting within the discretion of the municipal authorities, and the courts cannot by mandamus compel them to exercise that discretion in any particular direction. A relator whose land has been taken in street opening proceedings may compel the city to acquire the rights necessary to the opening of the entire street.⁵ The fact that the city council has failed to provide funds for the purpose is, it has been held, no defense to mandamus to compel obedience to a judgment abolishing a grade crossing.⁶

(II) SIDEWALKS. A discretion vested in local authorities as to permitting the construction of sidewalks by abutting property-owners cannot be controlled by mandamus.⁷ Where an officer has granted a permit to take up a sidewalk but has imposed an illegal condition, a mandamus ordering the permit to issue without such condition does not review the officer's discretion as to granting it.⁸

d. Determination of Damages. Mandamus will lie to compel the proper authorities to proceed to determine the damages occasioned by the laying out of a highway,⁹ or the opening of a street,¹⁰ or a change of grade;¹¹ but it will not lie

Laches.—Mandamus will not lie to compel city authorities to assess the damages to relator's property from a change of grade in the street in front thereof, where the charter requires such assessment to be made before the grade is changed, and relator, with full knowledge of what was being done, waited until several months after the work was completed before beginning action. State v. Superior, 108 Wis. 16, 83 N. W. 1100.

Grade crossing commissioners may be compelled by mandamus to hear evidence as to damages bearing on the right to the appointment of commissioners to assess such damages. Myer v. Adam, 63 N. Y. App. Div. 540, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 707 [affirmed in 169 N. Y. 605, 62 N. E. 1098].

Speculative and incidental damages.—Mandamus was refused when brought to compel to compel the acceptance of a report as to such damages where the action upon such report is judicial.¹²

e. Payment of Damages. In the absence of other adequate remedy mandamus lies to compel the payment of awards for property taken for highways,¹³ or in street opening proceedings,¹⁴ or upon alteration of a grade;¹⁵ but other special funds cannot be diverted to that purpose,¹⁶ nor can a general fund where provision is made for payment from special assessments.¹⁷

f. Regulation and Care. Mandamus will not lie to compel a city to make a particular regulation as to the use of streets by carriages and hackmen,¹⁸ or to continue a street cleaning department, the funds not being sufficient.¹⁹

g. Use by Public Service Corporations—(i) IN GENERAL. A public service corporation cannot by mandamus enforce a right to make a particular use of city streets unless such right is clear and legal;²⁰ but where such right is clear it may be enforced.²¹

(ii) ERECTION OF ELECTRIC WIRES AND POLES. An imperative duty imposed by law upon municipal authorities to grant permission for the erection of poles officers to consider a claim of a railroad company for the destruction of its station in building an elevated crossing over a street, on the ground that such damage was not the direct result of carrying out the plan, but incidental only. State v. Bridge Commission; 63 Conn. 91, 26 Atl. 580.

In case there is a remedy by appeal mandamus will not lie. Boone County v. State, 38 Ind. 193.

On discontinuance of the highway.—Where the county commissioners laid out a highway and passed the usual orders for making it, and the owner of land over which it was laid out obtained a verdict for his damages, which was accepted by the court of common pleas and certified to the commissioners; but, before the proper time arrived for granting an order on the county treasury for the payment of such damages, measures were taken to discontinue the highway, and soon afterward an order was passed to discontinue it, and the land was never entered upon, and the commissioners refused to give the owner an order for the payment of his damages as found by the verdict, it was held that he had a vested right to such damages, and that he was entitled to a writ of mandamus to the commissioners to compel them to draw an order for the payment thereof. Harrington v. Smedley, 17 Phila. (Pa.) 18, 14 Wkly. Notes Cas. 402 (where it was held that a railroad was not bound to accept a plan by which it should use the tracks of another road).

Approval of bond.—Where permission to use streets for the purpose of laying pipes is conditioned on a satisfactory bond to be given to the city and approved by the municipal officers, such officers may be compelled by mandamus to act with regard to the approval of the bond. State v. Boyce, 43 Ohio St. 46, 1 N. E. 217.

and wires for the conveyance of electricity in the public streets may be enforced by mandamus;²² but a discretion vested in the municipal authorities with regard to the use of streets for such purposes cannot be controlled,²³ although such authorities may be compelled to exercise their discretion and either grant or refuse such permission.²⁴ Where without authority of law a municipal corporation entirely prohibits the erection of overhead wires, a clear legal right to erect such wires may be enforced by mandamus.²⁵

(III) SUBWAYS AND CONDUITS. A corporation having a clear legal right to construct and maintain conduits in the streets of a city for the conveyance of telegraph, telephone, or other electric wires may enforce such right in the absence of any other adequate remedy by mandamus;²⁶ but before a permit to excavate the streets may be compelled, a necessary approval of the proper authorities to the plan of construction must be obtained.²⁷ A writ will not issue in behalf of a particular company while the city is considering a general plan to ground all wires,²⁸ nor where there has been a subway contracted for by the proper municipal authorities, which subway is to be used by all companies authorized to lay wires under ground, where it is not shown that relator cannot obtain space in such subway for the use of any electrical conductor that it may desire to use.²⁹ Mandamus will not be granted a railroad company for the purpose of conferring upon it the right to excavate the streets and construct a subway, where the right of the relator is doubtful and if enforced will threaten serious disturbance and inconvenience with results of doubtful advantage.³⁰

h. Obstructions. Mandamus is a proper remedy to enforce a ministerial duty to remove obstructions from a street or highway,³¹ but it will not lie where the duty is discretionary;³² nor will it issue where there are other adequate

1. Repair. The duty of municipal and highway officers to place and keep the streets and highways under their supervision in repair is usually regarded as ministerial and as such may be enforced by mandamus,³⁶ although the plan and manner of the repairs and the material used may rest in their discretion,³⁷ and collection of a fine or penalty from the officers is not an adequate remedy.³⁸ There must be a clear legal duty.³⁹ The commissioners cannot be ordered to repair in a particular manner,⁴⁰ and where there are no funds the writ will not issue.⁴¹

such buildings is discretionary the decision of the proper authorities will not be controlled;⁴⁵ nor will their discretion as to the character and style thereof,⁴⁶ and mandamus to build a county building will not lie pending proceedings to relocate the county-seat.⁴⁷ A writ to compel submission of the question of the erection of a county building to a vote will be denied where no statute directs such submission;⁴⁸ but mandamus will issue to compel the proper authorities to comply with and make effectual the result of an election sanctioning the purchase of property for the erection of a public building.⁴⁹

7. SEWERS. Mandamus will issue to enforce the right of a property-owner to connect with a public sewer.⁵⁰ Where there is another adequate remedy mandamus will not issue to compel a local authority to repair and maintain a sewer.⁵¹

8. WATERWORKS. Mandamus is the proper remedy to compel the proper municipal authorities to furnish water to a private consumer.⁵² A discretion vested in the municipal authorities as to the regulation of water-rates cannot be controlled by mandamus.⁵³ The issuance of bonds⁵⁴ or a certificate of indebtedness⁵⁵ for the purpose of the construction of waterworks cannot be enforced by mandamus where the action is vested in the discretion of the municipal authorities. Mandamus will issue in a proper case to compel the assessment of damages occasioned by the construction of a public water-supply system.⁵⁶

Public market.—The legislature having authorized and directed the mayor, aldermen, and commonalty of the city of New York to create a public fund or stock, for the erection of a public market, a mandamus will lie to compel the common council to issue the stock; the common council constituting the only agency or instrument by which the behest of the legislature can be obeyed; and a mandamus being the only possible method by which that body can be compelled to act. *People v. municipal corporations may be compelled, under statutes authorizing them to regulate the line of deep water.⁵⁸ But the writ was refused to compel a city to regulate the manner of erecting private wharves, under a directory statute;⁵⁹ and it has been held that mandamus will not lie to compel the issuance of a license to extend a wharf where there is another adequate remedy,⁶⁰ nor to control the discretion of an officer as to wharf regulations.⁶¹

P. Aid to Railroads and Other Corporations. Counties⁶² and other municipal corporations⁶³ are frequently empowered by statute to aid the construction of railroads or other works of internal improvement, by appropriations, donations, or subscriptions to stock;⁶⁴ and a corporation having a clear right to aid under such a statute may enforce it by mandamus.⁶⁵ For example mandamus will issue to enforce a clear right to a stock subscription⁶⁶ or to the issue⁶⁷ or delivery⁶⁸ of aid bonds, or to the levy of a tax for the payment of such bonds or interest thereon, or for the payment of a donation.⁶⁹ Mandamus will not lie, however, to control a discretion vested in public officers,⁷⁰ and will issue to enforce only duties which are specifically imposed by statute.⁷¹ There must have been a previous demand and refusal;⁷² and there must have been a compliance with all conditions precedent, both with regard to the proceedings for the authorization of the aid⁷³

and upon the part of the corporation to perfect its right to such aid.⁷⁴ In case the underlying proceedings are illegal the writ will not issue,⁷⁵ as for example, where the election has been invalid,⁷⁶ and there must be no other adequate remedy.⁷⁷ Mandamus will not issue to compel the payment of a stock subscription when the municipality has been unable to sell the bonds, from the proceeds of which payment is to be made,⁷⁸ nor will it issue to compel submission of the question of aid to a corporation by a township, pending proceedings to divide the township.⁷⁹ It will not lie against an officer to compel him to pay over a fund, unless the fund is actually or presumptively in his hands.⁸⁰ Where a subscription has been voted it has been held that the corporation must compel the completion of such subscription before it performs the work to aid which the subscription is authorized.⁸¹

Q. Appropriation and Apportionment of Funds. A municipal corporation may be compelled by mandamus to perform a specific statutory duty to appropriate and raise a fund for a specific purpose,⁸² but the immediate performance of such a duty will not be compelled where no existing law gives the power or provides the means appropriate.⁸³ So a specific statutory duty imposed upon county commissioners to set apart funds for a specific purpose may be enforced,⁸⁴ or a specific duty of a fiscal officer to transfer funds from one account to another;⁸⁵ but where a discretion is vested in officers as to the apportionment of municipal funds between various departments it will not be controlled,⁸⁶ and an alteration in an apportionment will not be compelled where there is no statutory duty or power to act.⁸⁷ An officer may be compelled to transfer funds in his hands to the proper custodian,⁸⁸ but there must be a clear statutory duty.⁸⁹

R. Deposit of Funds. Mandamus will lie to compel the deposit of public funds in accordance with law.⁹⁰ A bank cannot, however, compel a board of county commissioners to approve its bond as a county depository where the right is not clear.⁹¹

S. Issue of Bonds. A purely ministerial duty to execute and deliver municipal bonds may be enforced by mandamus;⁹² but the writ will issue only whose duty it is to make the payment, must himself, at his own risk, inquire into the validity and the amount of the claim, he cannot be compelled by mandamus to make payment.⁷ A judgment by a court of competent jurisdiction that a certain sum is due from a municipal corporation is usually regarded as an auditing of the claim within the meaning of statutes requiring claims to be audited.⁸

c. Bonds. Where the validity of municipal bonds is not disputed mandamus will lie to compel the proper authorities to make an appropriation for their payment,⁹ or to compel them to perform any duties specifically imposed by law with reference thereto,¹⁰ and a judgment on the bonds need not have first been obtained,¹¹ nor need they have been presented for allowance.¹² So when funds are in the hands of the proper officer payment may be compelled.¹³ But when the validity of bonds or the liability of the municipality is contested, payment will not be compelled until the right has been determined.¹⁴ A contractor cannot enforce bonds issued in payment for an improvement where through his fraud or wrong the work was not done according to contract,¹⁵ and where the bonds are non-negotiable a purchaser has no better right.¹⁶

d. Judgments. Mandamus is usually regarded as a proper remedy to enforce a judgment against a municipal or public corporation¹⁷ in case there is no other

Where officer is directed not to pay.—An order of a county board directing the treasurer not to pay certain bonds issued by the county, and for which money is in his hands, and which it is his duty to pay, is a nullity, and would be no defense to an action against the treasurer for the payment of such money. *State v. Payment of claims in general see infra, VI, U, 6.

Canada.—Re Darby, 19 Ont. 51, holding that writ would lie against health board.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 231.

In the federal courts.—A writ of mandamus in the federal circuit courts is never an independent suit, but is only a proceeding ancillary to the judgment which gives the jurisdiction, and, when issued, becomes a substitute for the ordinary process of execution to enforce the payment of the same as provided in the contract. In the circuit court of the United States there must be a judgment for the recovery of money before there can be a mandamus to levy any tax to pay it, and mandamus is only a form of executing the judgment. Labette County v. U. S., 112 U. S. 217, 5 S. Ct. 108, 28 L. ed. 698; Bath County v. Amy, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 244, 20 L. ed. 539; Lafayette County v. Wonderly, 92 Fed. 313, 34 C. C. A. 360; Fuller v. Aylesworth, 75 Fed. 694, 21 C. C. A. 505; Osborne v. Adams County, 7 Fed. 441, 2 McCrary 97. And see Ex p. Holman, 28 Iowa 88, 4 Am. Rep. 159.

Under the statute in Pennsylvania municipal creditors are given mandamus to compel the payment of judgments. The process is called mandamus-execution, and restrains misappropriation as well as compels payment. It is not the prerogative writ, but in reality an execution. Pollock v. Lawrence County, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,255, 2 Pittsb. (Pa.) 137. The same considerations apply to the statutory mandamus provided for against school-districts. O'Donnell v. Cass Tp. School-Dist., 133 Pa. St. 162, 19 Atl. 358. It is not proper to proceed in the first instance by mandamus to collect a judgment against boroughs, townships, or counties. The proper proceeding is by an execution, obedience to which may be enforced by attachment; and where after such an execution there are no moneys unappropriated out of which the execution can be paid, and the revenues are not any more than is required to defray the current expenses, and the proper municipal officers fail or refuse to assess and collect sufficient taxes for the purpose, mandamus, first in the alternative and then in the peremptory form, may issue to compel them to perform their duty in the premises. Allen v. Dubois Borough, 5 Pa. Dist. 585. See also In re Marcy Tp., 8 Del. Co. (Pa.) 31, 10 Kulp 43, where an order to a creditor to enter satisfaction of a judgment in proceedings to ascertain the indebtedness of a township before issuing mandamus to levy a tax was refused.

Mandamus in action on debt.—In North Carolina it is held that a person may sue to recover a debt from a county and in the same action demand a mandamus for its payment. Fry v. Montgomery County Com'rs, 82 N. C. 304; McLendon v. Anson County Com'rs, 71 N. C. 38.

Dormant judgment.—Where a debt against a municipal corporation has been reduced to judgment in a court of competent jurisdiction, a peremptory mandamus may be properly asked for, although such judgment is dormant. Webb v. Beaufort, 70 N. C. 307.

18. People v. Wood, 2 Abb. Pr. (N. pelled,¹⁹ or the appropriation to its payment of any available funds,²⁰ or the setting aside of surplus revenues.²¹ The writ also lies to compel the record of a judgment against a city.²² It would seem that mandamus will not lie to enforce a part of a judgment which has been assigned.²³

e. Interest. Mandamus will not lie to compel the payment of interest unless the law clearly makes it payable;²⁴ but where there is a clear duty mandamus will lie to compel provision for the payment of interest upon municipal bonds,²⁵ or to compel payment thereof,²⁶ when the validity of the bonds is not disputed.²⁷ Where the amount of interest coupons is definitely fixed by statute their allowance as

21. Mandamus will lie to compel the mayor and city council to set aside any revenues in excess of necessary current expenditures to payment of a judgment against the city, in preference to claims of simple-contract creditors; the writ being in the nature of an execution, without which the fund cannot be reached. Anniston v. Hurt, 140 Ala. 394, 37 So. 220, 103 Am. St. Rep. 45; White v. Decatur, 119 Ala. 476, 23 So. 999. See also Cleveland v. U. S., 111 Fed. 341, 49 C. C. A. 383. The fact that surplus revenues might be less than a judgment against a city is no reason for not granting mandamus to compel city officers to set revenues apart to the extent of the surplus to satisfy the judgment. permit a claim to be amended.⁵⁵ Mandamus to audit will not lie against an officer who is not charged with the duty.⁵⁶

4. CERTIFICATION AND COUNTERSIGNING OF CLAIM OR WARRANT. If an officer is authorized or required to examine and approve a claim, if in his judgment it is just and proper, his power is judicial and mandamus will not lie to compel approval;⁵⁷ but if his duty simply consists in certifying or signing an allowed claim, it is ministerial, especially where there is no other remedy.⁵⁸ So where an officer has refused to countersign a warrant upon reasons outside of his discretion,⁵⁹ or where he claims a discretion as to the certification of the claim where no discretion exists,⁶⁰ he may be compelled by mandamus to act; but there must be a specific legal right.⁶¹ An officer may be compelled to number and record a claim as required by statute.⁶²

Mandamus will lie, however, only in a case where there is a clear right⁶⁴ and after compliance with conditions precedent.⁶⁵ So before the issuance of a warrant the claim must have been allowed as required by law.⁶⁶ Or in case the statute requires a specific direction to be given to the officer such direction must have issued.⁶⁷ There must also have been a proper demand⁶⁸ and a refusal.⁶⁹ In case there is another adequate remedy mandamus will not issue.⁷⁰ The officer can draw his warrant only in favor of the person to whom payment has been ordered.⁷¹ When a warrant has been issued and collected by a person not entitled to the proceeds a writ will not lie to compel a new warrant or the delivery of the old.⁷²

b. In the Absence of Funds. When the creditor has no independent right to a warrant except as an incident to payment it has been held that the issuance of a warrant cannot be compelled where there are no funds applicable to its payment,⁷³

6. PAYMENT — a. In General. Mandamus is a proper remedy to compel payment of a claim against a municipal or public corporation where there are funds generally applicable to its payment,⁷⁵ or to compel payment of a claim against a special fund which is in existence and in the hands of the proper officer.⁷⁶ It will likewise lie to compel provision to be made for the payment of claims,⁷⁷ or to compel the application of funds to warrants in the order of their registration.⁷⁸ An equitable right to secure payment for a particular fund cannot, however, be enforced by mandamus.⁷⁹ Payment of a warrant will not be compelled where any fact remains to be ascertained.⁸⁰ The relator must come into court with clean hands,⁸¹ and where his right is based upon warrants or orders, his ownership thereof must be either admitted or proved.⁸² Mandamus will lie to enforce a mandatory duty imposed upon a board of county commissioners to accept the lowest bid for the surrender of a county indebtedness to be paid out of a specific fund.⁸³

b. Discretion of Officers. A discretion to pay a judgment by levy of a tax or by warrant upon funds in the treasury does not prevent mandamus to compel provision for the judgment in the one of such ways which will be effectual.⁸⁴ A determination by a board of the question of whether a valid judgment exists has been held to be preliminary, and after its determination in favor of the claim the duty to approve it becomes ministerial.⁸⁵

c. Conditions Precedent. Mandamus will not as a general rule lie to compel payment of a claim until it has been properly audited and allowed.⁸⁶ By statute it is frequently provided that a warrant shall be essential to payment,⁸⁷ and in such case mandamus will not lie until a warrant shall have issued as required by the statute.⁸⁸

d. Right of Officer to Contest Claim. As a general rule a disbursing officer cannot pass upon the legality of a claim where it has been allowed by a board or another officer having authority to act in the premises,⁸⁹ except in the case of fraud or mistake.⁹⁰ Where the board or officer had no authority to allow the claim the disbursing officer may refuse payment.⁹¹ So mandamus will not issue mandamus would not issue to enforce the claim of the holder of a judgment recovered on bonds and coupons against a drainage district to money in the hands of the district treasurer based upon the ground that in previous years the treasurer had received coupons from other bondholders in payment of assessments, thereby rendering plaintiff entitled to the whole of the assessment of subsequent years until he had received payments proportional to those of the other bondholders.

Judgment for tort.—A mandamus will not issue to compel payment of a judgment for tort from the general fund when it would result in the diversion of such fund from its proper application to current expenses leaving them to such extent unpaid. *Sherman v. to compel an officer to perform an act which it is beyond his power to perform⁹⁷ has been applied to prevent the issuance of a mandamus to compel the payment of a claim from a fund properly applicable to the indebtedness where such fund has been wrongfully dissipated or diverted.⁹⁸

f. Effect of Stoppage of Payment. Where, after the allowance of a claim, payment thereof has been ordered stopped, a ministerial officer cannot be compelled by mandamus to make such payment,⁹⁹ nor where he has made payment may he be compelled to restore the funds paid out.¹

g. Medium of Payment. Mandamus will not lie to compel payment in funds other than as provided by statute.²

V. Taxation³ — 1. LEVY AND ASSESSMENT — a. Where trust funds have been diverted.—Where a specific fund given to a county by the legislature, to be held in trust for certain purposes, is diverted from that purpose and mixed with the general funds of the county, the court may award a mandamus, to compel such fund to be paid over to the person entitled to it, and to direct an order to be drawn upon the general funds of the county in the treasury. *Pike County Com'r's v. Remedy by appeal.—Mandamus will not lie to correct errors of the county board of equalization as to the liability of property to taxation, where a statute provides a plain and adequate remedy by appeal. State v. Drexel, (Nebr. 1906) 107 N. W. 110.

Certiorari.—Mandamus will not lie to correct an assessment where the law provides an adequate remedy by certiorari to review the assessment. People v. Wells, 110 N. Y. App. Div. 336, 97 N. Y. Suppl. 333.

Inadequate remedy.—Mandamus by a taxpayer to compel the county auditor to enter the assessment as fixed by the boards of assessors and equalization, without regard to an unauthorized increase by the controller-general, is not barred by the fact that there are statutory provisions under which the taxpayer may pay the tax under protest and sue to recover the amount illegally collected, since this remedy, if applicable, is not adequate. State v. Cromer, 35 S. C. 213, 14 S. E. 493. And see State v. Boyd, 35 S. C. 233, 14 S. E. 496.

power is doubtful.²⁵ Nor will the writ be granted where, if issued, it would be unavailing, or where there is no necessity for the relief sought.²⁶ The writ cannot be granted in anticipation of a breach of duty.²⁷

c. Demand and Refusal. Although the general rule is that a demand and a refusal or its equivalent are necessary before applying for mandamus,²⁸ there is an exception in cases where the duty sought to be enforced is of a public nature and there is no one especially empowered to demand its performance,²⁹ and applications for mandamus with respect to the levy and assessment of taxes generally fall within this exception, so that specific demand and refusal are not necessary.³⁰ In any event, neglect or other conduct that is equivalent to a refusal to act renders further demand and refusal unnecessary.³¹

d. Discretion of Officer or Board and Judicial Powers. The writ will not lie to control a discretion vested in an officer or board with respect to the assessment and valuation of property or otherwise,³² or to control or review the exer-

Immediate performance of a duty imposed by statute to levy and collect a special tax will not be required where no existing law gives power or provides machinery appropriate to such immediate performance. State v. Jersey City Bd. of Finance, 53 N. J. L. 62, 20 Atl. 755.

Time and mode of levy.—A statute directing money to be levied by a particular day gives a special authority; and if the time has elapsed, it would be improper to order a mandamus, as there would be no authority under the law, to make the levy. Allegany County Public Schools v. Allegany County Com'rs, 20 Md. 449; Ellicott v. Levy Ct., 1 Harr. & J. (Md.) 359. An order cannot lawfully be made requiring the board of supervisors of a county to levy taxes at any other time or in any other mode than the time and mode prescribed by law. Warren County v. Klein, 51 Miss. 807.

Expiration of period for assessment and levy.—Mandamus to have an assessment corrected will not be granted where both the period for making it and the period for levying the tax have passed, but in such case the remedy is by injunction. Wells v. Hyattsville, 77 Md. 125, 26 Atl. 357, 20 L. R. A. 89.

Adjournment of annual session of board.—But where mandamus proceedings were instituted to compel the Illinois state board of equalization to assess property, it was held that the fact that the board had adjourned its annual session prior to the hearing was not ground for denying the writ, on the theory that its issuance would be barren of practical results, since, under Hurd Rev. St. Ill. (1899) p. 1441, §§ 276, 277, providing that if property be not assessed for any year the amount of the omitted tax may be charged against such property in the assessment for any subsequent year, the successors of the present board might be required to obey the writ. *State Bd. of Equalization v. cise of judicial as distinguished from ministerial powers;³³ but it will lie to compel the exercise of discretion or judicial powers without interfering with such exercise;³⁴ and if there is so gross an abuse of discretion or evasion of duty as to amount to a virtual refusal to perform the act enjoined, or to act at all in contemplation of law, mandamus will afford a remedy.³⁵ An assessor has no right to decide against instructions of the highest executive power of the state as to what kind of property is liable to taxation. After ascertaining the taxable property under such instructions and the value and ownership thereof, his discretion ceases, and it then becomes his clear duty, enforceable by mandamus, to enter the same on his tax book.³⁶ A ministerial tax officer has no discretion to refuse to obey an act of the legislature on the ground that it is unconstitutional.³⁷

e. Property Not Subject to Taxation—(1) COMPPELLING ASSESSMENT. As mandamus is a discretionary writ,³⁸ if it manifestly appears that the property of which it is sought to compel assessment is under the law exempt from taxation, the writ will not be granted,³⁹ even though the executive power of the state has instructed assessors to assess such property on the ground that the statute exempting the same is unconstitutional;⁴⁰ but this is because the court will not involve the citizens in expensive litigation growing out of a clearly illegal tax, and not because an assessor has any right to set up the defense as an excuse for his refusal to obey such instructions, and if the property is not manifestly exempt, the court will grant the writ and leave the constitutionality of the statute to be decided in a proper case on appeal by the taxpayer.⁴¹

(ii) STRIKING FROM ASSESSMENT ROLLS. Mandamus will lie to compel assessors to strike an illegal assessment and tax of exempt property from the assessment rolls, unless some other adequate remedy is provided.⁴²

While a superior court will not control the discretion of an inferior court, yet, where the law imposes upon an inferior court a specific duty to levy a tax, performance of the duty may be compelled by mandamus. Manor v. McCall, 5 Ga. 522.

35. Thus where a person's lands were assessed three hundred per cent higher than lands in the same neighborhood, and the board of commissioners on appeal overruled his objection without consideration and without giving counsel an opportunity to be heard, it was held that there was such an abuse of discretion that mandamus would be awarded to compel a proper review if the board had authority to review assessments. People v. Cook County, 176 Ill. 576, 52 N. E. 334.

Fraudulent assessments.—An assessment by the state board of equalization may be impeached on mandamus and declared void and equivalent to no assessment at all, where it is so low as to clearly show that it is fraudulent. State Bd. of Equalization v. Peo- ple, 191 Ill. 528, 61 N. E. 339, 58 L. R. A. 513. Where such board disregarded all known rules for the valuation of the capital stock and franchises of corporations, and refused to consider the assessor's statements as to their value, and assessed such capital stock at a grossly inadequate sum under erroneous rules of valuation passed for the occasion, it was held that the assessment should be treated as void. State Bd. of Equalization v. People, supra.

Mere colorable action of an officer or board clothed with discretionary power, plainly arbitrary or capricious and evincing a purpose to evade due and faithful performance of duty, constitutes no bar to an application for a writ of mandamus to compel action in good faith; but mandamus will not be awarded for such purpose unless it appears that the officer or board has clearly and wilfully disregarded his or its duty, or that the action was extremely wrong or flagrantly improper and unjust, so that the decision can only be explained as the result of caprice, passion, partiality, or corruption. State v. Bare, (W. Va. 1906) 56 S. E. 390, where the evidence was held insufficient to prove lack of good faith on the part of an assessor for purposes of taxation.

f. Fraudulent Taxes. Since mandamus is a discretionary writ and those who invoke its aid must come into court with clean hands, it will not be issued to accomplish an illegal purpose, as to enforce a fraudulent tax, even though the officer against whom it is invoked is charged with an express duty under the statute.⁴³

g. Returns and Reports. Mandamus will lie to compel an officer to make a return or report of taxes voted, as required by statute.⁴⁴

h. Levy to Pay Judgments, Bonds, or Other Indebtedness — (1) IN GENERAL. Where a statute imposes upon a city, county, levee district, or other municipality, or upon a particular officer, board, or tribunal, a clear legal duty to levy a special tax to pay judgments, bonds, warrants, or other allowed or fixed indebtedness, or interest thereon, or to provide a sinking fund for payment at a future day, mandamus will lie on the relation of a person interested to compel performance of such duty.⁴⁵ It is well settled however that the writ will not lie in any case 371, holding that the writ would lie to strike off an improper assessment and tax on bonds or other securities of the United States, the remedy by action for damages not being adequate.

43. Cheboygan County v. Mentor Tp., 94 Mich. 386, 54 N. W. 169, holding that where a majority of the board of supervisors of a county wilfully voted money for a fraudulent purpose, and included the amount so voted in the county taxes apportioned among the various townships, mandamus would not lie at the instance of the majority of the board to compel the supervisors who opposed the fraud to spread on their respective assessment rolls their proportion of such fraudulent tax, since, although each supervisor was charged by statute with the express duty of spreading his proportion of the taxes on the assessment rolls, he would not be commanded by a court to do so when the effect would be to aid a fraud.

Judgment against municipality and individuals jointly.—Where a judgment is obtained against a town and individuals jointly the fact that the individual defendants have property subject to execution will not prevent mandamus to compel the town to levy a tax for the payment of the judgment. Palmer v. Stacy, 44 Iowa 340.

Writ to successor of city.—Meyer v. Brown, 65 Cal. 583, 26 Pac. 281; Devereaux v. Brownsville, 29 Fed. 742. And see, generally, MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

Extent of relief.—When a plaintiff has shown himself entitled to a mandamus to compel the levy and collection of taxes by a county to pay a judgment against it, he is entitled to one which will set in motion all the necessary machinery, including the action of an assessor and collector, required to be taken after the levy of the tax by the county court, although no demand has been made on such officers to perform the acts so required. Marion County v. Coler, 75 Fed. 352, 21 C. C. A. 392.

Revision and correction of assessment.—Mandamus will lie to compel a borough council to examine, revise, and correct an assessment list and duplicate of taxes levied to pay a judgment recovered by the relator against the borough. Cooper v. Cape May Point, 72 N. J. L. 164, 60 Atl. 516. See also State v. Springer, (N. J. Sup. 1902) 52 Atl. 996.

Discretion of court.—The court has some measure of discretion in awarding writs of mandamus, and in requiring levies of taxes they will not be so employed as to impose an unnecessarily oppressive burden at one time. In providing for the payment of a large judgment the whole amount may be apportioned and collected part at a time by successive levies. Phelps v. Lodge, 60 Kan. 122, 55 Pac. 840.

After completion of tax-rolls and partial collection.—It cannot be objected to the issuance of a writ of mandamus requiring a tax levy that the tax-rolls are already completed and partly collected, and that it will be an inconvenience to levy and collect the amount wrongfully omitted from the rolls in the first instance. State v. Byrne, 32 Wash. 264, 78 Pac. 394.

Limit not reached.—It is no defense, in an application for a writ of mandamus to compel the levy of a tax by a town to pay a judgment against it, that the authority of the town to tax is limited, unless it is shown that such limited authority has been exhausted. The authority is not exhausted by an issue of bonds. Rose v. McKie, 145 Fed. 584, 76 C. C. A. 274 [affirming 140 Fed. 145].

Acts impairing contracts.—Mandamus lies to compel the exercise of the taxing power to pay debts as it existed when the debt was contracted, notwithstanding the subsequent adoption of a statute or constitutional provision limiting or reducing the power of taxation. *Graham v. of the municipal authorities as to the amount of taxes necessary to provide for current expenses⁵⁰ or otherwise.⁵¹ Nor will the writ lie where some other adequate legal remedy is provided,⁵² or where there has been no unreasonable delay in making the levy.⁵³

(ii) FEDERAL COURTS. The federal courts have no jurisdiction to issue mandamus to state, county, or municipal officers except as an incident to the exercise of the jurisdiction conferred upon them by law;⁵⁴ but where a federal court acquires jurisdiction and renders a judgment against a county or other municipal corporation on a bond, warrant, or other indebtedness, it has, as an incident to such jurisdiction, power by mandamus to compel the levy of a special tax to pay the judgment, when such tax is authorized or required by the laws of the state.⁵⁵ It has no power, however, to compel the levy of a tax not authorized by the constitution and laws of the state, or to exceed the limitation upon the taxing power created by such laws.⁵⁶

Future taxes.—The writ of mandamus, being based on default of duty, cannot direct the levy of future taxes, the time for the levy of which has not yet arrived, but may direct the levy during a series of future years of taxes which should have been, but were not, levied in past years. Austin v. Cahill, (Tex. 1905) 88 S. W. 542.

50. State v. Sheldon, 53 Nebr. 365, 73 N. W. 694 (holding that where the county authorities have levied taxes to provide for the current expenses of a certain year to the constitutional limit courts cannot control their discretion); Young v. Lane, 43 Nebr. 812, 62 N. W. 202; Sherman v. Langham, 92 Tex. 13, 40 S. W. 140, 42 S. W. 961 (holding that the writ will not lie to control in advance the discretion of a council in determining the amount that will be necessary to meet current expenses, which are a first charge against the fund so derived); Cleveland v. U. S., 111 Fed. 341, 49 C. C. A. 383. But when, as under Nebr. Code (1875), art. 9, § 5, the county authorities are prohibited from levying a tax in excess of a certain amount, for all purposes, and the estimate of expenses is sufficient to exhaust the revenue, where such expenses can be reduced by judicious management, and a portion of the revenues applied to the payment of judgment creditors, that course ought to be pursued, and the court may, by mandamus, require that it shall be pursued. Deuel County v. Buchanan County First Nat. Bank, 86 Fed. 264, 30 C. C. A. 30.

Claim not established.—A police jury cannot be compelled by a mandamus to levy a tax for the payment of a claim which they deny, and which has not been passed on judicially. State v. St. Charles Parish Police Jury, 29 La. Ann. 146.

53. Tillson v. Putnam County Com'rs, 19 Ohio 415.

Pending appeal.—Since mandamus is a discretionary writ, an application for mandamus to compel the levy of a tax to pay a judgment recovered against a county was denied pending an appeal by the county from the judgment to the supreme court of the United States, although no stay of execution had been obtained. Territory v. Woodbury, 1 N. D. 85, 44 N. W. 1077. The failure of a city to levy a tax for the payment of a judgment at the first opportunity after its rendition does not necessarily give occasion for the issuance of a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel such levy, where proceedings in error to review the judgment have been brought in good faith and without unnecessary delay, although no stay bond has been given. *Pherson v. Impairing obligation of contract.—But after a municipality has issued bonds or

(III) DEMAND AND REFUSAL. Ordinarily, before applying for a writ to compel the levy of a tax to pay judgments, bonds, warrants, or other indebtedness, there must be a demand and refusal;⁵⁷ but this is not necessary where the conduct of the officer or board charged with the duty to levy the tax is equivalent to a refusal, or if it otherwise appears that a demand would be useless.⁵⁸ Any definite or positive request or demand to levy a tax for the payment of a judgment is sufficient.⁵⁹ A demand of payment of a judgment is sufficient to include any particular thing which is necessary to be done in order to enable the city council to make payment.⁶⁰ Under certain statutes providing for mandamus to compel the levy of a special tax by a city to pay an execution, a demand has been held unnecessary.⁶¹

i. Levy For Public Buildings, Works, and Other Improvements. Mandamus will also lie to compel the levy of taxes, where the duty to levy the same is imposed by law for the construction of public buildings,⁶² waterworks,⁶³ bridges,⁶⁴ etc.; for establishing and maintaining public parks,⁶⁵ libraries,⁶⁶ etc.; or for the opening, constructing, altering, or repairing of streets or highways.⁶⁷ In all cases, however, the tax must be clearly authorized by law and the relator's right must be clearly established.⁶⁸ Special assessments upon the property within a district other evidences of indebtedness and provided for the levy of taxes to pay the same, it cannot constitutionally impair the obligation of such contracts by withdrawing or limiting the taxing power; and the federal courts therefore having rendered judgment on such contracts, may, by mandamus, compel the levy of a tax as authorized when the contracts were entered into. *State v. j. Levy For School Purposes. Mandamus will lie to compel the proper authorities to raise by taxation the necessary and proper amount for school purposes as determined by the board of education, where the determination of the board is binding,⁷⁰ or to otherwise perform specific duties imposed by law with respect to the levy and assessment of taxes for such purposes;⁷¹ but of course the writ will not lie to compel taxation not authorized by law or in excess of the limit prescribed by law,⁷² or to control a discretion vested in an officer or board.⁷³

k. Levy to Cover Loss by Default of Treasurer. Mandamus will lie to compel the proper county officers to levy a tax, as required by statute, to cover a loss to the state by reason of a default of the county treasurer;⁷⁴ but not, it has been held, until the remedy on his bond has been exhausted or a showing is made that a suit on the bond would be unavailing.⁷⁵ is not entitled to compel by mandamus the levy of a tax for that purpose upon all the taxable property of the city until the special assessment has proved inadequate. State v. Superior, 81 Wis. 649, 51 N. W. 1014.

Determination of board of education not binding.—Where it is the duty of the city council to determine what portion of the amount required for school purposes, as reported by the board of education, is to be raised by taxation instead of from other sources, as under Nebr. Comp. St. c. 79, § 25, subd. 17, mandamus does not lie to compel the council to levy a tax for the amount required by the board. State v. Omaha, 39 Nebr. 745, 58 N. W. 442 [distinguishing State v. Paddock, 36 Nebr. 263, 54 N. W. 515]; State v. Omaha, 7 Nebr. 267.

Missouri.—State v. Riley, 85 Mo. 156 (holding that mandamus would lie to compel the county clerk to assess the school taxes of a district on the taxable property therein according to its legal limits and in disregard of an illegal change of boundary); State v. Patton, 108 Mo. App. 26, 82 S. W. 537 (holding that mandamus is the proper remedy to compel a county clerk to extend levies and make an assessment for a school-district on his refusal so to do).

Nebraska.—State v. Studheit, 11 Nebr. 359, 9 N. W. 559, holding that the writ would lie to compel a school-district officer to make, as required by statute, a return or report to the county clerk of the lawful taxes voted by the district at the annual meeting.

New Hampshire.—Orford School Dist. No. 6 v. Carr, 63 N. H. 201, holding that it is not the duty or right of selectmen to inquire into the legality of the vote of a school-district to raise money; but when such vote is certified to them by the district clerk, they should assess the tax, and a mandamus lies to enforce performance of that duty.

Wisconsin.—State v. Lamont, 86 Wis. 563, 57 N. W. 369 (holding that the board of a free high school-district may institute a proceeding by mandamus to compel the levy and collection of a tax for the support of the school); State v. Smith, 11 Wis. 65.

School-bonds.—Where the school directors annually certify the amount necessary to pay interest upon school-bonds, and the county commissioners neglect and refuse to make the required levy, mandamus will issue, on the application of the holder of part of the bonds, requiring the levy to be made. State v. Byrne, 32 Wash. 264, 73 Pac. 394. See supra, VI, V, 1, h, (1).

Judgments.—Where the trustees of a school-district refused to pay a judgment had against them in their corporate capacity, and did not assess their district to satisfy the judgment, a writ of mandamus was granted to compel the assessment. Ex p. Devoe, 17 N. Brunsw. 513. See supra, VI, V, 1, h, (1).

Additional levies see infra, VI, V, 1, l, note 76.

Other remedy.—The existence of the remedy by certiorari is insufficient to bar the right of a school-district to mandamus against the county clerk to compel him to extend levies and make an assessment for the district in case of his refusal so to do. State v. Patton, 108 Mo. App. 26, 82 S. W. 537.

Bul. 223, holding that where the levy certified to the county auditor by the board of education, under Ohio Rev. St. § 3960, and the levy certified by the common council of Cincinnati, under section 2691, in the aggregate exceeded the limit of taxation fixed by law in the city, mandamus would not lie against the auditor to put the levy of the board of education on the tax duplicate, since, the aggregate being in excess, he could not be compelled to put on one part more than the other. See also supra, VI, V, 1, b, h, 1.

1. Relevies and Additional Levies. Whenever there is a right to compel by mandamus the levy of a tax to raise a certain sum within the taxing limit, the court can compel a relevy or an additional levy of such a rate as will raise the sum necessary to satisfy the requirement, even to the maximum rate authorized by law.⁷⁶ But as a rule where a tax has once been levied by a municipal corporation for the payment of a judgment, bond, or other indebtedness, and is still uncollected in whole or in part, or unaccounted for, another levy or a relevy will not be compelled.⁷⁷

2. PAYMENT. Mandamus will lie to compel acceptance of the proper sum due for taxes,⁷⁸ or to compel the receipt of state bank-bills,⁷⁹ coupons from state bonds,⁸⁰ or other authorized medium of payment,⁸¹ unless the remedy is excluded by 210; People v. Livingston County, 17 N. Y. 486. Compare, however, People v. St. Clair County, 30 Mich. 388.

76. Lexington v. Lexington Bd. of Education, 65 S. W. 827, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1663. A city council cannot, after the service of an alternative writ of mandamus ordering it to levy a tax for a certain purpose, by making the annual tax and omitting therefrom the levy which it was ordered to make, defeat the mandamus proceeding; and, where it attempts to do so, it is competent for the court to compel it to reconvene and correct the levy, or to add an additional levy sufficient to pay the claim. Denver v. Adams County, 33 Colo. 1, 77 Pac. 858. Where a judgment directed county supervisors to collect a tax and place the proceeds in the hands of the county treasurer as a sinking fund for plaintiff town, and the supervisors collected the tax and paid the same over to the treasurer without any directions, and he used it for county purposes, it was held that the town was entitled to a peremptory mandamus to compel the board of supervisors to again levy and collect the sum and pay it over to the county treasurer for the benefit of the town. People v. Delaware County, 173 N. Y. 297, 66 N. E. 7 [reversing 75 N. Y. App. Div. 184; 77 N. Y. Suppl. 676].

School purposes.—Where an insufficient levy for school purposes has been made by a city at the time fixed by law, the city may be compelled by mandamus, at any time before the tax books go into the hands of the collector, to make an additional levy. Lexington v. Lexington Bd. of Education, 65 S. W. 827, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1663.

77. Huey v. Jackson Parish Police Jury, 33 La. Ann. 1091; Duperier v. Iberia Parish Police Jury, 31 La. Ann. 709; Bass v. Taft, 137 U. S. 458, 11 S. Ct. 154, 34 L. ed. 752. Where coupon bonds had been issued by a district in a county to assist in the construction of a railroad, and the coupons falling due in a certain year on said bonds had been levied for by the county court, it was held that the holder of such coupons must look to the sheriff of the county for payment, and was not entitled by mandamus to compel a second levy upon the people and property of said district to pay the interest represented by such coupons. Welty v. Barbour County Ct., 46 W. Va. 460, 33 S. E. 269. So, where bonds, maturing in different years, were issued for the improvement of certain lands upon which they were made a lien until paid, and the law required the county court to levy enough taxes upon such lands each year to pay the annual interest on such bonds; and all bonds maturing the following year, allowing at least twenty-five per cent for delinquent taxes, and the county court only levied enough, if all collected, to pay the interest and bonds, and allowed nothing for delinquencies, and delinquent suits were instituted, and certain tracts sold under judgments recovered, and some of the purchasers were bona fide, it was held that the court could not attempt, in mandamus proceedings, to apportion or determine the equities which existed; and would not issue a mandamus to compel a second levy upon lands sold for the payment of bonds due before such sales were made. Shelley v. St. Charles County, 30 Fed. 603.

Sheriff's bond.—One to whom the fiscal court has allowed claims against the county, payable out of the county levy, is not entitled to a mandamus to compel the court to make a second levy to pay his claims until he has exhausted his remedy upon the sheriff's general bond executed under Ky. St. § 4133, it not being sufficient that he has exhausted his remedy upon the sheriff's county levy bond. Adair v. Hancock Deposit Bank, 107 Ky. 212, 53 S. W. 295, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 934.

Wrightman*, 32 Oreg. 573, 52 Pac. 510; Com. v. Peltz, 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 159, 6 Phila. 330 (where writ issued to compel a tax-receiver to receive a poll tax separate from the general tax).

Before time for payment.—The writ will not lie to compel the receipt of a license-tax before the time fixed by statute for payment. State v. McMonies, (Nebr. 1906) 166 N. W. 454.

79. State v. Gaillard, 11 S. C. 309. But the writ would not lie where their receipt was prohibited by statute. State v. Sneed, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 472.

statute or some other adequate remedy is provided.⁸² The writ will also lie to compel the issue of a receipt on payment of taxes.⁸³

3. COLLECTION — a. In General. Mandamus will lie in a proper case to compel the collection of taxes,⁸⁴ including a tax levied by a county, city, or other municipality to pay judgments, bonds, or other indebtedness,⁸⁵ and to compel the preliminary acts necessary to collection, such as the issue of a warrant of distress or other process for collection,⁸⁶ or delivery of the tax duplicates, tax-books, lists, etc., by the county commissioners or other proper officers to the collector of taxes.⁸⁷ Of course the writ cannot be granted to compel the collection of taxes or other acts in connection therewith where there is no duty or power to do the act sought to be enjoined.⁸⁸

82. State v. Gaillard, 11 S. C. 309 (remedy by mandamus taken away by statute); Wilcox v. Hunter, (Va. 1896) 25 S. E. 1000 (no writ to compel receipt of coupons from bonds for license-fees when special statutory remedy given); Moore v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 338, 5 S. Ct. 1020, 29 L. ed. 240; *Antoni v. Illegal taxes unpaid.—Mandamus will not lie to compel a county treasurer to certify that all taxes are paid when taxes remain unpaid, although the same are illegal. State v. Nelson, 41 Minn. 25, 42 N. W. 548, 4 L. R. A. 300.

England.—Rex v. Benn, 6 T. R. 198.

Other remedy.—It has been held that the remedy by mandamus is not excluded by the fact that an action may be brought on the collector's bond, as this remedy is not adequate (State v. Fyler, 48 Conn. 145); but in Virginia there is a decision to the contrary (Nottoway County v. Powell, 95 Va. 635, 29 S. E. 682). The fact that an indictment will lie does not exclude mandamus. State v. Whitworth, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 594. See supra, II, D, 2, d.

85. State v. Clinton County, 162 Ind. 580, 68 N. E. 295, 70 N. E. 373, 984; Houston v. Voorhies, 70 Tex. 356, 8 S. W. 109, where it is said that the mere levy and assessment of the tax and placing the tax-roll in the tax-collector's hands is not a full compliance by a city with its duty to creditors.

86. Tremont School Dist. v. Clark, 33 Me. 482; Waldron v. Lee, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 323; Brown v. Mullica Tp., 48 N. J. L. 447, 4 Atl. 427; People v. Halsey, 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 547, 36 How. Pr. 487 [affirmed in 37 N. Y. 344]; People v. Schenectady County, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 408, to attach collector's warrant to the tax books.

Estoppel.—A collector of taxes cannot by mandamus compel the delivery to him of warrants for the sale of lands for taxes, when he has stood by and allowed the lands to be sold for taxes by other officials, who acted under a mistaken view of the law in supposing that they were the ones to make the sales. Brown v. Mullica Tp., 48 N. J. L. 447, 4 Atl. 427.

New York.—People v. Hardenburgh, 90 N. Y. 411.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. Lyter, 162 Pa. St. 50, 29 Atl. 352.

South Carolina.—Runion v. Latimer, 6 S. C. 126, writ lies by treasurer de facto against usurping treasurer to deliver tax duplicate.

88. State v. New Castle, 2 Pennw. (Del.) 466, 47 Atl. 374 (no writ to collect after one year from date of warrant); Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. v. Caddo Parish, 10 La. Ann. 587 (no writ to sheriff having no power to collect); State v. Smith, 71 Ohio St. 13, 72 N. E. 300 (no writ to correct return as to certain taxes not required to be returned). A statute imposing upon county commissioners the duty to levy and assess a special tax to pay a judgment or other debt and to require the tax-collector to collect the same, gives the commissioners no authority to collect the same and therefore mandamus will not lie against them "to cause the tax to be collected." Ex p. Rowland, 104 U. S. 604, 26 L. ed. 861.

When collection has been enjoined.—Mandamus will not lie to compel a board of county commissioners to order the collection of a railroad aid tax which it has been enjoined from enforcing, especially where the personnel of the board has changed since the injunction decree was rendered on default. State v. Clinton County Com'rs, 162 Ind. 580, 68 N. E. 295, 70 N. E. 373, 984. Nor will it lie to compel the county treasurer to collect such tax until the tax lists shall have been placed in his hands and he shall have then refused or neglected to collect it. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Olmstead, 46 Iowa 316.

b. Inspection of Collector's Books. Mandamus will lie in a proper case to compel a collector of taxes to submit his books for inspection by an officer or board required or authorized to examine them.⁸⁹

c. Appointment or Election of Collectors. Mandamus will lie to compel the county commissioners or others to appoint tax-collectors as required by statute,⁹⁰ or to compel the issue of an election certificate,⁹¹ but not to control or interfere with a board's discretion as to the appointment of any particular person,⁹² nor to determine the right to the office as between opposing claimants.⁹³

4. DIVISION OR APPORTIONMENT OF TAXES COLLECTED BETWEEN MUNICIPALITIES OR PROPER OFFICERS. Upon the collection of taxes mandamus will lie to compel a proper apportionment or division thereof among the municipalities and officers lawfully entitled thereto.⁹⁴ But in accordance with the general rules governing mandamus the writ will not lie where there is another adequate remedy.⁹⁵

Errors in tax-books.—The collector is not responsible for the tax-books, but he is responsible for the taxes as they appear upon the tax-books, and they cannot be changed by him in any manner, except specifically in pursuance to statute, and therefore mandamus will not lie to compel him to accept a certain sum in payment of taxes and to pay the money so paid into a school-district different from that in which his tax-book shows the taxpayer was listed. State v. Brown, 172 Mo. 374, 72 S. W. 640.

Delinquent tax returns.—Where a statute (Mich. Comp. Laws (1871), §. 1034) requires all returns by the county treasurers of lands on which the taxes are delinquent to be delivered into the auditor-general's office on or before the last day of March in the year following their assessment, and the auditor-general is required by another section of the statute (section 1044) to make out the lists for publication on the first day of July, mandamus will not be granted to compel that officer to receive and accept returns which are forwarded after the first day of July and upon the basis thereof to credit the county with the amount of delinquent taxes so returned. People v. Auditor-Gen., 36 Mich. 271.

Review of decree for delinquent taxes.—Where an appeal is authorized by law from a decree for delinquent taxes, mandamus will not lie to compel the circuit judge to review such a decree and allow the landowner to answer, he alleging in his petition that the tax is illegal, and that he was not served with subpoena, but not that the petition and tax list were not published. Wiley v. Tuscola County Cir. Judge, 86 Mich. 381, 49 N. W. 35.

Contract for collection.—The adjudicatee of a contract for the collection of delinquent taxes and licenses of the city of New Orleans, for a specified year, is required to obtain and have prepared by the city notary a notarial contract therefor, conformably to the specifications of an ordinance adopted by the city council in pursuance of a state law; and where he fails to obtain such a contract for presentation to the mayor for signature he is without legal right to compel him, by mandamus, to sign any other. State v. Fitzpatrick, 45 La. Ann. 269, 270, 12 So. 353.

5. PAYMENT OVER OF TAXES BY COLLECTORS.⁹⁸ Mandamus will issue to compel a tax-collector to pay over taxes collected by him to the proper officer.⁹⁹ The writ will not lie, however, to compel township supervisors to pay over to the township treasurer moneys collected, where the effect would be to control their discretion as to the sufficiency of the treasurer's bond.¹ But if they refuse to act at all, mandamus will lie to compel them.² The writ will not lie when there is a special statutory remedy.³

6. REFUND OF TAXES PAID. Mandamus will lie to compel an officer or board to refund taxes illegally or improperly collected, where there is no judicial discretion in the matter but the facts are undisputed and the duty to refund is imperative;⁴ but not where there is an issue involved which should go to a jury;⁵ nor where the powers conferred upon the officer or board in this respect are judicial and not ministerial,⁶ although it will lie in such case to compel the officer or board to act and exercise their discretion.⁷ The writ will lie at the suit of a corporation to compel the county auditor, on his discovering that taxes have been erroneously collected, to call the attention of the county commissioners thereto, so that they may order a refund of the taxes so paid.⁸

7. TAX-SALES, CERTIFICATES, CONVEYANCES, ETC. Mandamus will lie to compel the issue of warrants for the sale of lands for the payment of taxes;⁹ or to compel the proper officers to make sales, issue certificates and deeds, assign certificates, and perform other duties in relation to tax-sales;¹⁰ but in all cases the right consequence of an erroneous apportionment); State v. Nelson, 105 Wis. 111, 80 N. W. 1105 (no writ by school-district for taxes paid by town treasurer to county treasurer by mistake).

Laws (1897), c. 284, providing that the state controller "shall," by order, direct the county treasurer to refund transfer taxes which have been illegally paid, is mandatory, so that mandamus will lie for a failure to comply therewith. Matter of Coogan, 27 Misc. (N. Y.) 563, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 111.

Remedy by action.—In some of the cases it has been held that the remedy by action to recover taxes paid is adequate and that mandamus will not lie. George's Creek Coal, etc., Co. v. Allegheny County Com'rs, 59 Md. 255; People v. Chenango County, 11 N. Y. 563.

Upson*, 79 Conn. 154, 64 Atl. 2 (holding that mandamus would not lie to compel the insurance commissioner to determine what amount should be refunded to insurance companies under a statute directing him to so determine, since it was a matter of judgment how much should be repaid); *State v. of the relator to the relief asked and the duty of the officer to perform the act must be established;¹¹ and where an officer is vested with judicial powers with respect to tax-sales and conveyances, mandamus will not lie to compel him to decide in any particular way or to set aside an erroneous decision.¹²

8. ISSUE OF CERTIFICATE OF TAXES DUE. Where the duty is imposed by statute mandamus will lie to compel a tax assessor or other officer to issue to a party applying therefor a certified statement over his hand and official seal of all taxes and assessments due and unpaid on certain real estate.¹³

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," §§ 252-255.

12. People v. Adam, 3 Mich. 427; People v. Chapin, 104 N. Y. 96, 10 N. E. 141; People v. Chapin, 103 N. Y. 635, 8 N. E. 368 [affirming 39 Hun 235].

Illustration.—This rule has been applied to mandamus to compel a conveyance after a tax-sale (People v. Adams, 3 Mich. 427, holding that mandamus will not lie at the suit of the holder of a tax-sale certificate to compel the state auditor to give him a conveyance, where a statute authorizes the auditor to forbear to sell lands for taxes or to withhold a conveyance after sale if for any cause the lands might not be sold or conveyed, as the power so conferred is judicial); to compel refunding of the purchase-money paid on an invalid tax-sale (People v. Chapin, 104 N. Y. 96, 10 N. E. 141, holding that where a state officer is vested with judicial power to determine the right to a refund of the purchase-money paid upon an invalid sale of land for taxes, mandamus will not lie to compel him to decide in any particular way or to set aside an erroneous decision); or to compel vacation of a tax-sale and conveyance (People v. Chapin, 103 N. Y. 635, 8 N. E. 368, holding that where the state controller has acted upon an application to vacate a tax-sale and conveyance under it because of alleged irregularity, and has denied the same, he cannot be required by mandamus to reach a different conclusion).

13. U. S. v. Trimble, 14 App. Cas. (D. C.) 414.

the auditor has withheld an amount erroneously overpaid him for his services for making the assessment the previous year, the assessor cannot by mandamus compel him to issue his warrant for the amount so withheld.¹⁴

10. SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS. Mandamus will lie to compel officers or boards to perform a specific ministerial duty imposed on them by law with respect to the making of special assessments for public improvements.¹⁵ So the levy and collection of such an assessment may be compelled;¹⁶ but the levy will not be compelled where the right is not clear,¹⁷ where action upon the part of the authorities is discretionary,¹⁸ or where there is another adequate remedy,¹⁹ or relator has been guilty of laches,²⁰ or respondents have no power to act.²¹ And while assessors may be compelled to act, they cannot be compelled to act in any particular way.²² A mandatory duty to levy and collect such a special assessment may be enforced

15. People v. Green, 6 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 129 [affirmed in 62 N. Y. 624]. And see cases cited infra, this note and notes 16-24.

Exclusion of property.—Mandamus will lie to compel the officers charged with the duty of making a special assessment to exclude land included within the assessment district by mistake. People v. Wilson, 119 N. Y. 515, 23 N. E. 1064.

16. Himmelmänn v. Cofran, 36 Cal. 411; State v. Keokuk, 9 Iowa 438; Chapin v. Osborn, 29 Ind. 99; Ex p. Jones, 10 N. Brunsw. 183.

Drainage assessments.—A special assessment to pay drainage warrants may be compelled. State v. Lewis County, (Wash. 1907) 88 Pac. 760, holding, where the drain had not been completed, that the commissioners could be ordered to levy the assessment, or could be required to proceed immediately and acquire by condemnation or otherwise the property necessary to the completion of the ditch, and then levy the assessment.

Reassessment.—Where a first assessment has been set aside the writ lies to compel a reassessment. People v. Pontiac, 185 Ill. 437, 56 N. E. 1114.

Confirmation of assessment.—Mandamus lies to compel a board of revision to meet and confirm an assessment by the board of assessors. People v. Green, 6 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 129 [affirmed in 62 N. Y. 624].

17. Sherwood v. Rynearson, 141 Mich. 92, 104 N. W. 392 (where writ to compel certification of a special drain assessment was not issued where the drain was incomplete); People v. Zilwaukie Tp. Bd., 10 Mich. 274. And compare People v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462, 6 N. E. 33, holding that the propriety of the levy of a special assessment by municipal authorities is a matter exclusively within the legislative discretion of such authorities, and such discretion cannot be controlled by the courts.

Where the statute providing for the improvement is radically defective and irreconcilable in its different provisions, no mandamus can issue to compel the performance of the duties which were intended to be, but were not, defined by it. Morse v. Williamson, 35 Barb. (N. Y.) 472.

Where levy would be unlawful.—A writ of mandamus will not be issued to compel a new special assessment after the lapse of more than five years from the dismissal of a former special assessment for the same improvement. People v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462, 6 N. E. 33.

Under provision for payment of judgment.—A statute providing for the issue of mandamus against municipal corporations requiring them to levy special taxes for the payment of judgments where an execution has been unavailing does not authorize mandamus to compel a tax to pay an award of damages by a jury in street opening proceedings. State v. Hug, 44 Mo. 116.

Demand and refusal.—A mandamus will not be granted to compel municipal authorities to proceed to levy a special assessment to obtain funds for the payment of judgments rendered in condemnation suits in the course of opening a street, or erecting other public work, until after a demand has been made upon such municipal authorities, by the party entitled to payment under such condemnation, for the payment thereof, and also the further demand has been made for the levying of a special assessment to obtain funds for that purpose, and such demands have been refused. People v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462, 6 N. E. 33.

Kansas City*, 52 Kan. 88, 34 Pac. 406 (holding that mandamus would not lie to reapportion the costs of grading, but that injunction was adequate to prevent the collection of a void assessment); State v. Baltimore County Com'rs, 46 Md. 621.

20. Simpson v. Kansas City, 52 Kan. 88, 34 Pac. 406.

VII. MANDAMUS TO PRIVATE CORPORATIONS AND THEIR OFFICERS AND TO UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATIONS.

A. Domestic Corporations—1. IN GENERAL. The state has visitorial power over all corporations created by it, whether quasi-public or purely private, and it is a well-settled doctrine that this power may be exercised through the courts by writ of mandamus to compel domestic corporations or their officers' to perform a specific legal duty imposed upon them by their charters, by statute or ordinance, or by the common law;² and the writ may issue, not only on the Duty imposed by the common law see People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 67 Ill. 118; and infra, VII, A, 9, b, text and note 28.

The directors of a railroad company or other corporation are officers of a corporation within the meaning of a statute authorizing mandamus. People v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 76 N. Y. 294.

In Kentucky, where a statute restricts the application of the writ of mandamus by providing that the writ is an order commanding "an executive or ministerial officer" to perform or omit to do an act, the performance or omission of which is enjoined by law, and is granted on the motion of the party aggrieved, or of the commonwealth when the public interest is affected, it is held that mandamus is confined in its application to the classes of persons specified and cannot be extended by the courts to other persons, and therefore that the writ will not lie against a private corporation, or the officers thereof, intrusted with the performance of no governmental function, and having no right to exercise any power which is of a public nature. *Cook v. Statutory remedy merely cumulative see State v. McGann, 64 Mo. App. 225; State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 29 Nebr. 412, 45 N. W. 469.

Action for penalty.—An action for a penalty prescribed by statute as a remedy for failure of a corporation to perform a duty, if such remedy is adequate, or if it is upon a reasonable construction of the statute exclusive, will bar the remedy by mandamus. State v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 59 Ala. 321. See also People v. New York, etc., R. Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.) 297. But if the remedy by recovery of the penalty is inadequate and merely cumulative, mandamus will not lie. Central Union Tel. Co. v. State, 118 Ind. 194, 19 N. E. 604, 10 Am. St. Rep. 114; Central Union Tel. Co. v. Bradbury, 106 Ind. 1, 5 N. E. 721; State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 79 Wis. 259, 48 N. W. 243, 12 L. R. A. 180.

Remedy on bond.—Mandamus will not lie to compel a corporation to perform a duty imposed by statute, where the statute provides an adequate remedy for breach of the duty by requiring it to give bond and expressly or impliedly allowing an action thereon. State v. Republican River Bridge Co., 20 Kan. 404; State v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 37 La. Ann. 589; Mt. Pleasant Cemetery Co. v. Paterson, etc., R. Co., 43 N. J. L. 505.

indictment will lie.¹⁸ The writ will not be granted where it will prove unavailing or nugatory,¹⁹ or where it is not necessary.²⁰

3. DEMAND AND REFUSAL. Before application for the writ there must generally be an express and specific demand or request upon defendant to perform the act sought to be compelled and a refusal thereof;²¹ but a demand is not necessary if it would be useless, or if the duty is plain and defendant has expressed or shown a determination not to perform it,²² or if the duty is strictly public and enjoined by law, and no person is charged by law with the duty to make demand.²³

4. TO ENFORCE RIGHTS AS TO STOCK OR MEMBERSHIP — a. In General. By the great weight of authority, the power of the courts to issue writs of mandamus to corporations and their officers is not limited to cases in which it is sought to enforce duties to the public, but the writ will also lie in proper cases to enforce private rights, and particularly those of members or stock-holders. If a corporation refuses to perform a specific legal duty²⁴ which it owes to a stock-holder or member, or one entitled to membership, and his right is clear,²⁵ he may enforce the same by mandamus,²⁶ subject to the principle generally applicable to proceed-

Pac. 582; Mt. Pleasant Cemetery Co. v. Paterson, etc., R. Co., 43 N. J. L. 505 (where a writ of mandamus to compel a railroad company to construct a wall, under its contract with a cemetery company, entered into as required by its charter, was denied on the ground that the remedy was by action on the contract or bill for specific performance); Ham v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 29 Ohio St. 174; State v. Enterprise Carriage Co., 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 152, 11 Cinc. L. Bul. 103.

Suit in equity already commenced.—Where, however, the party asking for the writ has already gone into a court of equity, and there instituted proceedings under which all the relief may be obtained that is asked for in the petition, the writ will be denied. Hardecastle v. Maryland, etc., R. Co., 32 Md. 32.

If a statute prescribes a remedy in equity, mandamus will not generally lie. State v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 62 N. H. 29, statutory remedy by injunction.

ings of this nature, that he must be without another adequate legal remedy for the protection thereof.²⁷

b. Showing as to Status. The writ will not issue on the relation of one seeking to enforce alleged rights as a stock-holder or member of a corporation, unless his status as such is properly established; ²⁸ but he should not be compelled to contest his rights as against third persons claiming ownership of the stock.²⁹

c. Reinstatement After Wrongful Expulsion or Exclusion. By the weight of authority mandamus will lie to compel a corporation to reinstate a member who has been illegally expelled, suspended, or otherwise excluded, and to restore him to all the rights and privileges of membership, whether the expulsion was illegal because of want of power on the part of the corporation or want of jurisdiction on the part of the particular board or tribunal, or because of want of notice or other irregularity.³⁰ But it is necessary, however, that the relator's right must be

In an old English case it was held that a mandamus would not lie to compel a trading company to give one of the members a recommendatory mark or proof-mark, without which he was not able to carry on his trade with effect, but the grounds of the decision are not clear. Anonymous, 2 Ld. Raym. 989.

Other remedy must be adequate.—“The mere fact that an action or proceeding will lie, does not necessarily supersede the remedy by mandamus. The relator must not only have a specific, adequate and legal remedy, but it must be one competent to afford relief upon the very subject-matter of his application; and if it be doubtful whether such action or proceeding will afford him a complete remedy, the writ should issue.” *State v. Sufficiency of showing.—Where relator asks that an annual election of trustees be held as provided by law, and comes into court the apparent owner of the stock in his possession, and respondents admit that he paid the assessment thereon as levied by them and that at his request they issued to him the identical stock presented in court, he has shown such an interest in the stock against respondents as entitles him to the writ of mandamus. State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 167.

a corporation for a writ of mandamus to compel the corporation to allow him to examine its books must be denied, where the stock-book does not show him to be a stock-holder and a statute requires every stock corporation to keep a stock-book containing the names of all its stock-holders and provides that no transfer of stock shall be valid “for any purpose” until entered therein. Matter of Reiss, 30 Misc. Contra.—Fraternal Mystic Circle v. State, 61 Ohio St. 628, 48 N. E. 940, 76 Am. St. Rep. 446 [reversing 9 Ohio Cir. Ct. 364, 6 Ohio Cir. Dec. 385], holding that a member of a private corporation organized for the mutual protection and relief of its members, although unlawfully expelled and excluded from participation in its benefits, was not entitled to a writ of mandamus to compel it to restore him to membership, because such restoration was not an act specially enjoined by law, and because he had a plain and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of the law. In Kentucky, as has been seen, the remedy by mandamus is so restricted by statute that it will not lie against a private corporation or the officers thereof, intrusted with the performance of no governmental function and having no right to exercise any power of a public nature (see supra, VII, A, 1, note 2), and therefore the writ will not lie to compel reinstatement of a member of a corporation illegally expelled or excluded. Cook v. College of Physicians and Surgeons, 9 Bush (Ky.) 541. See also Schmidt v. Abraham Lincoln Lodge, 84 Ky. 490, 2 S. W. 156, 8 Ky. L. Rep. 655.

Property or valuable civil right not involved.—Some of the courts have held that mandamus will not lie where the nature of the corporation is such that the expulsion does not affect any property interest or other valuable civil right. Sale v. First Regular Baptist Church, 62 Iowa 26, 17 N. W. 143, 49 Am. Rep. 136. See also Grand Lodge K. of P. v. People, 60 Ill. App. 550 [affirmed in 166 Ill. 71, 46 N. E. 768]; *People v. Mere restriction in exercise of rights.—It has been held that the exclusion of a member of a corporation from speaking or voting at four successive meetings of the corporation, without its appearing that his ordinary corporate rights were thus restricted otherwise than in the administration of the internal discipline of the corporation under the by-laws or rules of its own government, is not sufficient cause for a mandamus to the corporation to restore him to a full enjoyment of those rights. Crocker v. Old South Soc., 106 Mass. 489.

had jurisdiction, and the proceedings were had after notice and an opportunity to be heard and in accordance with the by-laws, the courts cannot interfere or pass upon the merits of the expulsion, or upon the reasonableness of the by-laws authorizing it if it was within the power of the corporation to enact them.³² As a rule the writ will not be granted until the relator has exhausted the means of relief and remedies by objection, defense, appeal, and otherwise, afforded him by the by-laws and rules of the corporation,³³ unless such remedies are inappli-

Expulsion justified but irregular.—Although the relator's expulsion may have been irregular because of a want of notice or for other reasons, a writ of mandamus will not be granted to restore him to membership, if it appears that there are sufficient grounds for his expulsion. State v. Lusitanian Portuguese Soc., 15 La. Ann. 73; Meister v. Bay City Anshei Chesed Hebrew Cong., 37 Mich. 542; State v. Temperance Benev. Assoc., 42 Mo. App. 485 (holding that mandamus will not be granted to reinstate a member expelled without notice and opportunity to be heard, where he admits his guilt of the offense for which he was expelled, and the offense is sufficient ground for expulsion); *State v. Demand for restoration to membership and refusal thereof is generally necessary before applying for a writ of mandamus (Moseley v. Collins, 133 Ala. 326, 32 So. 131; Women's Catholic O. of F. v. Condon, 84 Ill. App. 564; and supra, VII, A, 3); but no demand is necessary if it will be useless, or the corporation has expressed or shown a determination not to restore the relator (People v. Musical Mut. Protective Union, 118 N. Y. 101, 23 N. E. 129 [affirming 47 Hun 273]; and supra, VII, A, 3).

cable³⁴ or unreasonable and inadequate,³⁵ or would prove vain and useless.³⁶ Mandamus will not lie after the relator has brought an action to recover damages for the illegal expulsion.³⁷

d. Admission to Membership. Where the law prescribes the qualifications of members of the corporation and gives an absolute right to membership, and the corporation refuses to admit a person who is duly qualified, mandamus will lie to compel his admission;³⁸ but the right to admission must be clear.³⁹ The writ will not be granted where it clearly appears that the relator, if admitted, would be immediately liable to expulsion;⁴⁰ where the admission fees prescribed by the by-laws are not paid;⁴¹ or where, under its charter, the corporation is the sole judge of the qualifications of members and the right to membership.⁴²

England.—Prohurst's Case, Carth. 168, mandamus not granted to restore a fellow of a college without appealing to a visitor.

Mandamus to compel hearing of appeal.—Where the constitution and by-laws of an association provide that a member thereof who has been expelled may appeal from the action of a subordinate lodge expelling him to a certain officer, mandamus will lie to compel such officer to entertain jurisdiction of such appeal and determine it, if on proper application he refuses to do so. State v. Knights of Golden Rule, 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 1, 10 Cinc. L. Bul. 2.

34. People v. Musical Mut. Protective Union, 118 N. Y. 101, 23 N. E. 129 [affirming 47 Hun 273], holding that where the by-laws of a corporation authorized it to reinstate an expelled member by a vote of a two-thirds majority of all members present, after his having paid all dues and fines standing against him and an extra fine of fifty dollars, and provided that applicants for reinstatement must pass an examination as in the case of applications for original membership, a person unlawfully expelled was not required to exhaust the means so provided for reinstatement before resorting to mandamus, as these provisions related to cases of expulsion supported by proceedings lawfully conducted, and where the appeal was to the discretionary power of the society.

35. Brown v. Supreme Ct. I. O. F., 176 N. Y. 132, 68 N. E. 145 [affirming 66 N. Y. App. Div. 259, 72 N. Y. Suppl. 806 (affirming 34 Misc. 556, 70 N. Y. Suppl. 397)]; Weiss v. Musical Mut. Protective Union, 189 Pa. St. 446, 42 Atl. 118, 69 Am. St. Rep. 820, holding that where no appeal was authorized by the by-laws of a mutual protective union, a resolution instructing the directors to investigate charges against certain members and, if found guilty, expel them, and providing for an appeal to the union from the decision of the directors, did not require members so expelled to appeal to the union before resorting to mandamus, where the resolution required, as a condition precedent, a compliance with the findings of the directors and the payment of all expenses.

Foreign corporations.—It has been held that the fact that the body within the organization to which the appeal must be taken is a corporation of another state does not change the rule, since it is to be presumed that such appellate body will do justice between the parties. Zelif v. Grand Lodge K. of P., 53 N. J. L. 536, 22 Atl. 63.

36. State v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W., 70 Mo. App. 456; Brown v. Supreme Ct. I. O. F., 176 N. Y. 132, 68 N. E. 145 [affirming 66 N. Y. App. Div. 259, 72 N. Y. Suppl. 806 (affirming 34 Misc. 556, 70 N. Y. Suppl. 397)], holding that the fact that if a suspended member was denied reinstatement, the constitution and by-laws provided that he might appeal to various courts or tribunals within the association, and that no member should be entitled to bring any civil action or legal proceeding until he should exhaust all the remedies by such appeals, did not debar him from relief in the courts where the obstacles to the prosecution of an appeal amounted to almost a denial of justice, and where, if prosecuted, no relief would result therefrom.

e. Right to Subscribe For Shares. It has been held that mandamus will not lie to compel a corporation to allow a subscription for shares of its capital stock, as the remedy by action for damages for denial of the right is adequate.⁴³

f. Issue of Certificates of Stock. As a general rule mandamus will not lie to compel a corporation or its officers to issue a certificate of stock to one entitled thereto, since he has an adequate remedy at law by action against the corporation for the value of the stock claimed.⁴⁴ There are some cases, however, in which it has been held that the writ will lie if the right to the certificate is clear.⁴⁵

g. Transfer of Shares. By the weight of authority, mandamus will not lie in ordinary cases to compel a corporation or its officers to transfer stock on its books and issue new certificates to the transferee, since the right is a purely private one, and there is generally an adequate remedy by an action against the corporation for damages⁴⁶ or by a suit in equity to secure a decree ordering the admit the relator as a member and register his cattle, as the association was a purely private corporation with the right to admit such members as it saw fit).

Inns of court, etc.—In England it was held that mandamus would not lie to compel the admission of an attorney to an inn of court (Rex v. Barnard's Inn, 5 A. & E. 17, 2 Harr. & W. 62, 31 E. C. L. 505; Rex v. Allen, 5 B. & Ad. 984, 3 N. & M. 184, 27 E. C. L. 413; Rex v. Lincoln's Inn, 4 B. & C. 855, 7 D. & R. 351, 28 Rev. Rep. 482, 10 E. C. 51. Murray v. Stevens, 110 Mass. 95; Slemmons v. Thompson, 23 Oreg. 215, 31 Pac. 514, holding that mandamus would lie to compel a transfer where the breach of duty alleged was the refusal of the corporation to transfer the stock and enroll plaintiff on its books as a stock-holder, and the fraudulent acts of its agents in disposing of its property under a secret trust for private advantage in fraud of the rights of plaintiff, and which rendered the corporation apparently insolvent. In Ohio, however, it has been held that the fact that the business of the corporation is very profitable, that its shares of stock have no known market value, or are greatly enhanced by the good-will of a growing business, does not vary the rule, where the actual value is ascertainable in an action to recover damages. Freon v. Carriage Co., 42 Ohio St. 30, 51 Am. Rep. 794. It has also been held that mandamus will not lie to compel a transfer of stock on the books of the corporation, even though the stock has peculiar elements of value, by reason of which its value is incapable of compensation in damages, since in such case the transferee has a remedy in equity for a decree transferring the same. State v. Enterprise Carriage Co., 9 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 152, 11 Cinc. L. Bul. 103. See also Clarke v. Hill, 132 Mich. 434, 93 N. W. 1044; Durfee v. Harper, 22 Mont. 354, 56 Pac. 582.

But it has been held that an order granted by a judge, appointing a trustee for a designated person and authorizing such trustee to sell described stock in a railroad company in which that person has an interest, does not bring the case within this exception, so as to afford a proper basis for a writ of mandamus against the company compelling it to transfer the stock in question to the trustee, in order that he may make a sale of the same under and by virtue of such order of the court. *Terrell v. Assignment, power of attorney, and proof of title.—A corporation cannot be compelled by mandamus to do that which it would have no authority to do voluntarily; and therefore as a turnpike company had no power to transfer upon its books one person's stock to another without the production of a written assignment, power of attorney, or other proof of title, it was held that mandamus would not lie to compel it to do so. Burnsville Turnpike Co. v. State, 119 Ind. 382, 20 N. E. 421, 3 L. R. A. 265.

Keeping or bringing books, etc., into the state.—A stock-holder may by mandamus compel the corporation to comply with a statute requiring it to keep at its principal office in the state correct books of account, and to permit every stock-holder to examine such books at all reasonable times. Crown Coal, etc., Co. v. Thomas, 60 Ill. App. 234. Compare, however, Pratt v. Meriden Cutlery Co., 35 Conn. 36. In New Jersey by express statutory provision, where the books of a corporation are kept beyond the limits of the state, mandamus will lie to compel the corporation to bring them into the state for examination by a stock-holder. Trimble v. American Sugar Refining Co., 61 N. J. Eq. 340, 48 Atl. 912; Huyilar v. Cragin Cattle Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 392, 2 Atl. 274; Mitchell v. Rubber Reclaiming Co., (Ch. 1892) 24 Atl. 407. This statute does not extend to all papers and memoranda of the company, however. Huyilar v. Cragin Cattle Co., 42 N. J. Eq. 139, 7 Atl. 521.

College of Physicians and Surgeons*, 9 Bush (Ky.) 541; supra, VII, A, 1, note 2) or Ohio (Cincinnati Volksblatt Co. v. Hoffmeister, 62 Ohio St. 189, 56 N. E. 1033, 78 Am. St. Rep. 707, 48 L. R. Sale of stock.—If the relator has sold his stock he has no standing to demand an inspection, although the price has not been fully paid and the stock has been placed in the hands of a third person in escrow until payment shall be made. State v. Whited, 104 La. 125, 28 So. 922. A stock-holder has no standing after he sells his stock to prosecute an appeal from a judgment denying a writ to enforce the right of inspection. *State v. The statute or constitution in some states is construed as giving a clear and absolute right of inspection, which cannot be defeated by inquiring into the relator's or petitioner's motives and showing a hostile or improper purpose. *Johnson v. But where the refusal to permit a stockholder to inspect the books and accounts of the corporation was based on the ground that he had no right of inspection at any time or for any purpose, it was held unnecessary for the petition for mandamus to affirmatively show that the demand for inspection was made during office hours or at the place of business of the corporation, or that the person making the demand was the agent of the respondent or had any lawful right to represent her in the transaction. State v. Pacific Brewing, etc., Co., 21 Wash. 451, 58 Pac. 584, 47 L. R. A. 208. tion of preferred stock of a corporation issued in disregard of the provisions of its organic law, even though all persons interested acquiesced in the unauthorized issue.⁶⁹

j. Dividends, Etc. Mandamus will not lie to control or interfere with the discretion of the directors of a corporation in declaring dividends or to compel payment of dividends after they have been declared;⁷⁰ but it seems that it will lie to compel the ministerial act of delivering checks already drawn for dividends,⁷¹ and that when the stock in a building and loan association is matured, the holder is entitled to mandamus to compel the corporation to make an application and division of profits and to declare the stock matured.⁷²

k. Arbitration. Mandamus lies to compel a corporation, such as a building and loan society, to submit a dispute with a member to arbitration, as required by statute and the rules of the society.⁷³

l. Publication of Statements or Reports. Where stock-holders may incur liability to creditors by reason of a failure of the officers to publish the annual statement or report required by statute, mandamus will lie on the relation of a stock-holder to compel performance of such duty.⁷⁴

m. Collection of Unpaid Subscriptions to Stock. Perhaps in a proper case a stock-holder may by mandamus compel the proper officer of the corporation to make calls and collect unpaid subscriptions to the capital stock,⁷⁵ but the writ will not lie to control a discretion in the collection of subscriptions vested in the directors by the charter.⁷⁶

5. CORPORATE MEETINGS AND ELECTIONS. The legal right of a stock-holder or member of a corporation to have an election of directors, trustees, or other officers, or meetings of stock-holders or members for other purposes, as required by charter, statute, or by-laws, or to have a new election in the case of illegality, may be enforced by mandamus to compel the existing directors or other proper officer to call and hold a meeting for such purpose;⁷⁷ but the court will not interfere with the internal management of the corporation or a discretion vested in the directors or others as to the calling of meetings.⁷⁸ The writ will also lie to compel the inspectors or tellers to canvass the votes at a corporate election and issue certificates;⁷⁹ but it will not lie to compel a recanvass by officers whose powers have ceased, or to determine the title to office.⁸⁰ Mandamus will not lie to compel the officers of a beneficial association to declare the adoption of an amendment to its constitution involving no pecuniary rights of the members, the question being whether the amendment was duly adopted.⁸¹

6. CORPORATE OFFICES AND OFFICERS⁸²—a. Right to Office. It was formerly held that mandamus would not lie to admit or restore one to an office in a purely private corporation,⁸³ but the modern rule is otherwise.⁸⁴ Quo warranto and not mandamus is the proper remedy to try the disputed title to a corporate office;⁸⁵

Call of election since service of papers.—

It is no answer to the application for mandamus in such case that since the papers were served defendants have ordered an election, where it appears that they have attempted, by altering the by-laws, to change the mode of publishing the notice of election, to change the test of the right to vote at such election, and to give persons a right to vote who had not that right previously. People v. Albany Hospital, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 397, 11 Abb. Pr. N. S. 4.

Existence of other remedy.—It has been held that the fact that a proceeding may be brought by a stock-holder to remove the existing directors or trustees from office and relieve them of their duties on their refusal to call a meeting for an election of directors or trustees is not such an adequate remedy as to bar mandamus to compel them to call such meeting. State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 167.

By statute.—In some states by statute mandamus will lie to compel the holding of a corporate election or a new election in case of illegality. See People v. Simonson, 18 N. Y. Suppl. 37, 27 Abb. N. Cas. 422.

The status of the relator as stock-holder or member must be established. State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 167. See supra, VII, A, 4, b.

A proper demand for the calling and holding of a corporate election must generally be made upon the proper officers. Harrison v. Simonds, 44 Conn. 318; State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 167; Com. v. Keim, 15 Phila. (Pa.) 1. See supra, VII, A, 3. But continuous neglect may render a demand unnecessary. People v. Albany Hospital, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 397, 11 Abb. Pr. N. S. 4.

After acquiescence in an illegal election of officers for eight months mandamus for a new election was refused. Moore v. Port Bruce Harbour Co., 14 U. C. Q. B. 365.

Election not void.—If an election is not void, as where the only objection is because of the rejection of votes which would not have changed the result, mandamus will not be granted. Ex p. Mawby, 2 E. & B. 718, 18

Y.) 168 (holding also that a suit by claimants of office in a corporation for an injunction to prevent adverse claimants from acting as officers is no bar to mandamus to obtain certificate of election); Com. v. Cox, 1 Leg. Chron. (Pa.) 78 (holding that mandamus is the proper remedy to compel inspectors appointed to hold an election for directors to receive and count the votes by proxy which have been rejected without sufficient reason). See also Hayes v. Morgan, 81 Ill. App. 665.

Other remedy.—In Missouri mandamus was held to lie to compel the inspectors to canvass the votes, although the statute provided a remedy by application to a court by any person aggrieved by a corporate election, as the statutory remedy was considered merely cumulative. State v. McGann, 64 Mo. App. 225. The contrary, however, was held in New York. People v. Simonson, 61 Hun (N. Y.) 338, 16 N. Y. Suppl. 118.

England.—Anonymous, 1 Barn. 402; Rex v. Wildman, Str. 879.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 264.

Defenses.—Where the secretary of a railroad company bought a set of books with his own funds, and entered in them the minutes of the proceedings of the corporators, and received in them the subscriptions of stock, it was held that his possession was the possession of the company, that in going out of office he had no right to take the books with him, that he had no lien on the books either for the purchase-money, for his services as secretary, or for the use and occupation of his premises by the company while he was secretary, and that the company was entitled to a peremptory mandamus. State v. Goll, 32 N. J. L. 285.

Effect of proceeding in equity.—Mandamus will lie to obtain possession of the corporate books and papers in a proper case, notwithstanding there may be a remedy in equity, but not when the relator has already brought a suit in equity under which full, complete, and specific relief may be afforded him. Hardcastle v. Maryland, etc., R. Co., 32 Md. 32.

Florida.—Florida Cent., etc., R. Co. v. State, 31 Fla. 482, 508, 13 So. 103, 20 L. R. A. 419, where it is said that "there is no better settled elementary principle in the law of mandamus than that the writ will never lie to enforce the performance of private contracts."

Indiana.—State v. Salem Church, 114 Ind. 389, 16 N. E. 808 (holding that mandamus would not lie to compel a religious society to permit the use of its church building by other denominations as provided by the contract under which subscriptions were made to its building fund); Excelsior Mut. Aid Assoc. v. Riddle, 91 Ind. 84 (holding that mandamus would not lie to compel payment under a contract of life insurance); Indiana, etc., R. Co. v. Rinehart, 14 Ind. App. 588, 43 N. E. 238 (holding that a provision in an instrument filed by a railroad company for the appropriation of land for a right of way that it would put in such bridges and tile drains as might be needed to give proper drainage across the right of way, being merely contractual, was not enforceable by mandamus).

Kansas.—State v. Republican River Bridge Co., 20 Kan. 404, holding that mandamus would not lie to compel a bridge company to rebuild and maintain its bridge, where the company had given the state a bond to secure the maintenance thereof, the remedy, if any, being on the bond.

Louisiana.—State v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 37 La. Ann. 589, holding that mandamus would not lie on the relation of a city to compel a railroad company to repair a street through which the city had granted a right of way and which the company had bound itself to keep in repair, a bond having been given by the company for the faithful performance of its contract.

Michigan.—Burland v. Northwestern Mut. Ben. Assoc., 47 Mich. 424, 11 N. W. 269; Van Norman v. Central Car, etc., Co., 41 Mich. 166, 49 N. W. 925.

Nebraska.—Horton v. State, 60 Nebr. 701, 84 N. W. 87, holding that mandamus will not lie to compel the issue of a warrant by the auditor of a private corporation on its treasurer, in accordance with a resolution of the executive committee, for payment of a debt due from the corporation.

New Jersey.—Bradbury v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assoc., 53 N. J. Eq. 306, 41 Atl. 775 (holding that where a policy in a mutual life insurance company has been forfeited by failure to pay the premiums upon the day fixed and the holder has the right upon certain terms, which he is able and willing to fulfil, to be relieved from his default, his remedy against the company is not by mandamus, but in a court of equity for relief in the nature of specific performance); Rosenfeld v. Einstein, 46 N. J. L. 479; State v. Paterson, etc., R. Co., 43 N. J. L. 505 [affirmed in 45 N. J. L. 186] (holding that where a railroad company, whose charter re-remedy by mandamus is expressly given by statute,⁹⁹ if a specific and imperative legal duty to make the payment sought to be compelled or perform the contract is imposed by statute,¹ or, it seems, if there is no other remedy, as in the case where by statute the corporation cannot be otherwise sued or its property taken on execution.²

b. Collection of Subscriptions to Stock or Other Assets. In England mandamus has been held to lie at the suit of a judgment creditor, where there is no other legal remedy, to compel a corporation or its officers to make calls on subquired it before constructing its road along a cemetery, to enter into a contract with the cemetery association to construct a suitable stone wall of a designated height between the railroad and the cemetery grounds, gave the association a penal bond to construct such wall within three months, mandamus would not lie to compel it to do so, as there was an adequate remedy at law on its contract, or by bill for specific performance).

New York.—People v. Nash, 47 Hun 542 [affirmed on other grounds in 111 N. Y. 310, 18 N. E. 630, 7 Am. St. Rep. 747, 2 L. R. A. 180]. See also Cohen v. New York Mut. L. Ins. Co., 50 N. Y. 610, 10 Am. Rep. 522.

Ohio.—Gas-Light Co. v. Zanesville, 47 Ohio St. 35, 50, 23 N. E. 60 (furnishing gas under contract with city); Ham v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 29 Ohio St. 174 (refusing mandamus to compel a corporation to issue its bonds to one of its creditors, in order that he might obtain the benefit of a mortgage security); State v. Zanesville, etc., Turnpike Road Co., 16 Ohio St. 308 (refusal of corporation to contribute to the expense of repairing a bridge as required by contract).

Canada.—Hughes v. Newcastle Dist. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 13 U. C. Q. B. 153.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," §§ 34, 272; and supra, II, C, 2, c.

The duty of officers to call a corporate meeting as required by the by-laws does not arise out of mere contract obligation so as to exclude mandamus to compel them to perform such duty. Bassett v. Atwater, 65 Conn. 355, 363, 32 Atl. 937, 32 L. R. A. 575. See supra, VII, A, 5.

Duty imposed by municipal ordinance.—The fact that an ordinance granting a railroad, street railroad, or other company the use of streets and alleys upon certain conditions requires formal acceptance by the company does not render the grant a mere private contract, so as to preclude mandamus by a citizen of the municipality to enforce compliance with the conditions of the ordinance. People v. Suburban R. Co., 178 Ill. 594, 53 N. E. 349, 49 L. R. A. 650; Richmond R., etc., Co. v. Brown, 97 Va. 26, 32 S. E. 775. See infra, VII, A, 9, b, (1), text and note 26; j, (1), (D), (II).

Contract by railroad company to establish or maintain station.—Florida Cent., etc., R. Co. v. State, 31 Fla. 482, 13 So. 103, 34 Am. St. Rep. 30, 20 L. R. A. 419.

99. State v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 52 La. Ann. 1570, 28 So. 111, remedy by mandamus given by statute to parishes and municipal corporations to enforce the obligation of any contract relating to the paving, reconstruction, repair, or care of streets, highways, bridges, etc.

1. State v. Wabash, etc., Canal, 4 Ind. 495.

Illustrations.—Thus mandamus has been recognized as a proper remedy to compel payment of certain interest on canal bonds as expressly required by statute (State v. Wabash, etc., Canal, 4 Ind. 495); to compel a turnpike road company to issue a certificate to one who has performed work on the road under a contract with it, as required by a statute, so as to enable him to obtain payment from the state treasurer out of money subscribed by the state in aid of the construction of the road (Com. v. Hanover, etc., Turnpike Road Co., 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 59; Com. v. Anderson's Ferry, etc., Turnpike Road, 7 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 6); and to compel an insurance company to apply the amount due under a fire policy, as required by a statute, to the rebuilding of the premises insured (Simpson v. Scottish Union Ins. Co., 1 Hem. & M. 618, 9 Jur. N. S. 711, 32 L. J. Ch. 329, 8 L. T. Rep. N. S. 112, 1 New Rep. 537, 11 Wkly. Rep. 459, 71 Eng. Reprint 270).

If an execution will lie against the property of the company mandamus will not lie to compel them to pay a judgment, for there is then a remedy by the ordinary course of the law, and it can make no difference that the circumstances are such that the execution may produce no fruits. Reg. v. Victoria Park Co., 1 Q. B. 288, 4 P. & D. 639, 41 E. C. L. 544. See also Hughes v. Newcastle Dist. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 13 U. C. Q. B. 153.

scriptions for stock to raise funds for payment of the judgment;³ but the writ seems never to have been issued for this purpose in the United States, and perhaps it will not lie.⁴ However this may be, the remedy in equity is more complete and appropriate and the creditor is not bound to resort to mandamus instead of or before proceeding in equity.⁵

c. Compelling Assessments. It has been held in some states that mandamus will lie after or in aid of a judgment recovered by a member or policy-holder against an assessment insurance or mutual benefit company to compel an assessment to pay the judgment,⁶ although not before judgment;⁷ but there are decisions to the contrary.⁸ This question is elsewhere more fully treated.⁹

d. Inspection of Books and Records by Creditors. A judgment creditor of a corporation, in a proper case, as in the case where by statute he is entitled to issue execution against shareholders who have not paid up for their shares, may by mandamus enforce his right to an inspection of the register of shareholders or other like book of the corporation.¹⁰

8. AFFIXING OF CORPORATE SEAL. Mandamus will lie to compel a corporation or its officers to affix the corporate seal to an instrument.¹¹

9. TO COMPEL PERFORMANCE OF PUBLIC DUTIES¹² — a. In General. Although on some questions the authorities are conflicting, the general rule is that mandamus will lie on the relation of the attorney-general acting for and in the name of the state,¹³ or in some cases on the relation of a municipality or a particular public

To fix compensation of officer.—In a Georgia case there is dictum to the effect that where the president and directors of a corporation decline to fix the compensation of an officer as required by a by-law, or unreasonably postpone action in the premises, mandamus will lie to compel them to perform their duty. Eagle, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Browne, 58 Ga. 240.

3. Reg. v. Victoria Park Co., 1 Q. B. 288, 4 P. & D. 639, 41 E. C. L. 544, where, however, the writ was denied because it appeared that calls sufficient to satisfy the judgment had been made, but not paid, and that the company no longer had the proper officers for making such calls. See also Reg. v. Ledger, 1 Q. B. 616, 41 E. C. L. 697, where mandamus was granted to compel an incorporated borough to make a borough rate for the purpose of paying instalments on a bond.

The remedy by mandamus is not precluded by the fact that the breach of the duty sought to be compelled renders the corporation or its officers liable to a penalty or to indictment, or that it is ground for quo warranto to forfeit its charter.²⁰

b. The Legal Duty and Violation Thereof—(1) IN GENERAL. The writ will issue only where there is a specific legal duty on the part of the corporation to do the act sought to be compelled and clear proof of a breach of that duty;²¹ and the relator's right must be clearly established.²² Some of the courts seem to hold that the duty must be clearly and expressly enjoined by charter or statute;²³ but by the weight of authority it may be either express or implied,²⁴ and it may be Quo warranto, and not mandamus, is the proper remedy in such a case. Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. People, 120 Ill. 200, 11 N. E. 347.

35. On application for mandamus to compel a railroad company to resume and exercise its duties as a carrier of freight and passengers, it was held no defense to show that the company's skilled freight handlers, who had been working at the rate of seventeen cents an hour, refused to work unless they were paid twenty cents an hour, it not being shown that they committed any unlawful act or that there was any violence, riot, or unlawful interference with the other employees of the company; but it was said that it might be otherwise if it were shown that a strike of the company's skilled freight handlers had been caused or compelled by some illegal or organized body which controlled their actions and sought through them to enforce its will upon the company, and that the company in resisting such unlawful by-laws, the names of its officers, the amount of its capital stock, the amount actually paid in, and the amount of its indebtedness, etc.³⁶

e. Inspection of Books, Papers, and Records.³⁷ Where a statute expressly or impliedly makes it the duty of a corporation to submit its books and affairs to the inspection of public officers, mandamus will lie to compel performance of the duty.³⁸ A bank acting as agent for the transfer of state and city loans is a public official and performs such public duties that it may be compelled by mandamus to allow inspection of papers by parties interested.³⁹

f. Prevention of Ultra Vires Acts. It has been said that mandamus lies to compel a corporation to keep within its powers and to oust it from the exercise of powers or franchises not granted;⁴⁰ but in most cases this is not true, for mandamus is not a preventive writ.⁴¹ The proper remedy is by quo warranto or injunction.⁴²

g. Eminent Domain.⁴³ Mandamus is not the proper remedy to acquire a right to occupy or use the property of another on paying compensation, but the remedy is by condemnation proceedings in accordance with the statute.⁴⁴ It has been held, however, that mandamus will lie to compel a railroad company or other corporation to pay or deposit the amount of an award in condemnation proceedings for land taken or damages sustained, as required by statute,⁴⁵ or to do various other efforts had refused to obey unjust and illegal dictation, and had used all the means in its power to employ other men in sufficient numbers to do the work, and that the refusal or neglect complained of had grown out of such a state of facts. *People v. Remedy by injunction provided by statute.—Under a statute (N. H. Gen. Laws, c. 158, §§ 11, 12) prohibiting a railroad company from allowing its line to be operated by a competing road and providing that any citizen might apply for an injunction to restrain such operation, it was held that mandamus would not lie at the suit of a citizen to compel a railroad company which had violated the act to take the operation of the line under its own management, as the remedy by injunction given by the statute was adequate and exclusive. State v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 62 N. H. 29.

h. Arbitration. It seems that where there is a provision in the charter or governing statute of a quasi-public corporation, like a gas or water company, requiring it to sell out to the city after a certain time, if the latter shall elect to purchase, at a price to be fixed by arbitrators, mandamus will lie after the city's election to purchase to compel the company to join in the appointment of arbitrators as provided by the statute.⁴⁷

i. Taxation. Mandamus is a proper remedy to compel a corporation or its officers to perform a specific legal duty imposed upon them by statute in connection with the assessment and collection of taxes against the corporation or its stock-holders,⁴⁸ unless some other adequate remedy is provided.⁴⁹

Furnishing list of stock-holders.—Mandamus will lie to compel a corporation or its officers to comply with a statute requiring it to furnish to the proper public officers, for purposes of taxation, a list of the stock-holders with their places of residence and the amount of stock held by them. Firemen's Ins. Co. v. Baltimore, 23 Md. 296.

Inspection of books, papers, etc.—Mandamus lies to compel a corporation or its officers to permit the proper public officer to inspect its books and papers for the purpose of listing its property for taxation or determining property subject to taxation. State v. Workingmen's Bldg., etc., Assoc., 152 Ind. 278, 53 N. E. 168 (inspection of books of building and loan association to ascertain and list property subject to taxation); *State v. But where a testator was a stock-holder in a corporation, it was held that the public treasurer under the tax law could subpoena its officers to determine the value of the stock for purposes of the transfer tax, and that an examination of its book by the executors was unnecessary for that purpose. Matter of Kennedy, 75 N. Y. App. Div. 188, 77 N. Y. Suppl. 714 [reversing 37 Misc. 317, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 457].

Compelling officer to testify.—The writ will also lie to compel the officers of a corporation to answer questions before the board of equalization on an examination for the purpose of determining whether property has been omitted from taxation. Satterwhite v. State, 142 Ind. 1, 40 N. E. 654, 1087, examination of officer of a bank to determine whether taxpayers had deposits therein not returned or assessed for taxation.

To compel payment of tax.—It has also been held that mandamus will lie, where there is no other adequate remedy, to compel the proper officer of a corporation to pay a tax assessed against it on its capital stock, or a tax on the shares of its capital stock under a statute requiring it to pay the same and allowing it to deduct the amount paid from the dividends due to the stock-holders. Barney v. State, 42 Md. 480; Emory v. State, 41 Md. 38; State v. Mayhew, 2 Gill (Md.) 487; St. Albans v. National Car Co., 57 Vt. 68. See also McVeagh v. Chicago, 49 Ill. 319, 330. Mandamus will lie to compel a railroad company to pay tax upon its capital stock, where its liability has been fully established and there is no other adequate remedy, as in the case where it has leased its road to a foreign corporation and owns no personal property of any material value. Person v. Warren R. Co., 32 N. J. L. 441. See also Belvidere v. Warren R. Co., 34 N. J. L. 193; Silverthorne v. Warren R. Co., 33 N. J. L. 372.

Remedy provided by statute.—It was held that mandamus would not lie to compel the cashier of a bank to pay the tax on the stock of delinquent taxpayers under a statute making bank-stock assessable to the owners in the town where the bank was located, and pro-

j. Mandamus to Particular Corporations—(i) *RAILROAD COMPANIES*⁵⁰—(A) In General. It is well settled that where a specific legal duty is imposed by law upon a railroad company for the benefit of the public, and there is a clear violation of such duty, mandamus will lie to compel performance,⁵¹ unless some other adequate remedy is provided,⁵² or unless performance in for some reason impossible.⁵³

(B) Completion of Road. Thus mandamus will lie to compel a railroad company to construct and complete its road, if a legal duty to do so, as distinguished from mere permission, is imposed upon it by its charter,⁵⁴ unless performance of the duty is impossible.⁵⁵

(c) Restoration, Equipment, and Operation of Road in General. Man-

Legal duty to construct road.—As will be seen from the cases above cited, there has been some difference of opinion as to whether in particular cases a railroad company is under a legal duty to construct its road or whether it has mere permission to do so, in which case it cannot be compelled by mandamus. damus will also lie to compel a railroad company to perform its legal duty with respect to the restoration and operation of its road,⁵⁶ unless some other adequate remedy is provided.⁵⁷ Thus it has been held that the writ will lie to compel restoration of a railroad or a part thereof constructed under a statute providing that the public should have the beneficial enjoyment of the same on the payment of certain rates;⁵⁸ to compel a railroad company to operate its whole road, including a bridge, as one connected and continuous line;⁵⁹ to restore and operate its line to the terminus fixed by its charter;⁶⁰ or to reinstate and operate an abandoned branch or line, where the company is under a legal duty to do so, and has not merely an option or discretion in the matter.⁶¹ The writ will not lie to Duty as to operation of road see, generally, RAILROADS.

Impossibility of performance see supra, VII, A, 9, c.

57. See supra, VII, A, 9, j, (1), (A), text and note 52. Mandamus will not lie in the first instance to compel a railroad company to operate its road or to control it in the operation thereof, where a statute provides an adequate remedy by application to the railroad commissioners. People v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co., 172 N. Y. 90, 64 N. E. 788 [affirming 69 N. Y. App. Div. 549, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 202]. So, where a statute prohibited the operation of a railroad by a rival and competing line and provided that any citizen might apply for an injunction to prevent it, the court held that a citizen, as such, could not petition for a writ of mandamus to compel a railroad company, one of two rival and competing roads, to operate its own road. *State v. doned and the track diverted to a different point not at tide-water.

United States.—People v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., 42 Fed. 638; Farmers' Loan, etc., Co. v. Henning, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,666.

Where no legal duty is imposed.—The writ will not lie to compel a railroad company to reinstate and operate a line where no duty to do so is imposed by its charter or by statute, but the same is merely permissive or enabling. San Antonio St. R. Co. v. State, 90 Tex. 520, 39 S. W. 926, 59 Am. St. Rep. 834, 35 L. R. A. 662; Sherwood v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 94 Va. 291, 26 S. E. 943; Reg. v. Great Western R. Co., 62 L. J. Q. B. 572, 69 L. T. Rep. N. S. 572, 9 Reports 127. As to the existence of the duty see, generally, RAILROADS.

Discretion of court.—Even where there is a legal duty, the granting of the writ rests somewhat in the discretion of the court, and it may be denied where the circumstances are such that it would be useless or futile, and of no public benefit. State v. Dodge City, etc., R. Co., 53 Kan. 329, 36 Pac. 755, 24 L. R. A. 564, where the court refused on this ground to grant the writ to compel a railroad company to replace or repair its track, a part of which had been torn up, because the company was wholly insolvent and without equipment, funds, or property, and the road had been abandoned for several months and could not be operated by any one except at a great loss. See also People v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 103 N. Y. 95, 8 N. E. 369, holding that where a railroad company owning by consolidation two lines of road could substantially accommodate the people by operating one line only between the same points and abandon the other without any serious detriment to any considerable number control the company's discretion as to the equipment and operation of its road.⁶²

(D) *Construction and Maintenance of Bridges, Viaducts, Crossings, Fences, Etc.*⁶³ If a railroad company constructs its road, it is under a legal duty to construct and maintain the same in such manner and with such safeguards as may be prescribed by its charter, by statute, by valid municipal ordinance, or by the common law,⁶⁴ and performance of such duty will be compelled by mandamus,⁶⁵ unless some other adequate remedy is provided.⁶⁶ Thus the writ will lie to compel a railroad company to so construct its road as not to obstruct a navigable stream;⁶⁷ to remove an obstruction from a public ditch;⁶⁸ to build and maintain proper bridges, viaducts, and the like;⁶⁹ to construct and maintain proper street and highway crossings, including necessary bridges, viaducts, and approaches thereto, etc.⁷⁰ It is likewise held that the writ will lie to compel a railroad com-of people, should not be compelled by mandamus to operate both lines at a great sacrifice of money. And see Crane v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 74 Iowa 330, 37 N. W. 397, 7 Am. St. Rep. 479.

Option.—Where by statute a railroad company has an option, when its line crosses a turnpike road or public highway, either to carry the road over the railway or the railway over the road, a writ of mandamus commanding the company to do one of these things, instead of allowing them the option, is bad unless it shows on its face circumstances which establish impossibility of the company exercising the option. Other remedy.—Mandamus will not lie if some other adequate remedy is provided. People v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 158 N. Y. 410, 53 N. E. 166 [affirming 31 N. Y. App. Div. 334, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 234]; Matter of Waverly, 35 N. Y. App. Div. 38, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 368 [affirmed in 158 N. Y. 710, 53 N. E. 1133], holding that mandamus was excluded by a statutory remedy by application to the railroad commissioners. See supra, VII, A, 2, 9, a. It has been held, however, that a statute providing that suit might be brought to compel a railroad company to construct crossings as required by the act was not exclusive of the remedy by mandamus (State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 29 Nebr. 412, 45 N. W. 469); and that mandamus to compel construction of proper street crossings will lie notwithstanding the city is given the right to construct the same on failure of the company to do so, and to bring suit against the company for the cost and for a penalty, such remedy not being adequate or exclusive (State v. New York, etc., R. Co., 71 Conn. 43, 40 Atl. 925; Vandalia R. Co. v. State, (Ind. 1906) 76 N. E. 980; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Dallas, 98 Tex. 396, 84 S. W. 648, 70 L. R. A. 850 [reversing on other grounds (Civ. App. 1904) 78 S. W. 525]; State v. Lake Erie, etc., R. Co., 83 Fed. 284). Liability of the company to indictment does not prevent mandamus. See supra, VII, A, 9, a, text and note 20.

Impossibility see supra, VII, A, 9, c.

Grade not yet changed by city.—Mandamus may be prosecuted to determine the mode in which the respondent shall be required to restore a street, and to compel it to perform its duty, although the city council has not yet changed the established grade of the street to conform to the level which the relator claims should be adopted. State v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 39 Minn. 219, 39 N. W. 153.

Concurrent duty of another company.—The fact that it was necessary, to accomplish the purposes proposed, that another company should also bridge its tracks, was held not fatal to the proceeding against defendant company, the former company having been in fact required to construct the bridges over its tracks. State v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 39 Minn. 219, 39 N. W. 153. But on the other hand it has been held that a suit in equity, where all the rights and duties of the parties may be adjusted, and not mandamus, is the proper remedy for compelling the bridging of the tracks of several railroad companies where they cross streets; individual action by a single railroad being sufficient in the case of certain bridges, and joint action by all the railroads being necessary where a continuous viaduct crossing the tracks of all of them is required. Burlington, etc., R. Other remedy.—The fact that a statute imposes a penalty on a railroad company for neglecting to make proper farm or private road crossings, to be recovered by the occupant of the farm, does not secure the construction of the crossings or afford an adequate remedy, so as to deprive the occupant of his remedy by mandamus. State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 79 Wis. 259, 48 N. W. 243, 12 L. R. A. 180. Nor is the remedy by action for damages such an adequate remedy as to exclude mandamus. People v. New York Cent., etc., R. (E) Restoration, Paving, and Repair of Streets, Highways, Etc. Mandamus will also lie to compel a railroad company to comply with its duty to restore, pave, or repair a street or highway as required by a statute or valid municipal ordinance,⁷⁴ unless some other adequate remedy is provided;⁷⁵ or to compel it to repair a levee, where there is a legal duty to do so.⁷⁶

(F) *Stations, Depots, Warehouses, Side-Tracks, Switches, Etc.*⁷⁷ Mandamus is a proper remedy to compel a railroad company to furnish and maintain suitable stations, depots, warehouses, side-tracks, switches, etc., at proper points on its line, and to stop trains thereat, for the receipt and discharge of passengers and freight, if a duty to do so is imposed upon it by law,⁷⁸ and no other adequate remedy is provided;⁷⁹ but not if no such duty is imposed by law,⁸⁰ as in the case where the

75. State v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 37 La. Ann. 589. In this case a city granted to a railroad company a right of way through a street and the company bound itself to keep the street in repair, and for the faithful execution of its contract the company, by the terms of the act, was to give a bond; and the act further provided that, if the company should fail to fulfil its obligation after due notice, the city council "should have said violation rectified," and recover the cost before any court of competent jurisdiction. It was held that mandamus would not lie to compel the company to repair the street, as the other remedy provided must be resorted to.

76. State v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 42 La. not be construed as extending to an obligation to construct a new levee or embankment.

(I) Receipt, Transportation, and Delivery of Freight or Passengers, Etc.—(1) IN GENERAL.⁹⁵ Mandamus will lie to compel a railroad company to perform its duties as a common carrier by the receipt, transportation, and delivery of freight and passengers or otherwise.⁹⁶ Thus it has been held that it will lie in a proper case to compel a railroad company to furnish cars for shipment of freight, and to transport and deliver the same, without unlawful discrimination;⁹⁷ to receive, transport, and discharge live stock offered for transportation

Beyond its own line.—A railroad company cannot be compelled, as a common carrier, to receive goods at stations along its line for transportation, on the requirement of the consignor that it shall itself deliver the goods at a point beyond or off its own line, or to deliver goods received by it for transportation at such point. The legal duty of the company in that regard is commensurate only with its franchise. It is confined to its own line of road, and cannot be made to extend beyond it. People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 55 Ill. 95, 8 Am. Rep. 631. Nor can a railroad company chartered with certain express powers and privileges, with certain termini within which they are to be exercised, be compelled to purchase for the accommodation of the public more extended privileges beyond the limits of its franchise, so that it may deliver goods at points not upon the line of its road, or within its established termini. People v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., supra.

Anticipation of violation of duty.—Mandamus will not lie in anticipation of a breach of duty, and therefore it will not lie to compel a railroad company to switch cars on a private track, where such switching has been resumed before the filing of the petition and continued ever since; a showing of actual default in performance of a duty at the time being necessary. Mystic Milling Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (Iowa 1906) 107 N. W. 943. So under a statute which provides that it shall be unlawful for any railroad company to discriminate in charges or facilities for transportation, that every company permitting any one to connect a track with its track for the accommodation of any warehouse or elevator, etc., shall accord the same right to every other person soliciting it, which may be enforced by mandamus at the suit of any person entitled to such right, the owner of a warehouse or elevator cannot compel a railroad company to extend a spur of its track away from its existing tracks and over land not belonging to the railroad company, when it has never done a like service to other shippers in the same line of business, but has confined its service to according them facilities for shipment by granting to them leases upon its right of way for the construction of elevators abutting upon its tracks, Northwestern Warehouse Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 32 Wash. 213, 73 Pac. 388. In a proceeding to enforce by mandamus a demand upon a railroad company for an extension of its track to plaintiff's warehouse, an alternative offer to accept from defendant a lease of a portion of its right of way, in accordance with its policy in dealing with other like shippers, cannot be enforced as a demand for a lease, when the offer to accept a lease was too indefinite in its terms to be made the basis for a writ of mandate. over its road and connections;⁹⁸ to switch freight;⁹⁹ to deliver to a particular elevator whatever grain may be consigned to it upon the line of defendant's road;¹ to receive shipments of coal from all coal mines on the line of its road;² to receive freight and passengers from connecting roads as required by statute;³ or to receive tax receipts in payment of freight or passage when such duty is imposed by law.⁴ But it has been held in New York that the writ will not lie at the suit of an individual for refusal of a railroad company to transport goods tendered, on the ground that the remedy in such case by action is adequate.⁵ The writ will not lie to control a railroad company in the exercise of a discretion as to the receipt and transportation of freight.⁶

(2) RATES AND CHARGES. Mandamus will lie to compel a railroad company to receive, transport, and discharge freight or passengers without exacting a discriminating or unlawful rate or charge,⁷ or to compel the issue of a commutation ticket to the relator where it issues such tickets to others under like conditions;⁸ but the writ does not lie to compel a railroad company to receive freight for transportation at less than rates charged on the ground that the rates charged are excessive, where an adequate remedy is provided by statute.⁹

(j) Enforcing Orders of Railroad Commission or Other Like Board. Mandamus will lie to enforce valid orders of the board of railroad commissioners or other like board, where by statute such orders are binding and the company is under a legal duty to obey them;¹⁰ conversely, when such orders are not final statute law of that state prohibited common carriers from bringing into the state intoxicating liquors, including beer, and the article was prima facie within the prohibition, so that it was discretionary with the carrier to refuse to transport it, although in fact it was not an intoxicating liquor.

(κ) Municipal Aid. Mandamus will lie to compel a railroad company to deliver certificates of stock to a county or other municipal corporation which has issued its bonds in aid of the road.¹²

(ι) Public Sale of Lands. It has been held that a provision in the charter of a railroad company directing that all lands unsold at the expiration of a certain number of years from the completion of the road and its branches shall be offered at public sale is of such a vague character that the courts will not enforce such sale by mandamus without further legislation.¹³

(ιι) *STREET RAILROAD COMPANIES.*¹⁴ Mandamus will lie as in other cases to compel a street railroad company to perform duties to the public clearly imposed upon it by law,¹⁵ unless some other adequate remedy is provided;¹⁶ but the duty to do the act sought to be compelled and the legal right of the relator to have it done must clearly appear.¹⁷ The writ will not issue to control the company in matters as Illustrations.—Thus it has been held that the writ will lie to compel a railroad company to comply with an order to put into effect and operation a prescribed tariff of rates for transportation of freight and passengers (State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (Fla. 1906) 40 So. 875; State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 48 Fla. 146, 37 So. 657 [affirmed in 203 U. S. 256, 27 S. Ct. 108]; State v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co., 27 Fla. 403, 9 So. 89); to establish a station or depot at a particular place (Railroad Com'rs v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 63 Me. 269, 18 Am. Rep. 208); to stop certain trains at a station in order that the community may be properly served (Railroad Com'rs v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 71 S. C. 130, 50 S. E. 641); or to remove a grade crossing and carry tracks over a street (Woodruff v. New York, etc., R. Co., 59 Conn. 63, 20 Atl. 17).

A. 444 (holding that an order of the railroad commissioners directing a company to restore and operate a local passenger train as it was previously operated would not be enforced by mandamus, since under the statute it was not final and conclusive, but advisory only); State v. Kansas Cent. R. Co., 47 Kan. 497, 28 Pac. 208 (holding to the same effect with respect to an order of the board of railroad commissioners requiring a railroad company to repair its track); People v. New York, etc., R. Co., 104 N. Y. 58, 9 N. E. 856, 58 Am. Rep. 484 (holding that a legal duty to establish a station-house for passengers awaiting transportation or a warehouse for freight was not imposed under the former New York statute by an order of the railroad commissioners, since they had power merely to hear and determine questions arising between the people and railroad companies, and no power was given to them or to any court to enforce their decisions).

Sufficiency of demand.—A demand by a county upon a railroad company for certificates of "preferred stock," although the precise character of the certificate is not specified, is sufficiently definite to warrant a proceeding by mandamus to obtain a proper certificate, the one offered being objectionable as implying, by its terms, that the county is something other than a stockholder. 17. Mandamus does not lie to compel a railroad company to furnish certain passenger service where it does not appear that such company has the right to run its trains as prayed in the petition. People v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 122 Ill. App. 422. Mandamus will not lie on the petition of a private citizen merely to settle some doubtful question, but to entitle him to the writ he must clearly show that he has a legal right which has been denied and that the denial of such right affects his personal interests; the writ is never awarded to settle mere abstract rights unaccompanied with substanto which it has a mere option or privilege¹⁸ or matters within its discretion,¹⁹ or to require performance of an act which is not within its power.²⁰ In proper cases mandamus will lie to compel a street railroad company to comply with a statute or binding municipal ordinance as to the location and construction of its road,²¹ to restore, pave, or repair streets and highways where they are occupied by its tracks as required by statute or binding ordinance,²² or to change the location or construction of its line to permit a street improvement;²³ to compel a company operating by electricity to construct safe-guards, as required by ordinance, where its wires cross those of a telegraph or telephone company whose rights were previously acquired;²⁴ or to compel the company to give proper service or to resume the operation of an abandoned or discontinued line,²⁵ to comply with a valid ordi-

Want of franchise from municipality.—A street railway company which has occupied public highways for several years in the operation of its line without a grant or privilege or franchise from the municipality cannot urge that objection for the purpose of relief against its enforced continuance to operate its line thereon, when its use and occupation of such highways has been undisturbed. *State v. Discretion of court.—But it was held not an abuse of discretion for the court to refuse to compel removal of a cross-over switch not conforming to plan, where it served the public interest and was located as directed by the city officials. Hartford v. Hartford St. R. Co., 74 Conn. 194, 50 Atl. 393.

Other remedy of landowner.—Where an owner of property abutting on a street claimed to suffer annoyance from the maintenance by a street railway company of a cross-over switch, which annoyance was not merely an ordinary incident to the use by the company of double tracks and a cross-over switch, but was peculiar and exceptional because of the physical or other conditions existing at the particular place, it was held that equity would give redress, and that he could not maintain mandamus to compel the removal of the cross-over switch to the place designated in the plan for the construction of the tracks. State v. Hartford St. R. Co., 76 Conn. 174, 56 Atl. 506.

Absence of duty.—Where there is no legal duty to operate a line, but a mere permis-

nance regulating the sale of tickets over its lines,²⁶ to give transfers as required by law,²⁷ or to comply with a condition as to the amount of fare agreed to by it in consideration of a grant by the city of the right to use its streets.²⁸

(iii) TERMINAL COMPANIES. Mandamus will lie to compel a terminal company to comply with a binding order of the railroad commissioners to admit a railroad company to the privileges of its common passenger station or terminal.²⁹

(iv) SUBWAY OR TUNNEL COMPANIES. Mandamus will also lie against a subway or tunnel company to compel it to accord space in its tunnel or subway to other companies in case of a clear right and plain legal duty.³⁰

(v) STEAMBOAT, ETC., COMPANIES. Steamboat companies and other watercraft may be compelled by mandamus to furnish certified lists of the tons of freight and number of passengers passed through canal locks as required by statute, or to perform other duties clearly imposed by law.³¹

(vi) EXPRESS COMPANIES. Mandamus will also lie to compel express companies to perform the duties imposed upon them by law as common carriers or otherwise,³² such as the duty to receive and carry goods offered them for transportation;³³ but they will not be compelled to carry fragile goods, such as glassware, subject to all common-law liabilities of a common carrier.³⁴

(vii) *TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANIES.*³⁵ Telephone companies are common carriers and mandamus will lie to compel them to furnish telephones with the necessary connections and service, without discrimination, where they are under a legal duty to do so;³⁶ but it will not lie at the instance of a telephone company to compel a telegraph company to permit a telephone to be placed in its

sion or privilege, mandamus will not lie to compel its operation. San Antonio St. R. Co. v. State, 90 Tex. 520, 39 S. W. 926, 59 Am. St. Rep. 834, 35 L. R. A. 662.

E. 596 [dismissing appeal from 85 N. Y. App. Div. 407, 83 N. Y. Suppl. 622]. A writ of mandamus should not issue at the instance of a municipal corporation to compel a street railway company to give transfers when the obligations of the company to do so arises wholly from its assent to certain municipal ordinances which of themselves have no legislative force. Newark v. North Jersey St. R. Co., (N. J. Sup. 1906) 62 Atl. 1003.

Other remedy.—The remedy by repeated actions at law to recover damages for violation of the duty to give transfers is not such an adequate remedy as to exclude mandamus. Richmond R., etc., Co. v. Brown, 97 Va. 26, 32 S. E. 775. And see supra, VII, A, 2, 9, a. Contra, People v. Interurban St. R. Co., 177 N. Y. 296, 69 N. E. 596.

See also TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

Other remedy.—The fact that the statute imposes a penalty for failure of a telephone company to furnish a telephone to a person entitled thereto does not exclude the remedy by mandamus. Central Union Tel. Co. v. State, 118 Ind. 194, 19 N. E. 604, 10 Am. St. Rep. 114. Contra, People v. Central New York Tel., etc., Co., 41 N. Y. App. Div. 17, 58 N. Y. Suppl. 221. But mandamus will not lie to compel a telephone company to furnish a telephone and service at less than the amount charged by it on the ground that the charge is excessive, where the statute provides a remedy by application to the board of transportation. Nebraska Tel. Co. v. State, 55 Nebr. 627, 76 N. W. 171, 45 L. R. A. 113.

In favor of another telephone company.—Under the New York Transportation Corporations Law, § 103 (Gen. Laws, c. 40; Laws (1890), c. 566), requiring every such corporation to receive despatches from or for other telegraph or telephone lines, and, on payment of the usual charges, to transmit them with impartiality and good faith, and in the order received, and providing for a penalty for refusal to do so, one telephone company is not obliged to install an instrument in the offices of another company for the use of the latter's patrons. Effect of contracts with others.—By the weight of authority a telephone company cannot be exonerated from its duty to furnish telephones and service by any conditions or restrictions imposed by contract with the owner of the invention applied in the exercise of the employment. Chesapeake, etc., Tel. Co. v. Baltimore, etc., Tel. Co., 66 Md. 399, 7 Atl. 809, 59 Am. Rep. 167; State v. Bell Tel. Co., 36 Ohio St. 296, 38 Am. Rep. 583; Commercial Union Tel. Co. v. Bell Tel. Co., 23 Fed. 539. Contra, American Rapid Tel. Co. v. Connecticut Tel. Co., 49 Conn. 352, 44 Am. Rep. 237. A telegraph company may compel a telephone company to give the use of its service, notwithstanding the latter has made an exclusive contract with another telegraph company. Bell Tel. Co. v. Com., 17 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 505; Delaware, etc., Tel., etc., Co. v. Delaware, supra.

Breach of prior contract.—Mandamus will lie to compel a telephone company to furnish petitioner with telephone facilities, although petitioner has not complied with a previous contract with respondent, whereby he agreed to use respondent's telephone exclusively, the remedy of respondent being in an action for breach of the contract. State v. Citizens' Tel. Co., 61 S. C. 83, 39 S. E. 257, 85 Am. St. Rep. 870, 55 L. R. A. 139.

Impossibility of performance.—It is a sufficient return to a writ of mandamus to compel respondent to furnish telephone facilities to petitioner that it has not the means to at once comply with the demand. State v. Citizens' Tel. Co., 61 S. C. 83, 39 S. E. 257, 85 Am. St. Rep. 870, 55 L. R. A. 139.

37. People v. Western Union Tel. Co., 166 Ill. 15, 46 N. E. 731, 36 L. R. A. 637, holding also that this is true, even though the company has waived its rights in this respect as against another telephone company by permitting it to install a telephone.

but by the weight of authority telegraph companies cannot be compelled to furnish market quotations given to it by stock exchanges, boards of trade, and the like, to persons not members of the same, as such bodies are not bound to furnish information concerning their business to persons not members.³⁹

(vii) BRIDGE COMPANIES.⁴⁰ Mandamus will lie to compel a bridge company to repair or rebuild and maintain its bridge as required by its charter,⁴¹ unless some other adequate remedy is provided⁴² or the obligation is not imposed by law, but rests in contract only.⁴³

(ix) LIGHTING, HEATING, FUEL, AND POWER COMPANIES.⁴⁴ A corporation which occupies streets or highways, with its mains, pipes, or wires, and is engaged in the business of furnishing gas or electricity for light, heat, fuel, or power, is under a legal duty to supply any person who applies therefor and complies with its reasonable regulations, and if it wrongfully refuses to do so mandamus will lie;⁴⁵ but the relator must establish a clear legal right,⁴⁶ and the writ will not lie

Bucket-shops.—An answer to an alternative writ of mandamus to compel a telegraph company to sell and deliver to relator the continuous market quotations of a board of trade, which alleges that relator was, at the institution of the suit, engaged in purloining such quotations and using them in conducting a bucket-shop, and that he desires the quotations for the purpose of conducting a bucket-shop, sufficiently alleges that the relator desires the quotations for gambling purposes, and is a good answer in bar. Western Union Tel. Co. v. State, 165 Ind. 492, 76 N. E. 100, 3 L. R. A. N. S. 153. Where a board of trade and a telegraph company have agreed that the company shall not deliver the market quotations of the board, unless the applicant therefor agrees not to use them for the purpose of conducting a bucket-shop, the court will not compel the company to deliver the quotations to an applicant who refuses to agree not to use them for an illegal purpose. 43. State v. Republican River Bridge Co., 20 Kan. 404. In this case a bridge company accepted the terms and conditions of an act of the legislature, built the bridge as provided by the act, and the same was accepted by the governor, and the company deposited with the governor a bond by which it became obligated to the state to maintain the bridge in good condition forever, and indemnified the state against any losses by reason of the guaranty given by the state to the United States, and thereupon the company received a patent for four thousand acres of land granted by the United States to the state to aid in the construction of the bridge. It was held that mandamus would not lie to compel the company to rebuild and maintain the bridge, as the remedy, if any existed, was on the bond.

(XIII) DOCK COMPANIES. A corporation authorized to construct and maintain a dock on navigable waters may be compelled by mandamus to perform the duties imposed by its charter or by statute.⁷⁰

(XIV) TURNPIKE AND TOLL-ROAD COMPANIES.⁷¹ Mandamus will lie to compel turnpike and toll-road companies to repair their roads or perform other duties imposed by law,⁷² unless some other adequate remedy is provided,⁷³ but not to enforce obligations not imposed by law, but arising out of contract relations only.⁷⁴

(XV) INSURANCE COMPANIES. Mandamus lies to compel an insurance company to submit its books, papers, and records to a public officer for an examination into its affairs as required by statute;⁷⁵ and they may be compelled to report, but not to submit to an examination not provided for by law,⁷⁶ nor to send to policy-holders a different statement of nominations for offices than is required by statute,⁷⁷ and the superintendent of insurance cannot be compelled to change a nomination for office in a company, where such change is not authorized by statute.⁷⁸ Nor, as a general rule, will the writ lie to compel the company to pay a debt or perform a mere contract obligation.⁷⁹

(XVI) CEMETERY COMPANIES.⁸⁰ Mandamus will lie against a cemetery association or its officers to enforce the right of the owner of a lot to bury a member of his family therein.⁸¹

(XVII) LIVE-STOCK COMPANIES. A cattle-breeding corporation formed for Impossibility.—It has been held that as mandamus is a discretionary remedy, it is not per se an abuse of discretion to order the writ to issue, notwithstanding the answer of the corporation, taken as true on demurrer, that it "has no funds nor any means of obtaining such," and "if said canal were put in navigable condition, it would not be profitable to operate it," for so long as the corporation retains its franchise, the unprofitableness of the same is immaterial; and although want of means may avail as a reason for not inflicting punishment for disobedience of the writ, it affords no conclusive reason against ordering the writ to issue. *Savannah, etc., Canal Co. v. by its charter, the company should cease to charge toll and permit all persons to pass thereon free until the road should be properly repaired and certified to by the directors of the board of freeholders.

improving breeds, being a purely private corporation, will not be compelled by mandamus to admit a member or to permit registry or inspection of the herd book by one not a member.⁸²

(xviii) NEWS PUBLISHING COMPANIES. It has been held that mandamus will not lie to compel the Associated Press, a corporation engaged in the business of gathering and transmitting news for publication, to furnish to the publisher of a newspaper the same news service extended to others, since the performance of a contract for such service necessarily involves and requires for a long time the exercise of judgment, continuous supervision, special experience, and business discretion, and the courts are unable to enforce such performance.⁸³

k. Corporation in Hands of Receiver.⁸⁴ Where a court having jurisdiction has appointed a receiver for a railroad company, and he is in possession of the road, its property, and assets, and is proceeding in execution of the trust under the direction and orders of the court, mandamus will not lie from another court against the corporation or the receiver directing their conduct in operating the road,⁸⁵ the remedy being by motion or petition in the court which appointed the receiver;⁸⁶ but it has been held that the writ may be issued by the court appointing the receiver to compel him to comply with a statute or ordinance requiring the construction of an overhead crossing in a city.⁸⁷

12. RELIGIOUS OR ECCLESIASTICAL CORPORATIONS.¹ Mandamus will lie to restore a trustee of an incorporated church,² or to restore a minister, curate, or other ecclesiastical or spiritual officer to his office when he has been wrongfully removed or excluded, and when temporal rights, such as agreed salary, stipends, or emoluments are annexed to the office and belong to the incumbent;³ but where no temporal rights are involved the courts will leave the parties to settle their disputes by the constitution and rules of their organization.⁴ Mandamus will not lie to restore to membership in a church where no temporal rights are involved;⁵ and even where temporal rights are involved the writ will not issue where there has been no demand upon and refusal by the society to reinstate,⁶ where the expulsion was within the rules and regulations of the society,⁷ where the relator, if restored, might be immediately legally expelled,⁸ or where an action for damages will give full and adequate relief.⁹ Nor will the courts interfere until the remedies within the organization provided by its rules and regulations have been exhausted,¹⁰ or inter-

Mandamus will not lie to restore a student who has been expelled from the state university, where the petition merely states that five years after his expulsion he "applied for admission to classes in said university, and was refused because of said suspension," without alleging that he is desirous of again becoming a pupil, or that he will do so if the writ is granted, since the writ will not issue at the suit of a private person unless it affirmatively appears that he will otherwise be deprived of something of substantial value to him. *North v. 36. See FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, 19 Cyc. 1236.

37. North State Copper, etc., Min. Co. v. Field, 64 Md. 151, 20 Atl. 1039, holding that under a statute providing that any foreign corporation transacting business in the state to determine the right to a corporate office therein,³⁸ or to compel the transfer of stock.³⁹ By the weight of authority, however, the court may, at the suit of either a resident or non-resident stock-holder, enforce his right to inspect the books, papers, and records of a foreign corporation, where it is doing business in the state and the books, etc., are in the custody of an officer or agent therein,⁴⁰ although the writ will not lie where the books, etc., are not kept within the state and there is no officer or agent therein having the custody and control of them,⁴¹ even though failure to keep them in the state is in violation of a constitutional or statutory provision under which the corporation is doing business therein.⁴² In New York, however, it has been held that in the absence of a statute mandamus cannot be maintained against a foreign corporation to enforce the right of one of its resident stock-holders to inspect its books and records, where he merely seeks to enforce his right of inspection as a member of the corporation, although the books, the office of the company, and the business thereof are in the state;⁴³ but a foreign corporation maintaining an office for doing business in the state may be compelled by mandamus to deposit and exhibit its stock-book at such office, as required by statute.⁴⁴ Mandamus will not lie to compel a foreign corporation to perform an act which is prerequisite to its right to do business in the state, since the proper remedy is quo warranto or the imposition of the penalty for doing business without complying with the law.⁴⁵

C. Unincorporated Associations. Of course, in the absence of a statute, mandamus will not lie against an unincorporated association as a body, for it has no legal existence as such, but any action must be against the individuals.⁴⁶ As the privileges of membership in a voluntary unincorporated association are not conferred by the sovereign power, but are merely created by the organization should be admitted to exercise franchises therein, and might be sued in any of its courts for any cause of action, the courts of the state have no visitatorial power over foreign corporations, nor jurisdiction to regulate their internal affairs, and could not therefore entertain the application of a stock-holder of a foreign corporation doing business in the state for a writ of mandamus to compel the corporation to annul a forfeiture of his stock and reinstate him as stock-holder. Compare, however, Guilford v. Western Union Tel. Co., 59 Minn. 332, 61 N. W. 324, 50 Am. St. Rep. 407, holding that an action might be maintained by a stock-holder against a foreign corporation to compel it to issue to him a new or duplicate stock certificate in the place of one which had been lost or destroyed, on the ground that the action did not fall within the rule that courts will not exercise visitatorial powers over foreign corporations or interfere with the management of their internal affairs.

itself, courts of law cannot by mandamus compel the admission of an applicant for membership or interfere to restore a member who has been expelled.⁴⁷

VIII. MANDAMUS TO INDIVIDUALS.⁴⁸

In the absence of statutory provision to the contrary, mandamus does not lie against a private citizen.⁴⁹ Moreover, in a jurisdiction where the right to issue mandamus is regulated by statute it has been held that the writ will not issue to individuals in their private relations, or to associations having no chartered powers.⁵⁰ So it is held that the writ will not lie to compel a mere private person occupying no official or quasi-official position to deliver up books or records of a public nature detained by him to a person claiming them in an official capacity.⁵¹

Statutory authority.—N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1919, providing that in certain instances actions may be brought against voluntary associations of seven or more persons, does not authorize the issuance of mandamus to compel a voluntary unincorporated association to restore an expelled member to his rights. *Weidenfeld v. Compelling witness to prove execution of deed.—In Reg. v. O'Meara, 15 U. C. Q. B. 201, it was held, under a statute requiring a witness to prove the signing and sealing of a memorial of a deed and the execution of the deed or conveyance mentioned in such memorial, that mandamus will lie to compel a witness to comply with the statute.

The personal liability of a public officer in the nature of a penalty or for damages or his personal liability as a debtor or bailee cannot be enforced through the medium of a writ of mandamus.⁵² So the writ will not lie to compel the specific performance of a personal contract of service,⁵³ or other merely personal contracts.⁵⁴ But the writ is an appropriate remedy to enforce the performance of a duty to the public by one who, although not a public officer, occupies a relation of a quasi-official character.⁵⁵ So it has been held that one who is holding and executing an office de facto cannot set up as a defense to a writ to compel him to perform the duties of the office that he is not an officer de jure.⁵⁶

IX. JURISDICTION, PROCEEDINGS, AND RELIEF.

A. Jurisdiction⁵⁷ and Venue⁵⁸ — 1. IN ENGLAND AND CANADA. In England the power to issue writs of mandamus was originally confided to the king's bench as having the general supervising power over all inferior jurisdictions and officers,⁵⁹ and this jurisdiction was originally exclusive.⁶⁰ Recent acts of parliament, however, have invested all the superior courts of the kingdom and the court of books, papers, and insignia of an office to be delivered to a relator claiming title thereto by one forcibly and feloniously taking them from relator, where it is not alleged and shown that the respondent pretended to have any right to the office or exercised any functions pertaining to it); State v. Trent, 58 Mo. 571 (holding that mandamus will not lie to compel a mere private person to deliver to the county clerk a book of surveys and plats of the county roads, although the same were made under order of the county court and paid for by the county); Reg. v. Hopkins, 1 Q. B. 160, 10 L. J. Q. B. 63, 4 P. & D. 550, 41 E. C. L. 484. Compare Sudbury First Parish v. Stearns, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 148; Rex v. Ingram, W. Bl. 50.

52. Hewel v. Hugin, (Cal. App. 1905) 84 Pac. 100 (holding that the writ does not lie to the treasurer of an irrigation district to enforce his personal liability for interest on the district bonds); State v. Hale, (Ind. 1906) 77 N. E. 802; Com. v. Walton, 3 Pa. Dist. 391 (holding that the writ will not lie to recover from an officer a sum of money or property, held by him, not in his official character, but as a private citizen, as for instance to compel a coroner to turn over money found on a deceased person to his administrator).

53. Bailey v. Oviatt, 46 Vt. 627, holding that a stenographer engaged in reporting a legislative investigation, conducted by a legislative committee, is a mere servant or clerk, and cannot be compelled by mandamus to furnish a transcript.

55. Haines v. People, 19 Ill. App. 354 (holding that mandamus will issue to compel the performance of the quasi-public duty of keeping in repair a bridge rendered necessary by a raceway maintained by defendant for his private profit); Nye v. Rose, 17 R. I. 733, 24 Atl. 777.

chancery with power to issue the writ as ancillary or incidental to a cause pending therein, and have created a similar ancillary remedy known as an action of mandamus which is cognizable in those courts.⁶¹ In Ontario either of the superior courts of common law⁶² or the chancery division of the high court of justice⁶³ may issue the writ. In Quebec a prothonotary, except in a case of urgent necessity, has no power to issue the writ even in the absence of the judge.⁶⁴

2. IN THE UNITED STATES — a. At Law — (i) FEDERAL COURTS.⁶⁵ Jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus in otherwise proper cases is vested, within prescribed limits, in the federal supreme court,⁶⁶ the circuit courts of appeals,⁶⁷ and the circuit⁶⁸ and district⁶⁹ courts; and also in the courts of the District of Columbia⁷⁰ and of the various territories.⁷¹

(ii) STATE COURTS — (A) Appellate Courts.⁷² The jurisdiction of the several state courts of last resort and intermediate appellate courts with reference to issuing writs of mandamus varies in the states.⁷³ They are generally authorized to issue such writs in aid of their supervisory jurisdiction, and are not infrequently vested with original jurisdiction to issue the same.⁷⁴

(B) Other Courts.⁷⁵ Courts of general original common-law jurisdiction have inherent power to issue writs of mandamus in proper cases;⁷⁶ and independently

Louisiana.—State v. Judge Twenty-second Judicial Dist. Ct., 35 La. Ann. 637, district court.

New York.—People v. Green, 58 N. Y. 295, holding that a statute which gives to the court of common pleas for the city and county of New York and certain other city courts original jurisdiction in law and equity, concurrent and coextensive with the supreme court, in all civil actions and in all special proceedings of a civil nature, includes proceedings by mandamus.

Texas.—Under Const. art. 5, § 16, as amended, allowing the county court to issue "writs of injunction, mandamus, and all writs" necessary to enforce its jurisdiction, the county court may in certain cases issue writs of mandamus, although not necessary to enforce its jurisdiction. Dean v. State, 88 Tex. 290, 30 S. W. 1047, 31 S. W. 185. Formerly the county court could issue the writ only in aid of its own jurisdiction. Townsend v. Shepard, 3 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 349; Goree v. Dupree, 1 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. § 825.

85. Venue generally see VENUE.

86. The petition may be presented in any county in Massachusetts. Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Hampden County Com'rs, 116 Mass. 73.

Mandamus affecting title to land.—Where the object of the suit is to try the title to land, the suit must be instituted in the county where the land is situated. General Land Office Com'r v. Smith, 5 Tex. 471. However, the venue of a suit against a surveyor to compel the performance of an official duty is in the county of his residence; and the fact that others who are made parties defendant assert an adverse interest in the land does not constitute the proceeding such a suit involving title to land as to require or authorize its institution in the county where the land is situate. Texas Mexican R. Co. v. Locke, 63 Tex. 623. And a proceeding to compel the execution of a sheriff's deed to a redemptioner after sale of land on execution does not involve a determination of a right or interest in the land, and hence it may be instituted in the county where relator resides. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365, 70 Am. Dec. 655.

Mandamus based on judicial proceeding or record.—A proceeding by a passenger to compel a carrier to issue him a transfer may be instituted in the county where the refusal occurred, although the duty to issue transfers appears from the record of another county, the statute providing that jurisdiction of writs of mandamus shall be in the circuit court of the county wherein the record or proceeding is to which the writ relates having no application. Richmond R., etc., Co. v. Brown, 97 Va. 26, 32 S. E. 775. So a proceeding by the receiver of an insolvent bank to compel the state treasurer to pay over, pursuant to a decree in equity, a fund deposited with him as security is properly instituted in the county of the receiver's residence, although the decree to pay over was obtained in another county. Danby Bank v. State Treasurer, 39 Vt. 92.

Mandamus to corporation.—Although a cemetery company has its cemetery in Baltimore county, yet where its charter declares that it shall be located and its principal business be transacted in Baltimore city, and the charter is acknowledged and recorded there, the superior court of that city has jurisdiction over a case of mandamus against the company. Mottu v. Primrose, 23 Md. 482. The United States circuit court for the district of Iowa, under the acts of congress relating to the Union Pacific Railroad Company, has jurisdiction to compel that company to operate its road as required by law, if any part of the road is in the district of Iowa. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,600, 3 Dill. 524. The purpose of the Pennsylvania acts of June 8, 1893 (Pamphl. Laws 345), and March 19, 1903 (Pamphl. Laws 32), construed in pari materia, was to give the courts in the counties where the chief place of business of a corporation is located, or where the corporation transacts its business or has property in whole or in part, the right to proceed by issued,⁸⁷ or the alternative writ may be granted,⁸⁸ is commonly governed by statute.⁸⁹ The order to show cause or the alternative writ may be made returnable outside of the county or division where issued, if before the same court.⁹⁰ The issues may be tried outside of the county in which the proceeding was instituted;⁹¹ but a circuit judge, while in one circuit, has no jurisdiction to hear a proceeding mandamus to compel the performance of any act which should be performed within such county; and where a corporation has its plant and transacts almost all its business in one county, although its principal office is in another and distant county, the common pleas of the first county has jurisdiction of proceedings to compel the corporation to give a stockholder an opportunity to inspect its books and papers. Neubert v. Armstrong Water Co., 211 Pa. St. 582, 61 Atl. 123. Under the same statutes proceedings to compel a water company to supply water should be brought in the county where the supply is sought to be had, and not in the county where the principal office of the company is located (Euwer v. Water Co., 10 Del. Co. (Pa.) 70, 36 Pittsb. Leg. J. N. S. 323); and if a railroad company has constructed and operates its road wholly in one county, where its operating officers reside, but has its principal office in another county, mandamus proceedings may be instituted against it in either (Loraine v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 205 Pa. St. 132, 54 Atl. 580, 61 L. R. A. 502). It has been held, however, that where a railroad company operates in several counties, and has its chief offices in but one of them, the proceeding must be instituted in that one. Com. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 4 Pa. Dist. 362. And see Whitemarsh Tp. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 365.

Mandamus to county.—A proceeding against a county must be brought therein. McBane v. People, 50 Ill. 503 (holding that a statute providing that "all suits" against a county must be there brought applies to mandamus); Woodman v. Somerset County Com'rs, 24 Me. 151 (where it was intimated that the proceeding should be instituted in the supreme court while sitting in the county sued); Alexander v. McDowell County Com'rs, 67 N. C. 330 (semble); Johnston v. Cleveland County, 67 N. C. 101 (semble).

Mandamus to public officer.—A motion for a writ of mandamus against a public officer should be made in the district embracing the county wherein an issue of fact joined on an alternative writ is triable, which is the county where the material facts took place, unless the court directs otherwise. People v. Myers, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 479, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 365 [affirmed in 112 N. Y. 676, 20 N. E. 417]. It has been held that an application for mandamus is not in itself a suit or action within 2 N. Y. Rev. St. 353, § 14, which provides that every action against a public officer for or concerning any act done by virtue of his office shall be laid in the county where the fact complained of happened, but that it is to be regarded as a motion within Code Civ. Proc. § 401. Mason

v. Willers, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 23; People v. Schuyler, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 78.

Residence of parties.—A proceeding against the superintendent of an insane asylum to compel him to grant a certificate of discharge may be commenced in the county where the lunatic is staying and where all the parties reside, although the asylum is located elsewhere. Statham v. Blackford, 89 Va. 771, 17 S. E. 233. So a proceeding against the keeper of a penitentiary may be instituted in the county where he resides and has his principal office, and if others are aiding him in alleged illegal acts, they may be joined with him in the same action, although residents of a different county. Penitentiary Co. No. 2 v. Nelms, 67 Ga. 565.

87. Issuance in county in which writ is not intended to operate.—The rule to show cause may issue in a county other than that in which the writ is intended to operate. Taylor v. Henry, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 397; People v. Fulton County, 70 Hun (N. Y.) 560, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 397 [affirmed in 139 N. Y. 656, 35 N. E. 208]; Wayne Tp. v. Green Tp., Wright (Ohio) 292, semble.

88. The supreme court, at a session in either of its districts, may issue an alternative writ to any part of the state. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Canal Com'rs, 21 Pa. St. 9. And see Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Hampden County Com'rs, 116 Mass. 73; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496. Contra, People v. Vermilion County, 40 Ill. 125. And see Hotchkiss v. Grattan, 90 Va. 642, 19 S. E. 165.

89. See the statutes of the different states.

90. Territory v. Shearer, 2 Dak. 332, 8 N. W. 135; Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Hampden County Com'rs, 116 Mass. 73; Jones v. McMahan, 30 Tex. 719, except writs against the heads of departments, which are returnable at the seat of government. See, however, People v. Ouray, 4 Colo. 291, holding that a writ issued by a district judge in vacation may not be made returnable at his pleasure into any county of his district, but must be made returnable in the county where the parties defendant may be properly impleaded.

A rule or writ issuing out of one county to operate in another should be made returnable into the latter. Woodman v. Somerset County Com'rs, 24 Me. 151; Wayne Tp. v. Green Tp., Wright (Ohio) 292, semble. And see People v. Fulton County, 70 Hun (N. Y.) 560, 24 N. Y. Suppl. 397 [affirmed in 139 N. Y. 656, 35 N. E. 208]. This was formerly the law in Massachusetts (Taylor v. Henry, 2 Pick. 397); but is no longer (Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Hampden County Com'rs, 116 Mass. 73).

91. Territory v. Shearer, 2 Dak. 332, 8 N. W. 135; Taylor v. Henry, 2 Pick. (Mass.)

arising wholly in another circuit.⁹² The trial is sometimes required by statute to be held in the county of respondent's residence,⁹³ or the county where the matters complained of occurred.⁹⁴ In some jurisdictions mandamus is regarded as a civil action, subject to change of venue as such.⁹⁵ Ordinarily a court may issue a peremptory writ to any county or district within the limits of its territorial jurisdiction.⁹⁶

4. JURISDICTION AS AFFECTED BY CONSENT OR WAIVER. Jurisdiction to issue a writ of mandamus cannot be conferred on the court solely by consent of the parties to the proceeding,⁹⁷ nor by waiver.⁹⁸

B. Time For Instituting Proceeding — 1. LIMITATIONS.⁹⁹ In many states the statutes of limitation do not apply to mandamus proceedings,¹ although the courts may require such proceedings to be instituted within the time fixed by the statutes for the prosecution of analogous rights.² In other states they are regarded as

93. State v. Scarborough, 70 S. C. 288, 49 S. E. 860.

94. McMillan v. Richards, 9 Cal. 365, 70 Am. Dec. 655, holding, however, that the statute which provides that actions against a public officer for acts done by him in virtue of his office shall be tried in the county where the cause arose applies only to affirmative acts of the officer by which in the execution of process or otherwise he interferes with the property or rights of third persons, and not to mere omissions or neglect of official duty.

N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 2068, provides that a mandamus can be granted by the supreme court only in the district embracing the county wherein an issue of fact joined on an alternative writ is triable, and section 2084 provides that such issue of fact is triable in the county where the material facts took place, unless the court directs otherwise. It was held that a motion for a writ commanding the city controller of New York to draw his warrant for payment of unpaid taxes into the state treasury was properly made in the district where the following acts were actually or constructively performed, viz.: The equalization of the valuations of the counties by the state board; the filing of the statement of such equalization; the notification of the proper officers in the respective counties of the valuation; and the failure to pay the tax into the state treasury. People v. Myers, 50 Hun 479, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 365 [affirmed in 112 N. Y. 676, 20 N. E. 417].

95. McBane v. People, 50 Ill. 503; Williamsport v. Com., 90 Pa. St. 498.

96. See cases cited infra, this note.

This is true in Delaware, where it is held that the superior court, while sitting in one county, may issue a peremptory writ to any other county (Hastings v. Henry, 1 Marv. (Del.) 287, 40 Atl. 1125 [citing Knight v. Ferris, 6 Houst. (Del.) 283 (reversing 6 Houst. 146)]); also, it seems, in Massachusetts with reference to the supreme judicial court (Boston, etc., R. Co. v. Hampden County Com'rs, 116 Mass. 73, 83; Taylor v. Henry, 2 Pick. 397); but not, it seems, in Ohio with reference to the old supreme court (Wayne Tp. v. Green Tp., Wright (Ohio) 292).

A circuit or district court may issue a peremptory writ to any part of the circuit or district (Ex p. Carnochan, T. U. P. Charlt. (Ga.) 216), but not to a place beyond those limits (Shields v. State, 86 Ala. 584, 6 So. 271; Dunbar v. Frazer, 78 Ala. 529; Welch v. People, 38 Ill. 20), in the absence of constitution or statute to the contrary (Kings County v. Johnson, 104 Cal. 198, 37 Pac. 870).

Courts of last resort.—In Pennsylvania the supreme court, at a session in either of its districts, may issue a peremptory writ to any part of state (Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496. And see Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Canal Com'rs, 21 Pa. St. 9); but the rule is otherwise as to the court of appeals of Virginia (Hotchkiss v. Grattan, 90 Va. 642, 19 S. E. 165), and also, it seems, as to the supreme court of Illinois (People v. Vermilion County, 40 Ill. 125).

97. Welch v. People, 38 Ill. 20, holding that the circuit court of one circuit cannot thus acquire jurisdiction to issue a writ of mandamus to operate within the limits of another circuit. And see, generally, Courts, 11 Cyc. 673 et seq. See, however, Statham v. Blackford, 89 Va. 771, 17 S. E. 233.

The rule that consent cannot give jurisdiction does not apply where the objection is merely a personal privilege or exemption which may be waived. Therefore the court of common pleas of any county in the state may have jurisdiction in mandamus proceedings against state officers if such officers waive their privilege of exemption and consent to the jurisdiction of the court. Com. v. Barnett, 199 Pa. St. 161, 162, 48 Atl. 976, 55 L. R. A. 882.

The delay must be unreasonable in order to constitute laches (Savannah v. State, 4 Ga. 26, and cases cited infra, this paragraph), and whether the delay was unreasonable depends on the facts of the particular case (State v. Gibson, 187 Mo. 536, 86 S. W. 177). Delay held not to be unreasonable see Careaga v. Fernald, 66 Cal. 351, 5 Pac. 615 (eleven months); Taylor v. Gillette, 52 Conn. 216 (two years); Wood v. State, 155 Ind. 1, 55 N. E. 959 (sixteen months); People v. Greene, 95 N. Y. App. Div. 397, 88 N. Y. Suppl. 601 (ten days); People v. Grant, 61 N. Y. App. Div. 238, 70 N. Y. Suppl. 504 (thirteen years); People v. Brady, 49 N. Y. App. Div. 238, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 145 (two months; fourteen months); People v. Feitner, 49 N. Y. App. Div. 101, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 969, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 209 [affirming 29 Misc. 702, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 969] (four months); People v. Lantry, 48 N. Y. App. Div. 131, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 630 [reversing 27 Misc. 160, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 770] (four months and eighteen days); Matter of McDonald, 34 N. Y. App. Div. 512, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 525 (four months); People v. Cady, 50 N. Y. Super. Ct. 399 (six years); State v. Jennings, 48 Wis. 549, 4 N. W. 641; U. S. v. Ottawa Auditors, 28 Fed. 407 (seven years). Excuse for delay see infra, this subsection.

To defeat the right to mandamus the laches must be gross.—Savannah v. State, 4 Ga. 26.

Right to assert laches.—A purchaser of shares of stock from the equitable owner thereof, whose ownership was not disputed by his associates in interest, in whose name the stock was held, is not precluded by laches from compelling the company to issue a certificate of such stock to him, since it is a matter of no concern to the officers of the company how the stock is held, it being their duty to make a transfer of stock whenever properly directed. Banker v. Montana Gold, etc., Min. Co., (Mont. 1907) 89 Pac. 66.

9. State v. New Orleans Police Bd., 107 La. 162, 31 So. 662; Coot v. Willett, 93 Mich. 304, 53 N. W. 395; Chinn v. Trustees, 32 Ohio St. 236; Duke v. Turner, 204 U. S. 623, 27 S. Ct. 316, 51 L. ed. —. And see cases cited supra, note 8.

If no one interested is prejudiced by the delay, mandamus will not as a rule be refused on the ground of laches. State v. Smith, 172 Mo. 618, 73 S. W. 134; Chinn v. Trustees, 32 Ohio St. 236; Duke v. Turner, 204 U. S. 623, 27 S. Ct. 316, 51 L. ed. —. And see Barker v. Montana Gold, etc., Min. Co., (Mont. 1907) 89 Pac. 66.

10. Kreiling v. Nortrup, 215 Ill. 195, 74 N. E. 123 [affirming 116 Ill. App. 448] (where defendant recognized relator's rights pending the delay, and endeavored to secure them to him); People v. Baker, 49 Misc. (N. Y.) 143, 97 N. Y. Suppl. 453 (holding that a year and a half's delay by a policeman is not a bar to a suit to change his rating, he having made continuous efforts in the meantime to have the correction made); Meyer v. Beaver, 9 S. D. 168, 68 N. W. 310.

Ignorance of his rights does not as a rule excuse a relator's delay. People v. Maxwell, 87 N. Y. App. Div. 391, 84 N. Y. Suppl. 947. See, however, Matter of McDonald, 34 N. Y. App. Div. 512, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 525. Consequently unsound advice of counsel is no excuse. People v. Keating, 49 N. Y. App. Div. 123, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 71; McDowell v. Dalton, 33 Misc. (N. Y.) 359, 68 N. Y. Suppl. 419. But the delay may be excused by the fact that the law is unsettled by reason of conflicting judicial decisions, and that litigation which will result in settling the law is pending by others. People v. Lantry, 48 N. Y. App. Div. 131, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 630 [reversing 27 Misc. 160, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 770]; People v. Scannell, 27 Misc. (N. Y.) 662, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 679.

The pendency of an appeal by a party to a suit may excuse his delay in applying for mandamus in regard to the subject-matter of the appeal. Cahill v. San Francisco Super. Ct., 145 Cal. 42, 78 Pac. 467; In re Hohorst, 150 U. S. 653, 654, 14 S. Ct. 221, 37 L. ed. 1211. And see People v. Dalton, 52 N. Y. App. Div. 371, 65 N. Y. Suppl. 342.

The prosecution of other proceedings to obtain his rights may excuse relator's delay in applying for mandamus. Duke v. Turner, 204 U. S. 623, 27 S. Ct. 316, 51 L. ed. —. And see Hill v. Fitzgerald, (Mass. 1907) 79 N. E. 825; State v. Smith, 172 Mo. 618, 73 S. W. 134. See, however, State v. Gibson, 187 Mo. 536, 86 S. W. 177; People v. New York Bd. of Education, 20 N. Y. App. Div. 452, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 782 [affirmed in 158 directly to mandamus proceedings it is common to apply them by analogy; and while it is difficult to lay down any fixed rule as to the time when the writ will be barred, it may be said in a general way that it must be brought within the period fixed for that particular form of civil action or proceeding which may be brought to enforce the right which is the subject of the writ;¹¹ and on the other hand that mandamus may be instituted at any time within that period.¹²

C. Parties — 1. APPLICANTS, PETITIONERS, OR RELATORS — a. In General. One member of a public board may in an otherwise proper case institute proceedings against the other members to compel them to perform their duties.¹³ Ordinarily one person cannot by mandamus enforce the private right of another,¹⁴ unless he sues in a representative capacity;¹⁵ and in this latter event the proceeding should be instituted in the name or on the relation of the real party in interest.¹⁶ A N. Y. 125, 52 N. E. 722], holding that the persistent prosecution of fruitless proceedings in defiance of decisions of the courts is no excuse for the delay.

Reasonableness of delay see supra, note 8.

11. California.—Bates v. Gregory, (1889) 22 Pac. 683, no writ for refunding bonds after original bonds barred.

Illinois.—People v. Oran, 121 Ill. 650, 13 N. E. 726 [affirming 19 Ill. App. 174]. And see People v. Finley, 97 Ill. App. 214.

Michigan.—Wilkinson v. Auditor-Gen., (1907) 110 N. W. 123; McRae v. Auditor-Gen. (1906) 109 N. W. 1122; Avery v. Krakow Tp. Bd., 73 Mich. 622, 41 N. W. 818.

Montana.—Territory v. Potts, 3 Mont. 364.

New York.—People v. Chapin, 104 N. Y. 96, 10 N. E. 141; People v. Preston, 62 Hun 185, 16 N. Y. Suppl. 488 [affirmed in 131 N. Y. 644, 30 N. E. 866] (demand necessary within time when analogous suit must be brought); People v. French, 12 Abb. N. Cas. 156. It has been held that the four months' limitation applicable to writs of certiorari will be applied. People v. Greene, 87 N. Y. App. Div. 346, 84 N. Y. Suppl. 565. And see People v. Lantry, 48 N. Y. App. Div. 131, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 630 [reversing 27 Misc. 160, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 770]. However, the four months' limitation prescribed by the Rev. Charter, § 302 (Laws (1901), c. 466) for proceedings for reinstatement on the police force, does not apply to mandamus instituted to secure a position as detective sergeant, to which a police officer claims to be entitled. People v. Greene, supra. And Laws (1903), c. 482, § 6, constituting part of the charter of a city, limiting the time for commencement of "all proceedings" to vacate or reduce assessments to one year has no application to mandamus proceedings to compel the proper officials to do the formal act of canceling on the books an assessment which has been adjudged void and vacated in a suit brought for that purpose. People v. Brush, 115 N. Y. App. Div. 688, 101 N. Y. Suppl. 312.

Ohio.—State v. Cincinnati School Dist. Bd. of Education, 4 Ohio Cir. Ct. 97, 2 Ohio Cir. Dec. 441.

Oklahoma.—Beadles v. Smyser, (1906) 87 Pac. 292; Beadles v. Fry, 15 Okla. 428, 82 Pac. 1041, 2 L. R. A. N. S. 855, both holding that no writ will issue to compel payment of a judgment after the right to issue execution or revive the judgment has expired.

South Carolina.—Milster v. Spartanburg, 68 S. C. 26, 46 S. E. 539.

United States.—McAleer v. Clay County, 42 Fed. 665; U. S. v. Oswego Tp., 28 Fed. 55, both holding that a writ will not issue to compel a tax to pay a judgment after the power to issue an execution has expired. In Amy v. Galena, 7 Fed. 163, 10 Biss. 263, however, the contrary is held.

England.—Rex v. Agarsdley, 5 Dowl. P. C. 19. See, however, Ward v. Lowndes, 5 Jur. N. S. 1124, 28 L. J. Q. B. 265, 7 Wkly. Rep. 489.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 284.

12. Wilkinson v. Cheatham, 43 Ga. 258; Hanna v. Chalker, 136 Mich. 8, 98 N. W. 732 (holding that mandamus to compel the issuance of county orders on a claim allowed by the county board will not be refused on the ground of laches, the statute not having run against the claim); People v. Westchester County, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 446. And see Harwood v. Brownell, 48 Iowa 657.

This is not always so.—Laches may exist although a less time than the statutory period has elapsed. See cases cited supra, note 8.

14. People v. Morgan, 97 N. Y. App. Div. 267, 89 N. Y. Suppl. 832 (holding that a taxpayer cannot compel the payment of damages awarded others for laying out a highway); People v. New York, 20 Misc. (N. Y.) 189, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 900. And see U. S. v. Chandler, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 527.

Necessity of clear legal right in petitioner see supra, II, B, 1.

15. Tyler v. Houghton, 25 Cal. 26, holding that the trustee of an express trust may as such institute the proceeding.

Proceeding in behalf of infant.—A proceeding to compel the admission of a child to a public school may as a rule be instituted by the father (see infra, IX, C, 1, e, (II), note 50), without the appointment of a guardian ad litem (People v. Detroit Bd. of Education, 18 Mich. 400); but in some cases the proceeding is properly brought on the relation of the child by his next friend (Weir v. State, 161 Ind. 435, 68 N. E. 1023).

16. People v. Busti Town Canvassers, 32 proceeding in the name of a public or private corporation as relator cannot be maintained unless the corporation has authorized the proceeding.¹⁷

b. The State — (i) AS INTERESTED PARTY. An application in behalf of the state must be made in the name of the state;¹⁸ and the same is true where the right or duty sought to be enforced affects the state in its sovereign capacity as distinguished from the public generally.¹⁹

(ii) AS FORMAL PARTY.²⁰ Although the state is not interested in its sovereign capacity, yet where the right or duty sought to be enforced is a public one, the weight of authority is to the effect that the proceeding should be instituted in its name,²¹ on relation of the party applying for the writ.²² Nevertheless in some jurisdictions the state need not be made a formal party in such a case.²³ Even where the right or duty in question is a private one, it is the common practice to institute the proceeding in the name of the state,²⁴ on relation of the

Misc. (N. Y.) 123, 66 N. Y. Suppl. 199 (holding that a stock-holder in a corporation who acts as agent for the corporation cannot apply for a writ in his individual name and without making the corporation a party); Com. v. Wilkes-Barre Gas Co., 6 Kulp (Pa.) 328 (holding that an agent cannot proceed in his own name). See, however, Tyler v. Houghton, 25 Cal. 26, holding that the trustee of an express trust may apply for the writ without joining the beneficiary.

Necessity of naming state as formal party see infra, IX, C, 1, b, (ii).

17. People v. Blackhurst, 60 Hun (N. Y.) 63, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 114 (holding that a committee of a private corporation whose functions have expired cannot institute the proceeding on relation of the corporation); State v. Sauk Co., 70 Wis. 485, 36 N. W. 396 (holding that a writ issued on the relation of a town should be quashed unless it appears that the applicant was directed by the electors of the town to make the application). See, however, People v. Kingston, 101 N. Y. 82, 4 N. E. 348, holding that where a public board passed a resolution authorizing the employment of counsel named "in all matters in litigation" growing out of a certain matter, and authorizing him "to take all necessary and proper proceedings in the name of the board," and subsequently a committee of its members was appointed with full power to do all things necessary in the litigation, authority was conferred to institute mandamus in regard to such matters.

Implied authority.—Where township bonds voted in aid of a railway company have been contracted to be paid by the company to another in part payment for work done, such other person has implied authority to use the name of the company as relator in a proceeding against the town to compel the issuing of the bonds. People v. Barnett, 91 Ill. 422.

c. Municipal Corporations.³¹ A municipal corporation, whatsoever its nature, may institute mandamus proceedings to enforce its rights in a proper case.³²

d. Public Officers — (i) STATE OFFICERS — (A) Generally. State officers may bring mandamus to compel the performance of official duties falling under their supervision or the performance of which is necessary to enable them to perform their own duties.³³

(B) Attorney-General. Where the question is one of public right affecting the jurisdiction, franchises, or prerogatives of the state at large, the interests of public justice, or the right of liberty of the people, the proceeding may be instituted by the attorney-general.³⁴

30. State v. Carey, 2 N. D. 36, 49 N. W. 164. Contra, Territory v. Potts, 3 Mont. 364.

31. Right of particular municipal boards, commissions, and officers to institute proceeding see infra, IX, C, 1, d, (ii), (iii).

32. California.—People v. Alameda County, 26 Cal. 641, mandamus by one county to another to compel the levy of a tax for its benefit.

Illinois.—People v. Upham, 221 Ill. 555, 77 N. E. 931.

Kansas.—State v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 33 Kan. 176, 5 Pac. 772, semble, mandamus to compel railroad company to build viaduct over tracks at street crossings.

Maine.—Brunswick v. Bath, 90 Me. 479, 38 Atl. 532, mandamus by town against city to compel it to repair a common bridge.

New Jersey.—Bridgeton v. Bridgeton, etc., Traction Co., 62 N. J. L. 592, 43 Atl. 715, 45 L. R. A. 837, mandamus by city to enforce street railroad duty.

New York.—People v. Northern Cent. R. Co., 164 N. Y. 289, 58 N. E. 138; People v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 103 N. Y. 95, 8 N. E. 369, semble, mandamus to compel railroad company to erect and maintain station.

Ohio.—State v. Craig, 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 13, 11 Ohio Cir. Dec. 348, mandamus by village to compel the levy of a tax by county.

Texas.—Elser v. Ft. Worth, (Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 739, mandamus to compel city treasurer to pay warrants issued to purchase bonds not to be delivered until the money is paid on the warrants.

Washington.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Territory, 3 Wash. Terr. 303, 13 Pac. 604 [reversed on other grounds in 142 U. S. 492, 12 S. Ct. 283, 35 L. ed. 1092].

If the municipality has no beneficial interest in the action sought to be enforced, the writ will not issue at its instance. Bangor v. Penobscot County Com'rs, 87 Me. 294, 32 Atl. 903, holding that a city cannot compel a county to pay fees due city officers.

The legality of the organization of a municipality cannot be attacked in a mandamus proceeding instituted by it (How v. State, 89 Ind. 249; School Dist. No. 115 v. School Dist. No. 54, 34 Oreg. 97, 55 Pac. 98) or against its officers (Alderton v. Binder, 81 Mich. 133, 45 N. W. 968). And see MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

33. State v. Hamilton, 5 Ind. 310 (holding that the state auditor is a proper relator in proceedings to compel a railroad company to furnish a list of stock for taxation); State v. Holcomb, 46 Nebr. 612, 65 N. W. 873 (warden of penitentiary); Harris v. State, 96 Tenn. 496, 34 S. W. 1017 (state board of examiners of assessments of the distributable property of railroad); State v. Graybeal, (W. Va. 1906) 55 S. E. 398 (holding that the state tax commissioner may bring mandamus to compel an assessment of taxes).

The governor may bring mandamus to compel the sealing of the commission of a United States senator (State v. Crawford, 28 Fla. 441, 10 So. 118, 14 L. R. A. 253), and, when specially authorized, to compel performance of an official duty (Russell v. Ayer, 120 N. C. 180, 27 S. E. 133, 37 L. R. A. 246).

34. Alabama.—Ex p. State, 113 Ala. 85, 21 So. 210, mandamus to correct errors in criminal case.

California.—People v. Budd, (1897) 47 Pac. 594, semble.

Connecticut.—State v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 29 Conn. 538, mandamus to compel a railroad to operate its road.

Delaware.—State v. Wilmington Bridge Co., 3 Harr. 312, mandamus to compel performance of any public duty.

Florida.—State v. Johnson, 30 Fla. 433, 11 So. 845, 18 L. R. A. 410, mandamus to compel suspended officer to deliver up office.

Kansas.—State v. Hamilton County Com'rs, 35 Kan. 640, 11 Pac. 902 (mandamus to compel county commissioners to hold their offices at the county-seat); State v. McLaughlin, 15 Kan. 228, 22 Am. Rep. 264; Bobbett v. State, 10 Kan. 9 (the last two cases involving a public duty).

Louisiana.—See State v. Dubuclet, 27 La. Ann. 29.

Maine.—Weeks v. Smith, 81 Me. 538, 18 Atl. 325, mandamus to enforce public right.

Massachusetts.—Atty-Gen. v. Old Colony R. Co., 160 Mass. 62, 35 N. E. 252, 22 L. R. A. 112 (mandamus to compel railroad to redeem and accept its own tickets); Atty-Gen. v. Boston, 123 Mass. 460.

Michigan.—People v. Green, 29 Mich. 121.

Nebraska.—West Point Water Power, etc., Co. v. State, 49 Nebr. 218, 66 N. W. 6, mandamus to remedy public wrong. See also State v. Fremont, etc., R. Co., 22 Nebr. 313, 35 N. W. 118.

(II) COUNTY OFFICERS — (A) Generally. County officers may bring mandamus to compel the performance of duties over which they have supervision or the performance of which is necessary to the performance of their own duties.³⁵

(B) County Attorney. The district or county attorney is the proper officer to bring mandamus to compel the performance of duties affecting the people of the county and the administration of justice therein.³⁶

New York.—People v. State Bd. of Censors, 129 N. Y. 360, 29 N. E. 345, 14 L. R. A. 646.

North Dakota.—State v. Carey, 2 N. D. 36, 49 N. W. 164, holding that where the remedy concerns the state as such, the writ should be applied for by the attorney-general, or if not by him, the application should at least have his assent.

Ohio.—State v. Preble County, 6 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 268, 4 Ohio N. P. 177, mandamus to compel filing of financial reports by county commissioners.

However, an application for a writ of mandate to compel the performance of some act in which a large number of individuals are interested, which is made in the name of the people and is not signed by the attorney-general but by an attorney of the relator, will not be dismissed because not made in the name of someone interested, if the attorney-general unites in the brief in support of the application. People v. San Francisco, 36 Cal. 595.

Mandamus proceedings in the supreme court should be instituted by the attorney-general or with his consent, or his refusal to act or to consent be shown. People v. Pacheco, 29 Cal. 210; Wheeler v. Northern Colorado Irr. Co., 9 Colo. 248, 11 Pac. 103. And see Ex p. State, 113 Ala. 85, 21 So. 210; People v. Green, 29 Mich. 121.

The attorney-general has no standing to institute mandamus to compel a criminal examination of a city police justice where the alleged crime does not affect the public interest but is one against individual property interests (People v. Police Justice, 41 Mich. 224, 2 N. W. 25); nor to compel municipal officers to repay moneys into the city treasury (Atty-Gen. v. Detroit, 107 Mich. 92, 64 N. W. 1057); nor to compel a railroad company to erect and maintain a station in a town pursuant to a contract between the company and the town, since a writ applied for by the attorney-general in behalf of the people may be issued only to subserve a public interest and to protect a public right (People v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 103 N. Y. 95, 8 N. E. 369). And see Com. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 138 Pa. St. 58, 20 Atl. 951. Nor can the attorney-general institute proceedings to determine who are entitled to vote at elections for trustees or at other corporate meetings of the stock-holders of a private stock corporation. Atty-Gen. v. Albion Academy, etc., 52 Wis. 469, 9 N. W. 391.

Special counsel for the state railroad commissioners may by statute in Florida institute the proceeding when so directed by the commissioners. State v. Jacksonville Terminal Co., 41 Fla. 377, 27 So. 225.

35. Florida.—State v. Croom, 48 Fla. 176, 37 So. 303 (mandamus by circuit court clerk to state controller to compel payment of funds for witnesses and jurors); Holland v. State, 23 Fla. 123, 1 So. 521 (mandamus by county board to compel sheriff to furnish convict labor).

Georgia.—Polk v. James, 68 Ga. 128 (mandamus by county road officers to compel purchase of county site); Manor v. McCall, 5 Ga. 522 (mandamus by court-house commissioners to compel levy of tax).

Indiana.—Wolfe v. State, 90 Ind. 16, mandamus by county treasurer to compel payment of county funds by state.

New York.—People v. Kingston, 101 N. Y. 82, 4 N. E. 348, county supervisors.

Texas.—Jernigan v. Finley, 90 Tex. 205, 38 S. W. 24, mandamus by county treasurer to compel state controller to issue warrant for county funds.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 288.

Mandamus does not lie at the instance of a clerk of one of the district courts of the parish of Orleans to regulate the jurisdiction of the several courts of the parish (State v. Walton, 24 La. Ann. 115); at the instance of a justice of the peace to compel the admission of another justice to a town board, where he has no right to act thereon (Gron-din v. Logan, 88 Mich. 247, 50 N. W. 130); at the instance of a health board against a county to compel payment to individuals of debts incurred by the board (People v. Monroe County, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 567); at the instance of a county board to compel a turnpike company to repair its bridge (State v. Zanesville, etc., Turnpike Road Co., 16 Ohio St. 308); or at the instance of a justice of the peace to compel payment of town orders due to third persons (Cook v. Peacham, 50 Vt. 231).

36. Alabama.—Benners v. State, 124 Ala. 97, 26 So. 942, mandamus to compel justice to issue warrant of arrest.

Connecticut.—Doolittle v. Branford, 59 Conn. 402, 22 Atl. 336; State v. Fyler, 48 Conn. 145; State v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 29 Conn. 538.

Kansas.—State v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 33 Kan. 176, 5 Pac. 772; State v. Faulkner, 20 Kan. 541 (mandamus to compel performance of duty by officer of city in county); Bobbett v. State, 10 Kan. 9.

Michigan.—People v. Swift, 59 Mich. 529, 26 N. W. 694, mandamus to compel inferior court to try a criminal case.

(III) OTHER MUNICIPAL OFFICERS. The rules governing the right of state³⁷ and county³⁸ officers generally to institute mandamus proceedings are likewise applicable to municipal officers in general.³⁹

New York.—People v. State Bd. of Canners, 129 N. Y. 360, 29 N. E. 345, 14 L. R. A. 646. And see People v. Tracy, 1 Den. 617.

North Carolina.—Mott v. Forsyth County, 126 N. C. 866, 36 S. E. 330, mandamus by solicitor of superior court to compel county commissioners to draw a grand jury.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. Marshall, 3 Wkly. Notes Cas. 182, mandamus to compel erection of court-house.

Washington.—State v. Yakima County Super. Ct., 4 Wash. 30, 29 Pac. 764.

United States.—Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Washington Terr., 142 U. S. 492, 12 S. Ct. 283, 35 L. ed. 1092 [reversing 3 Wash. Terr. 303, 13 Pac. 604], mandamus to compel railroad to erect and maintain station.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 288.

However, an application by the state to the supreme court for a mandamus to a trial court in the body of which the state is not named as a party and which is signed by the solicitor for the county in which the cause is tried is not properly made and will be dismissed. Ex p. State, 113 Ala. 85, 21 So. 210.

Whether a deputy solicitor of a county has authority to institute mandamus proceedings in the name of the state in a criminal case admits of grave doubt. Shields v. State, 86 Ala. 584, 6 So. 271.

37. See supra, IX, C, 1, d, (I), (A).

38. See supra, IX, C, 1, d, (II), (A).

39. See cases cited infra, this note.

City officers may institute mandamus proceedings. People v. Kilduff, 15 Ill. 492, 60 Am. Dec. 769 (mandamus by mayor to secure the books of his office); Webster v. Wheeler, 119 Mich. 601, 78 N. W. 657 (mandamus by city collector to secure return of tax moneys paid by him by mistake); People v. Kent County, 38 Mich. 421 (city attorney); Hugg v. Camden, 39 N. J. L. 620 (mandamus by city attorney to compel council to sell land for taxes); Monongahela v. Monongahela Electric Light Co., 3 Pa. Dist. 63, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 529 (mandamus by street committee to compel change of light poles); South St. Bridge Com'rs v. Philadelphia, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 596, 7 Phila. 298 (mandamus by bridge commissioners to enforce payment of expenses); Com. v. Olyphant, 2 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 234 (mandamus by burgess to compel council to perform duty); Com. v. Bullock, 2 Montg. Co. Rep. (Pa.) 5 (mandamus by council against mayor to compel signing of ordinance). However, a mayor authorized to certify a vacancy in the office of dispenser cannot bring mandamus to compel the probate judge to call a meeting of the county commissioners to furnish names for a successor to the office (Rose v. Lampley, (Ala. 1906) 41 So. 521); and a city police justice has no authority to proceed against the county supervisors to compel them to audit and allow to the city the fees charged by the Police Act upon the county in cases tried before him (People v. Kent County, supra); nor can bridge commissioners sue to enforce payment of interest on bonds issued to build the bridge (South St. Com'rs v. Philadelphia, supra). And a metropolitan district board of works, as the local sanitary authority, have no specific legal interest entitling them to a mandamus directing the local board of guardians to enforce the provisions of the Vaccination Acts. Reg. v. Lewisham Union, [1897] 1 Q. B. 498, 61 J. P. 151, 66 L. J. Q. B. 403, 76 L. T. Rep. N. S. 324, 45 Wkly. Rep. 346. And see Com. v. Olyphant, 2 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 234; Reg. v. Gore Dist. Council, 5 U. C. Q. B. 357.

School officers may sue out a writ of mandamus.—State v. White, 116 Ala. 202, 23 So. 31 (mandamus by school treasurer); How v. State, 89 Ind. 249 (mandamus by school trustees to compel payment of money apportioned to a school township); Hooper v. Farnen, 85 Md. 587, 37 Atl. 430 (mandamus by one school-board against another for possession of apartments and books and papers); State v. Bronson, 115 Mo. 271, 21 S. W. 1125 (mandamus by president of school-book commission to secure use of text-books); State v. Wallichs, 13 Nebr. 278, 13 N. W. 627. However, mandamus will not lie by two members of a board of school directors against a third to compel him to sign warrants in payment of teachers' salaries, since they have no beneficial interest in the subject of litigation. State v. James, 14 Wash. 82, 44 Pac. 116.

Township officers may sue out the writ. Cole v. State, 131 Ind. 591, 31 N. E. 458 (mandamus by town trustee to compel auditor to assess school tax); Pearsons v. Randlett, 110 Mass. 118 (mandamus by the board of water commissioners of a town to compel the town treasurer to deliver water bonds to the board); Com. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 138 Pa. St. 58, 20 Atl. 951 [affirming 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 407] (mandamus by road officers to compel railroad company to restore highway); Whitemarsh Tp. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 365 (mandamus by town supervisors to compel railroad to build highway); Walter v. Belding, 24 Vt. 658 (mandamus by town-clerk to secure records). However, a committee appointed by a town to audit the accounts of the overseers of the poor, and to demand and receive from them town books of account held by the overseers in their official capacity have no such property in the books as will authorize them to apply in their own names for a mandamus to compel the surrender of the books. Bates v. Plymouth, 14 Gray (Mass.) 163. And selectmen cannot bring mandamus against the town treasurer to compel to pay an order drawn by them on him for a town debt. Lexington v. Mulliken, 7

e. Right of Private Individual or Corporation to Enforce Public Right or Duty — (1) GENERAL RULES. The authorities are not in harmony as to the right of an individual to enforce a public right or to compel the performance of a public duty by mandamus. In some jurisdictions the proceedings must be instituted by the proper public officer, and a private individual is not entitled to the writ unless he has a special and peculiar interest in the enforcement of the right or the performance of the duty apart from his interest as one of the general public.⁴⁰ In other jurisdictions, on the other hand, if the public right or duty affects the people at large or the people of a particular governmental district, or a particular class of the people, such as voters or taxpayers, any one of the people at large or of the district affected, or any member of the class in question, may enforce the right or compel performance of the duty regardless of any special or peculiar Gray (Mass.) 280. Nor can a town council compel the town treasurer to pay orders issued by it in favor of one who has furnished material to the town. Portland Stone Ware Co. v. Taylor, 17 R. I. 33, 19 Atl. 1086. The fact that a proceeding in the name of a town is brought by the town agent instead of the town clerk is not a fatal irregularity. Walter v. Belding, supra.

40. Connecticut.—Atwood v. Partree, 56 Conn. 80, 14 Atl. 85; Peck v. Booth, 42 Conn. 271; Lyon v. Rice, 41 Conn. 245. See, however, State v. Fyler, 48 Conn. 145.

Iowa.—Moore v. Cort, 43 Iowa 503; Welch v. Mahaska County, 23 Iowa 199. And see Boardman v. Marshalltown Grocery Co., 105 Iowa 445, 75 N. W. 343; State v. Davis County Judge, 2 Iowa 280. See, however, Hancock v. Perry Dist. Tp., 78 Iowa 550, 43 N. W. 527; Hightower v. Overhauser, 65 Iowa 347, 21 N. W. 671; State v. Bailey, 7 Iowa 390; State v. Marshall County Judge, 7 Iowa 186.

Kansas.—Adkins v. Doolen, 23 Kan. 659; Reedy v. Eagle, 23 Kan. 254; Turner v. Jefferson County, 10 Kan. 16; Bobbett v. State, 10 Kan. 9. See, however, Carey Salt Co. v. Hutchinson, 72 Kan. 99, 82 Pac. 721.

Louisiana.—State v. Walton, 24 La. Ann. 115. And see State v. Dubuclet, 28 La. Ann. 85. See, however, Watts v. Carroll Police Jury, 11 La. Ann. 141.

Maine.—Robbins v. Bangor R., etc., Co., 100 Me. 496, 62 Atl. 136, 1 L. R. A. N. S. 963; Weeks v. Smith, 81 Me. 538, 18 Atl. 325; Mitchell v. Boardman, 79 Me. 469, 10 Atl. 452; Sanger v. Kennebec County, 25 Me. 291.
